Many Faint in Crush

Washington gave Franklin D. Roosevelt a gay and glamorous birthday festival last night, and before a glittering delegation from Hollywood, 41,000 of its citizens poured a golden stream of hope into lives darkened by disease.

The throng was the largest and gayest in the history of birthday balls in the Capital. Five hotels were packed to the point where dancing became impossible. In one hotel—the Mayflower—Chief of Police Ernest W. Brown ordered hundreds turned away when the crowd there reached an estimated 13,000.

An estimated 35,000 went to the hotels, where scores fainted in the crush. Midnight shows at the Earle and Capitol theaters, where all the movie stars made personal appearances, drew a total of nearly 6,000 persons.

As it was in the Capital, so it was throughout the Nation. Everywhere ordinary citizens, celebrities of stage and screen and champion athletes shared a symphony of movement along a single theme—aid for America's fight on infantile paralysis.

In a paradoxical battle against the disease that once struck the President and in behalf of the fight to which he has dedicated every birthday since he came to the White House, more than a million Americans waltzed, tangoed and hit the groove.

High in the California Sierras, the movement developed a flashing tempo in a skiing carnival on an illuminated slide at Crestview.

President Thanks Nation

In Washington, the magazine-cover girl from Virginia, Kay Aldridge, took off her shoes at a District Building reception, Commissioner Hazen broke with time-honored tradition by refraining from kissing the Hollywood beauties, President Roosevelt's charm outshone filmdom's glamour and the celebrities exhausted themselves in a dusk-to-dawn rush of personal appearances.

Bethlehem Steel Net Profit Jumps

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, largest producer of ships under the national defense program, yesterday reported net profit of $48,677,524 for 1940. This was equal to $14.04 a common share, against $5.75 a share earnings in the previous year.

Earnings, backlog, employment and pay rolls all were at new record levels for the country's second largest maker of steel.

Two More Arrested by FBI In Removal of Defense Files

Expanding their investigation, Federal agents yesterday arrested two more men in connection with the case involving the removal of some 20,000 confidential national defense records from Government files.

Seized as he left his home at 427 Tenth Street Northwest late yesterday was Wallace Haynes, 26, brother of Lawrence Haynes, who was arrested on January 26 with Harlan W. Crandall, 29, of 45 Todd Place Northeast, a Civil Service Commission employe.

U. S. marshals, who took Haynes to police headquarters for finger-printing after he had been grilled by G-men at the Justice Department, said he had admitted driving the automobile in which the documents were transported to the offices of the Standard Business Service, a concern that sold mailing lists to industrial firms.

Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, young Haynes was held in lieu of $500

U. S. Indicts Nazi-Ruled Metal Cartel

Six Firms Accused Of Plot to Curb Magnesium Output, Vital to Defense

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The Justice Department struck yesterday at what it called "startling evidence of German influence" on national defense industries by obtaining indictments in New York Federal District Court against six corporations and nine individuals for allegedly combining to stifle production of magnesium, a vital defense metal.

American companies, including the Aluminum Co. of America, were claimed to have conspired with I. G. Farben Industrie, a German corporation, to control production and prices of the light metal.

The result of the actions, it was said, was to hamper output of war planes.

Arthur Davis Named

Alcoa, I. G. Farben Industrie, Dow Chemical Co., American Magnesium Corporation, Magnesium Development Co. and General Aniline and Film Co.

The persons named as defendants were:

Arthur V. Davis, chairman of the board and director of Alcoa; Roy A. Hunt, president and director of Alcoa; Irving W. Wilson, Alcoa vice president and president of American Magnesium Corporation; Wilfred D. Keith, director of Magnesium Development Corporation, patent official of Alcoa; Karl Hochswender, president and director of Magnesium Development Corporation; Willard H. Dow, president and director of Dow Chemical Co.; Earl W. Bennett, vice president, secretary and treasurer and director of the Dow Co.; Herman Schmitz, member of the managing board of I. G. Farben; Gustav Pistor, of I. G. Farben.

Wilson last night issued a statement in which he said:

"The officers of the American Magnesium Corporation and the Aluminum Co. of America are conscious of no violation of the anti-trust laws of the United States and confidently believe that a full presentation of both sides of this matter will reveal that there has been no wrongdoing whatsoever, but on the contrary that these companies have contributed greatly to the development of the magnesium business in this country."

Foreign Curb on Production

The indictment recited a list of charges which the Justice Department said were being brought "to destroy unlawful foreign restrictions on the domestic production of magnesium for defense purposes."

The American firms conspired together with the German firm, the Justice Department charged, with the result that:

"There are inadequate facilities in the present period of national defense for the production of magnesium."

Ford Denied Huge Army Truck Order

Refusal to Agree To Labor Policy Clause Costs Him $10,298,128 Job

Henry Ford last night was refused a War Department contract in an action that apparently ruled out further extensive participation by Ford in defense production.

The War Department announced that, while the Ford Motor Co. had submitted the lowest bid, a $10,298,128 contract for 11,781 Army trucks had been awarded to the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Detroit, because the Ford company refused to accept labor policy clauses inserted by the Government.

Immediately the Ford company, through I. A. Capizzi, counsel, declared it would continue to enter "the same objections" on any further proposals, and it attacked the labor "restrictions" as "arbitrary" and not intended by Congress.

Victory for Hillman

The War Department action was regarded as a victory for Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management and labor representative in the defense setup. He has sought for several months to have contracts withheld from Ford until the company agrees to comply with labor statutes.

Last fall Hillman unsuccessfully attempted to prevent award of a $2,000,000 contract to Ford for midget trucks.

Hillman also protested after a $122,000,000 plane engine contract had been granted the company.

The War Department's announcement said that invitations to bid on the truck contract had been extended to 153 prospective bidders, including Ford and Fargo. The invitations noted that the bids must be subject to "provisions of procurement circular No. 43."

That circular was a statement signed by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff. It provides that contractors for Army materials must comply with the labor policy statement adopted by the Defense Commission last fall and approved by the President. It called for compliance with all Federal and State labor laws.

"The Ford Motor Co., tonight's announcement said, "excepted to the labor clauses in the invitation to bid, prescribed by Circular No. 43, and thus in effect submitted a counteroffer.

Refuses to Recognize Unions

"The Ford bid was lowest, but inasmuch as it was not in accordance with the original proposal, the award was made to the Fargo Corporation, the lowest bidder complying with terms of the invitation to bid."

The contract covers ½-ton trucks, command-reconnaisance cars, radio trucks, ambulances, "carry-alls" and pickup trucks.

Ford has consistently refused to recognize unions as representing his workers, and has been a target of many drives of labor organizations.

Yesterday the Government asked the Supreme Court to refuse to review a lower court decision on a Labor Board order holding Ford guilty of unfair labor prac-

School Without a School Building

Institution in Laurel Only One Officials Point to With Pride

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This the fifth of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest

The District Training School at Laurel, Md., is the only institution to which welfare officials point with pride.

Only 16 years old, its buildings are comparatively new. A hospital, constructed and equipped by means of a $260,000 PWA grant, has been opened within the last year. A model in both construction and equipment, it is the equal of any private hospital in Washington.

The oddity of this otherwise impressive plant, situated on 1,000 acres, is that it is without a school building, though its chief object is to provide instruction for more than 600 feeble-minded inmates, chiefly children.

Instruction, both academic and vocational, is given in basements of the dormitories. Likewise, the only assembly hall is a dingy and cramped section of one of the basements.

The greatest need of the school is more dormitory space and school buildings. There are 450 known cases of mental defectives which are barred from the institution because of lack of beds and rooms. Many more are suffering mental deterioration in their homes because the school is too crowded even to place them on the waiting list.

Yet, unlike most of the other welfare institutions, progress is being made in the provision of more quarters. Two dormitories are under construction and a third one is provided in the 1942 budget estimates. These will care for 162 of the 450.

The District Training School is the only major welfare institution not inspected by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Yet both Congress and the Commissioners have been comparatively liberal in their treatment of it. To Dr. James Lewald, the able superintendent, is due much of the credit.

The fact that the treatment and training of feeble-minded persons

Hitler Warns His Submarines Will Torpedo Aid to Britain

Fuehrer Forecasts Great U-Boat Drive in Spring

By Alvin J. Steinkopf,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler declared today that American help would be of no avail to Britain and that every ship approaching England within the range of German torpedoes would be attacked.

As to British hopes of help from America, he went on:

"I can only say this: We have from the beginning put every possibility into our calculations. That the German people have no quarrel with the American people is clear to everybody who doesn't want consciously to twist the facts and claim its opposite.

"Never yet has Germany sponsored interests on the American continent except that it helped to fight for the liberty of this continent.

"If the states of this continent, however, now attempt possibly to interfere with the European conflict, then the war aims will change even faster. Then all Europe will rise in its own defense.

Truce Ends A. F. L. Strike At Wright Field

Electrical Project Suspended Pending An Investigation

By International News Service

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 30.—A truce was reached tonight in the strike which had tied up $1,500,000 worth of construction projects at the United States Army's Wright Field in Dayton.

John E. Breidenbach, business agent for the A. F. L. Dayton Building Trades Council, announced he had ordered 500 of his men back to work tomorrow morning as a result of War Department orders from Washington removing the Penner Construction Co. from the job pending a decision as to its status.

The strike was called yesterday by Breidenbach because of the employment of four non-A. F. L. men by the Penner company to install machinery in the dynamometer building.

Breidenbach said that with the removal of the Penner employes from the job he was willing for the A. F. L. workers to return, but that the strike was not definitely settled until a final determination had been made by Washington officials.

Bluejackets Fit Out Boats at Struck Yard

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 30.—Thirty Navy bluejackets continued certain activities at the Martinolich Boat Co., today after a labor dispute halted work on five boats for the Navy.

The Navy working party was supplemented by caretaker crews of three tuna boats being converted into minesweepers. The men concentrated on fitting out one sweeper scheduled to start trial runs within a few days. They made no effort to operate other yard facilities.

Admiral Charles Blakely, said the presence of the Navy men had no effect on the contractural work.

"We had had men on the boats right along fitting them for duty," he said. "We planned to take one away Saturday for certain experiments. The men merely are getting them ready, and their presence in no way can interfere with the strike."

Third Bastion Falls

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 30.—The third major Italian bastion to fall in Libya—Derna, 175 miles west of the Egyptian frontier—was occupied today by British Imperial troops after four days of the most bitter resistance offered by the Fascists in the whole of the African campaign.

The town had been defended by fewer than 10,000 Italians, British sources disclosed, but they fought with a violence encountered nowhere else in Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's long continued thrust to the west.

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press war correspondent, reported that two Italian prisoners insisted that General Annibale ("Electric Whiskers") Bergonzoli, whom the British have called a fugitive, was in command of the defense of Derna, and had been commissioned to organize a new line behind it in a final attempt to halt the British drive and save Bengasi, 150 miles to the west.

Meanwhile the conquering British consolidated their position in Derna as mechanized units struck on toward Bengasi.

The battle for Derna was no set piece, was in no stereotyped pattern as previous British victories had been.

The town was never wholly surrounded and from the first day of the general attack, when British armored forces racing from Tobruk had reached Derna's outskirts, the Italians resisted strongly.

The initial clash of tanks went in British favor, but the Italians retired behind ridges outside the

Reply to Hitler

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Foreign Affairs Committee last night in a 6,000-word report recommended swift passage of House bill 1776 to lend, lease or give arms to the British.

In the teeth of Hitler's warning against aid to Britain, the committee filed its answer—a 17 to 8 vote for the bill.

Then it reported to the House that prompt enactment "is of the highest importance to the vital interest of our country and even of our civilization."

The committee said the bill supports a two-fold national policy to keep out of war and "for our own national security to aid Britain and those other nations whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States."

Four Amendments

With only four minor amendments—those conceded by the Administration—the bill will move before the House Rules Committee today and into House debate Monday.

Chairman Bloom and his committee majority reported that the bill will aid Britain "as efficiently as possible with defense articles in a manner consistent with our democratic procedure."

Submitting a detailed interpretation of each section, the report said the bill "squarely meets" both antiwar and security objectives "in a manner that is best for our national defense and wholly consistent with the Constitution and international law."

Three Republicans voted with 14 Democrats to report the measure. Only one Democrat joined seven Republicans in a minority "No".

House Majority Whip Boland predicted House passage of the bill next week in substantially the form reported by committee. So certain

Sub Reported Off Newfoundland

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—The British freighter Sheaf Crown, out of Baltimore for England, radioed tonight that she had sighted a "suspicious submarine" approximately 60 miles east of St. John's, Newfoundland.

The call was the first indication that Axis submarines might be operating in this area at the northern end of the Grand Banks and outside the Pan-American neutrality belt.

St. John's is the site of one of the naval bases leased by the United States from the British.

House Group Reports Bill To Aid Britain

is the margin for the bill, Boland said, that no special vote survey is needed.

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., flatly opposed the bill in its present form and called a conference of House Republicans today to discuss it. Martin said he favored aiding England and a credit of $2,000,000,000 for British war purchases. He said he opposed blanket powers for the President to administer the act.

Every effort in committee to modify the bill, other than the four minor changes previously approved by the majority, were defeated.

Administration amendments approved limit the life of the law to June 30, 1943, declare that nothing in the act empowers the President to use convoys, require reports within every 90 days of such information as the President can divulge, and order consultation with Army and Navy chiefs on all aid given.

Fifteen opposition efforts for wider changes were defeated Wednesday, and before the bill was reported the committee rejected six more.

The committee's report offered the first detailed interpretation of the bill. Many contentions of the bill's opponent's were challenged and new light was thrown on proposed administration.

In defining "defense articles" to be sent to Britain, it said, cotton, wheat and other agricultural products were equally included with arms and munitions. But it said the term "does not include men nor does any other provision of the bill deal with utilization of our armed forces."

"Defense information" to be given would be only such as to enable Britain to "intelligently and effectively" use defense articles sent and would concern no such secret information for example as defense of the Panama Canal or of Fort Knox.

Other Laws Unaffected

It called Section 3, outlining the President's powers, "the heart of the bill," but denied that the broad phrase, "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law," would sweepingly set aside other statutes.

Unaffected in any way, it said, would be the Walsh-Healey Act, the wages and hours law, the eight-hour law, or the Wagner law. Nor would the Johnson Act be repealed, it said, since that act "does not apply to this Government or to a public corporation." Similarly the report maintained, the bill does not repeal provisions of the Neutrality Act of 1939 "which by its terms is applicable to private persons and corporations and not to the Government itself."

It said the phrase was the usual one used to waive sections of other laws that might interfere with effective administration of the new one.

As for provisions for repayment, the report said the President "undoubtedly will make the best bargain possible for this country." It said he would be empowered to require payment in "rubber, tin, the transfer of defense plants owned (by Great Britain) in this country or any other direct or indirect benefit to" the United States.

Flexibility Stressed

But it called it "conceivable" that the benefit may consist in England's use of the defense articles to defend itself, rather than in making material payments. It said that "if Britain is successful in her gallant defense of our civilization, our defense expenditures are likely to be reduced, or if Britain's ability to hold out is merely enhanced, we thus obtain valuable time adequately to prepare."

Flexible powers, it maintained, were necessary in the hands of the President "to enable him to act quickly and decisively in the best interests of this Nation."

The report denied that the bill's authorization for repair and conditioning of ships in American ports in any way would enlarge or modify "the powers of the Government to requisition any defense article such as foreign ships interned in our ports."

Here is how the Committee voted on final approval:

For the bill—Bloom, of New York; Luther Johnson, of Texas; Kee, of West Virginia; Richards, of South Carolina; Pfeifer, of New York; Jarman, of Alabama; Arnold, of Illinois; Burgin, of North Carolina; Courtney, of Tennessee; Eberharter, of Pennsylvania; Gregory, of Kentucky; Wasielewski, of Wisconsin; Sikes, of Florida; Davis, of Ohio (Democrats), and Eaton, of New Jersey; Mrs. Rogers, of Massachusetts and Stearns, of New Hampshire (Republicans—17.

Against a report—Shanley of Connecticut (Democrat); and Fish, of New York; Tinkham, of Massachusetts; Chiperfield, of Illinois; Vorys, of Ohio; Mundt, of South Dakota; Jonkman, of Michigan, and Mrs. Bolton of Ohio (Republicans)—8.

Special Rule Sought

A special rule giving right of way to the lend measure in the House on Monday will be sought by Foreign Affairs Chairman Bloom at a meeting of the House Rules Committee this morning.

The rule is expected to provide for two to three days of general debate before the House starts voting on amendments. Speaker Rayburn seeks House passage of the measure by Friday at the latest.

The committee's favorable report came 20 days after the bill was first introduced by House Majority Leader McCormack and 15 days after House hearings opened. High State, Navy and Army officials had appeared to urge prompt action.

Boland said after contacting his whip unit leaders that he found it unnecessary to make the usual vote canvass.

"The bill will pass, largely as it now is," he told reporters. "The only thing I am not sure of is the size of the majority for it."

Another House leader estimated "at least a 100-vote margin for the bill."

Pending a minority report by Representative Fish, of New York, ranking Republic committee member, Martin told reporters he could not support the bill.

"I would support a bill to aid England—to give her $2,000,000,000 in credits, with no extra powers for the President," Martin said. "I am sincerely in sympathy with the English. But I don't think that in order to aid Britain I must vote this tremendous authority for the President."

Martin called the Administration amendments to the bill "window dressing" and particularly criticized the proposed convoy amendment.

"It simply means," he said, "that they are not repeating in the bill powers the President now has. All he has to do is declare a belligerent country is outside the danger zone, and he can convoy ships now."

But Martin said Republicans as a party "will not make the bill a partisan issue." He said the Republican conference called for today "is for information, and will not bind any Republican."

included lunch with the lord chancellor, Sir John Simon; a tour of the damaged inns of court, a visit to the admiralty where he discussed British needs and naval affairs with First Lord A. V. Alexander and inspected various departments, and dinner with Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information.

Interviewed late today, he emphatically denied a report that he would cut short his trip to this country in order to hurry home to urge quick passage of the lease-lend bill. He said he would probably leave here for the United States next Thursday in accordance with his original plans. He added that the question of his length of time here was not one of curtailing his stay but whether it could possibly be lengthened despite the fact that he has pressing engagements at home.

Regarding the lease-lend bill, he pointed out he had offered to testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee before leaving the United States. Willkie, who has said time and again that he favors aid to Britain, added that his views on that subject had been "modified" as a result of conversations with various officials here, but whether he meant they had been enlarged or altered in the opposite direction he did not say.

Willkie said the highlight of his activities today was his visit to the admiralty, where he spent more than an hour and a half talking with Alexander and being shown through the various departments, including the famous map room.

During luncheon with Sir John Simon, Willkie said he asked the lord chancellor how the courts functioned under wartime conditions. "and I got the impression English courts are still open and free and operating under the old established rules, modified only by war regulations. Sir John conducted Willkie on a tour of the bomb-torn temple and the ruins of Middle Temple Hall, where Queen Elizabeth danced with Lord Leicester and saw the first performance of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

There the visitor accepted a glass of brandy brought up from the famous cellars, which have been untouched by the raids, and proposed a toast "to the restoration of the temple."

Aid Bill Fight Holds Up Help For Axis Foes

Government officials revealed in private conversations yesterday that their sweeping plans for increased aid to Great Britain, Greece and China have been virtually stalled, pending the outcome of the Congressional battle over H. R. 1776, the lend-lease bill.

British officials, it was said, are figuratively sitting on their hands, wondering whether the promised aid will come in time to help oppose the German invasion attempt that is expected in April.

Chinese and Greek emissaries have asked repeatedly and vainly for military equipment and now have almost given up hope of receiving it before Congress acts on the aid-to-Britain measure.

The British have placed no important contracts in the United States since December.

Furthermore, the 12,000 more planes that President Roosevelt promised Britain during the recent election campaign are still a promise. No contracts have been signed for their manufacture, or for manufacture of any part of that number, officials said.

Plans of broad implications for "all-out" economic warfare against the Axis, plans that are so advanced that they are already in the form of proposed executive orders, are all being held in abeyance until Congress speaks its mind.

Among the 50 or more executive orders that President Roosevelt said some time ago are prepared for use, if need be, are orders to freeze all foreign funds in this country, orders to take over Axis and Axis-controlled ships in our ports, orders to set up a system of licensing all exports to strengthen the British blockade, orders for a licensing system for imports that would legalize a boycott of Japanese silk, orders to bar the use of American ports to ships that defy the British blockade.

All these drafted Executive orders are in readiness for possible use, preliminary studies have been made, but it was apparent yesterday no action is likely until the battle of H. R. 1776 is over.

Weeks ago the British presented to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau their estimates of how much war material they will need this year, complete with specifications and amounts.

The list has been studied by all interested Government departments, has been checked and rechecked, and awaits only the "green light" that must come from Congress.

Officials have a very definite idea, it was learned, of how much the first year of aid to Britain will cost, but the exact amount will not be disclosed for awhile—at least until the lend-lease bill moves further through Congressional machinery.

The apparent "stalling" is causing officials some worry, it was said.

Concern could be detected among top officials that Congress may not act "in time." Guesses were that it may take Congress another month to complete action on H. R. 1776, which would mean that industrial machinery could not start converting the bill's language into actual weapons until some time in March, dangerously close to the springtime "zero hour."

The British, it was said, have used the idle time to pick up odds and ends for which they had some available cash. During the past month they have bought about two-score ships from the laid-up World fleet and private sources.

The Greeks and Chinese, without funds, have not even been able to do that much. They have merely spent the time waiting for release of military equipment by the United States.

The Gallup Poll

Lindbergh's Idea of Negotiated Peace Opposed by Majority in U. S. and Britain

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 30.—Col. Lindbergh's statement before the House Committee that he favors a "negotiated peace" at this time between Germany and England raises the question, how many Americans share this viewpoint? How many want the British to try to make the best peace they can now, instead of continuing the war?

A Nation-wide survey of public opinion on this issue just completed by the Institute indicates that the negotated peace idea is popular only with a small minority —approximately one voter in every seven. The strength of this group just about equals that of another group at the opposite extreme—those who want the United States to get into the war. The most recent survey on that subject found approximately one voter in every eight in favor of going to war.

Majority Favors Aid

In between lies the great majority of the American people. Of these 79 per cent hope Britain will continue to fight until the Nazis are defeated; 88 per cent want the United States to stay out of the war. But the majority are for aiding Britain in every possible way short of war.

Today's survey put the following question to a cross-section of the voting public:

"Which of these two things do you think England should do now—try to make the best possible peace now with Germany, or keep on fighting in the hope of defeating Germany.

The results are:

The British Opinion

Last December the British Institute of Public Opinion found that only 7 per cent of British voters favored a negotiated peace, despite four hard months of savage air raids.

The same survey also found that the temper of the British people was such that as many as 13 per cent would report to the authorities any person who even suggested making a negotiated peace.

Aid Bill Is Barrier to War, Gerard Says at Senate Hearing

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

British defeat might tempt the United States to "connive" with Nazi tyranny rather than undertake single-handed opposition to Germany, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was advised yesterday by Reinhold Niebuhr, clergyman and teacher.

Urging approval of the Administration's bill for full aid to Britain, Niebuhr warned that Nazi domination of the rest of the world "would mean our conniving with this tyranny or spending more billions to challenge it."

The witness, professor of applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary, New York, added: "We would be strongly tempted by the very enormity of the cost to write off our present expenditures and come to terms with the Nazis."

Prior to Niebuhr's testimony, James W. Gerard, American World War Ambassador to Germany, said that he favored a declaration of war but that it would not necessary now if the pending bill is passed.

For two hours during the afternoon the committee met in executive session to hear Secretary of War Stimson give specific information on the total size of American plane production last year and the number of planes that went to the Army, to the Navy, to the British and to other countries (primarily France).

Despite senatorial requests, Secretary Stimson reportedly refused to give a breakdown of figures on the various types of planes. He did, however, tell the committee how large the production of combat planes was, and what proportion was kept for the Army and Navy.

After the closed session, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, merely told reporters that "I feel more strongly than ever that the effort to make us believe that Britain's immediate security depends on our action on this pending bill is without warrant."

Another opponent of the bill, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, would only comment: "I got no answer on whether we are stronger in planes now than two years ago, and I pressed Secretary Stimson on that, too." He added that he had heard nothing "to change my opinion in the slightest degree."

Chairman George, of the Foreign Relations Committee, announced that Secretary of the Navy Knox would testify today. It was indicated that William S. Knudsen, director of OPM, might also take the stand today.

Invited by the committee to testify next week are numerous nationally-known figures who oppose the Administration's foreign policy, notably Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. He was asked to appear next Thursday. Alfred M. Landon was invited for Saturday, February 8.

On the other hand, Wendell Willkie, outspoken defender of the bill, is scheduled for the final day of the hearings, February 10. President James B. Conant of Harvard University has also been asked to testify at that time.

Former Ambassador Gerard, who served in Berlin from 1913 until the breaking of diplomatic relations in 1917, said that if Britain should be defeated, Germany would "seize" Mexico. The countries of South America, he added, would be held in "an iron grip" of the Nazis.

The 73-year-old former diplomat declared that "only such a bill as this, giving the President immediate powers, can save Britain and save the world."

In a written statment, Gerard asserted that "we are faced by a lightning war and this bill provides a lightning defense." He said that "this war is our business if we wish to survive as a free people."

The one-time ambassador warned the committee that "it's wishful thinking to believe that a revolution can succeed in Germany or Italy. The only place it could come is in the army, and do you think a successful army, occupying enemy territory, will revolt?"

U. S. Population Is Declining

The Census Bureau said yesterday that if present trends continue the population of the United States will dwindle, rather than increase.

Calculations from sample figures of the 1940 census, the bureau said in a statement, indicate that on the basis of present births and deaths the population will decline 4 per cent per generation.

U. S. Indicts Big Magnesium Cartel

nesium in the manufacture of airplanes and other products has been restricted, restrained and discouraged."

"There is now a serious shortage of foundry facilities available for the fabrication of magnesium products."

"The price of magnesium in the United States has been maintained at artificially and unreasonably high levels, and that when the Dow Chemical Co. sold magnesium abroad it did so at prices substantially lower than to domestic users."

Might Seize Industry

"This conspiracy has resulted in the maintenance of a single producer of magnesium in the United States."

The recital of charges led some Justice Department officials to predict that the United States Government might use its World War powers to take over patents of the magnesium process and perhaps also the aluminum industry, in case other methods proved ineffective.

Pointing out that there is today a shortage of magnesium both in the United States and England, despite the fact that the raw metal is found everywhere in brine deposits, the Justice Department stated that Germany has increased its magnesium production five-fold since 1938, while conspiring to hold down American production.

Officials said that German production in 1940 was somewhere over 25,000 tons annually, contrasted with American production of only 6,000 tons.

The indictment charged that the firms used the following devices to maintain their alleged control:

Pooling basic manufacturing patents in order to give three American corporations a virtual monopoly in the magnesium industry.

Maintaining the domestic price of the metal so high as to discourage its use in airplanes, automobiles and other products.

Requiring magnesium users in America to buy their needs from one source, the Dow Chemical Company, thus discouraging others from competing with Dow in the production of magnesium.

Limiting sale of magnesium to a single company, which had the effect of making Britain dependant on Germany for most of its magnesium.

Signing a contract between Alcoa and the German dye trust limiting United States production of magnesium to 4,000 tons annually, unless I. G. Farben Industries agreed to a higher quota.

The indictments were the result of an inquiry, begun in 1939 by the antitrust division, the department said.

"This inquiry has shown startling evidence of German influence in domestic industries essential to national defense," the Justice Department remarked.

G.O.P. Loses Bid To Cut Proposed Emergency Fund

By the Associated Press

A Republican attempt to lop $50,000,000 from President Roosevelt's proposed new emergency fund of $125,000,000 failed in the House yesterday along with a series of other attempts to pare down the appropriation bill.

Reduction of the Presidential fund was proposed by Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, on the ground that similar appropriations last year were made in the belief that Congress might not be in session when emergencies arose requiring quick action by the Chief Executive. No such contingency was in prospect now, Case contended. The House rejected his amendment, however, without a record vote.

Martin to Quit G. O. P. Helm March 24

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., yesterday called a meeting of the Republican National Committee for March 24 to receive his resignation as Republican national chairman.

Martin, who has been urged to stay on as his party's chief, said he wished to be relieved of the chairmanship "as early as possible."

"I will submit my resignation to the committee and I hope it will be accepted," he said.

Martin said he would confer with the first meeting of his Republican executive committee since the November election on the morning of March 24 and in the afternoon would go before the full committee.

Effort to Keep Him Expected

The man who directed the national campaign for election of Wendell L. Willkie first announced he would step down last fall. Since then there have been repeated reports that he would be kept on and an influential group on the national committee is expected to try to hold him.

Martin's repetition of his decesion to resign was an effort to set at rest those reports.

"Suppose the committee asks you to stay?" Martin was asked yesterday.

"I don't look for anything like that," Martin said. "I think we can get another man. I might have to stay on for a month or so, but I hope I can get right out."

Martin will contend that his House minority leadership duties require his full time. He formerly was head of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. Many of his House minority colleagues, looking to the 1942 Congressional elections, want him to remain on as national chairman, at least until that time.

Doubts Hollister Would Accept

Martin discounted reports that John Hollister, of Ohio, law partner of Senator Taft and a campaign adviser to Willkie in the last campaign, would accept the post. Hollister has been frequently mentioned as a possible successor.

Martin listed ten other possible successors, all of whom he said had support.

Those he regarded as in the running for the chairmanship included Gov. Baldwin, of Connecticut; Harold Mason, of Vermont; Russell Sprague, of New York; Werner Schroeder, of Illinois; Arch Bobbitt, of Indiana; former Representative Dudley White, of Ohio; David Ingals, of Ohio; Charles A. Jonas, of North Carolina, and Kenneth Wherry, of Nebraska. He said he had not heard that Samuel Pryor, chairman of the Republican arrangements committee, was a candidate.

Baldwin was a pre-Philadelphia Willkie Republican; Sprague was campaign manager for New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and Ingals was campaign manager of Senator Taft.

Asked whether Willkie would attend the March national committee meeting, Martin said, "not unless he wishes to."

President First To Use Highway Postoffice

President Roosevelt, the Nation's No. 1 stamp enthusiast, yesterday assured his collection of a first-trip cancellation when he unveiled a shiny red, white and blue postal truck at the south portico of the White House and dropped a letter into the slot.

The truck, a monster of 18,500 pounds and costing $12,000, will be used in the new highway postoffice service to be inaugurated February 10 between Washington and Harrisonburg, Va.

Postoffice officials regard the highway postoffice service as one of the most significant developments in the field of mail transportation in recent years.

The outstanding novelty of the highway postoffices is that they will be manned by picked crews of clerks and will be completely equipped for sorting, handling and dispatch that are included in the modern railway coaches.

They will provide increased and faster service to areas that formerly were served by short-line railroads.

Letters may be posted directly at the truck during its brief stopover in each community. Other highway postoffice routes will be opened as trucks are received.

Stamp collectors desiring first-trip cancellations of the motorized postoffice should send their covers prepared and ready for mailing, with postage prepaid, to the postmaster, Washington, D. C. The first run from Washington will be designated in the cancellation die as "Trip 1" and on the return trip as "Trip 2."

U. S. Subsidizes Wheat Exports

The Agriculture Department took steps yesterday to subsidize the export of a quantity of American wheat to Mexico.

It asked exporters to submit bids by 9 a. m. (Eastern standard time) Monday for the purchase of wheat from Government-owned stocks for export to Mexico. Some officials indicated the quantity might be between 1,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels.

Roosevelt's Reply to Hitler Seen in Pledge to Halifax

By Walter Fitzmaurice.
International News Service Staff Writer

A pledge by President Roosevelt to "make available" munitions and supplies to Britain on an "ever-increasing scale" was published by the State Department yesterday in the wake of Chancellor Hitler's threat to torpedo every Britain-bound supply vessel within reach of Germany's submarines.

A department press release said the President made the pledge in accepting the credentials of British Ambassador Lord Halifax at a ceremony it represented as having taken place upon the Ambassador's arrival here last Friday.

To diplomats, however, the timing of the release of the pledge gave it the flavor of a direct answer to Hitler's threat.

Congressional reaction to Hitler's warning found friends and foes of the aid-to-Britain program in agreement that this Government's resort to convoys would quickly put the United States and Germany at war.

Typifying comment of the extreme proaid group was the remark of Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, the 83-year-old Virginian said "we ought to begin torpedoing first," declared he "wasn't one bit scared," and added that he would "rather be a corpse than a poltroon."

In the antiinterventionist camp, Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, declared provisions of the President's lend-lease bill "invite a German attack on our shipping—an attack which would be expected to find quick retaliation in our open declaration of war."

According to the official release Lord Halifax, after giving the President greetings from the King, told him the aid this Nation was giving his had become "increasingly invaluable." He added.

"Its continuance, as your Nation speedily develops its unrivalled industrial strength, will assuredly secure the triumph of the cause on which you no less than we are resolved."

In reply, Mr. Roosevelt alluded to Anglo-American bonds "of blood and friendship," assured Halifax of the Administration's cooperation in his task of strengthening those bonds, and concluded:

"I want to assure you further of our firm determination to continue on an ever-increasing scale our assistance to Great Britain and to make available munitions and supplies now flowing from the rapidly expanding industrial facilities of the United States."

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi Finance Committee chairman and Foreign Relations Committee member, said Hitler's speech "won't make a particle of difference in consideration of the lend-lease bill." Other comments:

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas: "We shall not be bullied or intimidated. We have known all along that Hitler had designs on the United States which he would execute when he felt strong enough."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, Foreign Relations Committee chairman: "Hitler's statement was intended to assure the German people that the lend-lease bill was not unexpected by their government."

Allis-Chalmers Deadlock Holds As Firm Rejects Union Offer

By the Associated Press

A meeting of union and management representatives apparently failed yesterday to make progress toward settling the strike in the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co.'s West Allis (Wis.) plant—one of four major disputes troubling Federal labor and defense officials.

The union said it advanced and the company rejected a proposal that both state their positions at an open meeting, and that a vote of the employes then be taken on them, the result to be binding.

The question of a union shop is understood to be the chief issue in the strike called by the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers. Production has been held up for nine days on $40,000,000 worth of defense orders.

Federal conciliators were endeavoring to end the strike, and also to bring about agreements ending these major disputes:

At the Chicago tractor works of the International Harvester Co., the Farm Equipment Workers' organizing committee (C. I. O.) called a strike there Wednesday after, union officials said, a breakdown in contract negotiations. The strike affected 6,500 workers and halted production, company officials said, on "several millions of dollars" worth of defense orders.

A strike of about 3,400 employes of the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Co., Mobile, Ala., called by the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (C. I. O.). Wage increases, and new seniority and apprentice systems are among demands of the strikers. The company has contracts for repairing several naval destroyers.

Another development yesterday was a denial by Henry Ford that he had advised a Government official that he would turn his plant over to the Government for $1 a year rental rather than permit labor unions to have a closed shop. Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, had told the House that "a man from Michigan" informed him that Ford had made the remark concerning his plant and unions.

Navy Ordered To 'Farm Out' Arms Work

Secretary of the Navy Knox, urging "all hands to a fuller realization of the gravity of the situation," yesterday ordered farming out of production of naval arms and ordnance, utilizing all the Nation's available industrial facilities, "even in small shops."

The Navy chief instructed all naval district, yard and station commandants to further decentralize the defense production by letting contracts to civilian plants, regardless of size, whose facilities could be employed in the arming program.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing the expenditure of $300,000,000 to strengthen the Navy's antiaircraft armament.

To Strengthen 161 Ships

The first bill passed by the present Congress, it provided for installation of antiaircraft guns and armor on 58 fighting ships, and 103 auxiliary vessels already in service.

The measure, strongly advocated by Navy leaders because of lessons learned in the European War, had been passed by both Senate and House almost without opposition.

The Secretary's order to the Navy unit heads, and to Marine Corps headquarters, declared:

"There are throughout the country industrial plants of greater or less capacity, and even small shops, which have the industrial facilities and manpower that could and should be utilized in national defense work."

To Avoid Delays

Warning that it would be increasingly more difficult for the Navy to obtain workers and plant facilities as the defense program progressed, the letter continued, "It is therefore directed that all addressees 'farm-out' or make contracts with such shops . . . whenever such action will expedite deliveries and avoid delays."

Calling for unified support of the new program, he added: "All hands must come to a fuller realization of the gravity of the situation and local considerations or desires for ideal equalization of work-loads must be sacrificed, if necessary, in the interest of expediting national defense.

Knox said further moves to speed production of naval arms are under consideration.

Can't Buy Yesterday

"In the meantime, prompt and decisive action is expected of all commandants and commanding officers," the Secretary asserted.

"All naval work must be expedited to the maximum. Dollars cannot buy yesterday," he declared.

Meanwhile, the War Department announced awarding of contracts for the Air, Ordnance and Quartermaster Corps totaling $5,946,935 and plans for constructing airport facilities amounting to $1,921,772 at the Fort Wayne, Ind., airdrome and at Maxwell Field, Ala.

tices. The order found that the Ford management was responsible for a riot at the River Rouge (Detroit) plant in May, 1937, when several C. I. O. organizers were beaten while attempting to distribute union literature.

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the order in general but set aside one provision holding that distribution of a pamphlet expressing Henry Ford's views on unions constituted a labor law violation. Ford attorneys have petitioned the high tribunal for a review of validity of the parts of the order which were upheld.

C. I. O. Official Pleased

Detroit, Jan. 30 (AP).—The War Department's rejection of a Ford Motor Co. bid on a defense contract because of company objections to "labor clauses" brought criticism tonight from a Ford representative and approbation from a C. I. O. union official.

I. A. Capizzi, attorney for the Ford company, charged that inclusion of certain labor clauses was "strictly an arbitrary action taken at the insistence of labor groups" and said that the company would enter "the same objections" if invited to bid on other defense contracts containing "the same restrictions."

Michael F. Widman, jr., chairman of the Ford organizing campaign of the United Auto Workers (C. I. O.), said that the War Department's rejection of the Ford bid meant that the Government "has come around in practice to its professed position that violators of the law are not entitled to Government contracts."

Dodge Heir's 'Cinderella' Widow Reweds

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ANNIE LAURINE DODGE.

By International News Service

Urbana, Ill., Jan. 30.—The Canadian telephone girl who became the bride of Daniel G. Dodge, heir to motor millions, and was widowed on her honeymoon, again was a bridge tonight.

The former Annie Laurine McDonald, daughter of a Canadian tugboat captain, was married today in Urbana to Dr. William A. Lange, of Detroit, a plastic surgeon. The couple left immediately for a honeymoon in Sun Valley, Idaho and Florida.

Young "Danny" Dodge had an estimated fortune of $11,000,000 when he married the Gore Bay, Ontario, "Cinderella" telephone girl in 1938. She was then but 20.

Thirteen days later, when they were honeymooning at his lodge on an island in Georgian Bay, he was severely injured by an accidental dynamite blast. His bride and others were rushing him by power boat to obtain medical treatment when he fell from the craft and was drowned.

Dodge's will left his widow $250,000, but she contested its terms and was awarded approximately $2,500,000. This was reduced to $1,070,000 after payment of taxes and expenses.

The ceremony today was performed on the University of Illinois campus by the Rev. Herbert L. Miller, of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church, a close friend of Dr. Lange and his former legal guardian.

Witnesses were Mrs. Miller and a maid in the minister's home, Betty Thompson.

Relatives of the bride in Detroit said the marriage was the climax of a year's romance.

Dr. Lange, 32, is the son of Mrs. Emma Lange, of Lake City, Minn. His father is dead.

He was married October 8, 1935, to Grace L. Shields, who obtained an annulment in May, 1936, charging that after the wedding Dr. Lange refusing to live with her, returned her to her parents' home, and told her they could not afford to live together. She testified he said he did not want his neighbors to know he had married.

bond under the same charge placed against his brother—unlawful removal of Government property. Relatives were at police headquarters last night endeavoring to get him released on bond.

Walter Jackson, 30, of 427 Tenth Street Northwest, was later booked at First Precinct Station as "held for the Federal Bureau of Investigation." The address given by Jackson is that of the Standard Business Service.

Meanwhile, it was reported Justice Department agents had located an additional 2,000 of the personnel files which contained confidential information concerning Government employes, including several hundred G-men.

Federal agents are striving for additional information to present before the grand jury while building guards at various Government buildings are under orders to question any employes leaving the buildings with packages that might contain files such as those taken.

House Unit Votes to Boost U.S. Debt Limit

By Russell Turner.
United Press Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively approved legislation to boost the national debt limit to $65,000,000,000, provide for taxation of income from future Federal securities, and authorize sale of small-denomination savings certificates.

The double-barreled measure is designed to help finance the multi-billion dollar preparedness program.

Democratic members of the committee agreed on terms of the measure after defeating a Republican proposal to set the debt limit at $60,000,000,000. It now stands at $49,000,000,000.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton said he would introduce the approved bill Monday, with House passage likely before the end of next week.

Major provisions would:

1. Authorize sale of "Defense" savings stamps, certificates and bonds, similar to those sold during the World War. Lowest denomination would be 25 cent stamps; then $5 certificates, and finally $25 bonds.

2. Eliminate the differentiation in existing law between the statutory $45,000,000,000 ordinary debt limit and the special authorization for an additional $4,000,000,000 of Defense Bonds. Both categories would be included in the proposed lump sum, $65,000,000,000, limit.

3. Authorize imposition of taxes on income derived from federal securities issued in the future. Income from bonds already issued would continue to be tax-exempt.

Republicans sought to hike the debt limit by a series of small increases, rather than providing the full jump to $65,000,000,000 immediately. They plan to submit a minority report urging that the House adopt their plan.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday told a press conference that he would permit no "high pressure salesmanship" in connection with sale of the stamps and certificates.

"No attempt will be made to stampede, intimidate or coerce the people to buy," he said.

He indirectly answered fears expressed by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, that war propaganda might be employed in selling the securities. Patman testified before the committee that sale of small bonds was unnecessary. He said defense expenditures could be financed more efficiently and more cheaply by having the Federal reserve system issue new money.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan assured the committee that there would be no "high pressure sales campaign." He said the Treasury merely desired to spread the bonds and savings notes as widely as possible among the public.

Patman and Sullivan testified during a brief public hearing which preceded the executive committee session in which the legislation was approved.

Dr. Yerushalmy Gets Research Position

Dr. Jacob Yerushalmy has been appointed director of the division of statistical research of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, it was announced yesterday. He had served previously with the Public Health Service and with the New York State department of health.

He succeeds Dr. Robert J. More, who left the Children's Bureau January 1 to become chief of the division of wage and hour statistics in the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

War Saddens Roosevelt On Birthday

President Roosevelt, whose fifty-ninth birthday inspired all the jumping and jiving that took place last night, thanked the Nation "from the bottom of my heart" for its help in fighting infantile paralysis, but added, with world conditions in mind "I cannot say that this is for me a completely happy birthday."

Far from the star-spangled melee of crowded hotel ballrooms the President spent yesterday evening in the White House with 21 old friends and as midnight approached he made a five-minute radio talk of thanks to the country, predicting victory in the fight against the disease that afflicted him.

"Clearly, unquestionably, we are winning the fight—winning it, thanks to all of you," he said of the Nation-wide campaign against poliomyelitis, climaxed by fund-raising celebrations on January 30 of each year.

The President, a bit grayer, his face a bit more wrinkled than 12 months ago, is "in top physical condition," according to his physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire.

In keeping with the solemn note he struck in his birthday message to the country, the President spent the working hours of his birthday occupied with "business as usual."

But he also found time for two "inspection tours": lunch with screen celebrities visiting the Capital, and a look at a new postal truck parked on the south lawn of the White House.

Receives Birthday Cakes

The morning was consumed by the usual round of appointments. Seven birthday cakes arrived at the White House during the day, enough to give every visitor a generous slice.

Just before lunch the President drove around the south lawn to mail the first letter in a new highway postoffice truck that will pick up and deliver mail along a rural route between Washington and Harrisonburg, Va.

Mrs. Roosevelt induced him to take luncheon with the 44 celebrities, including luminaries from the world of entertainment and sports.

Guests at the luncheon were:

Stephen T. Early, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Melvin C. Hazen, Col. and Mrs. David McCoach jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Russell Young, Kay Aldridge, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Allen, Mrs. Robert Baker, Wallace Beery, Carol Ann Beery, Martin Broones, Margaret H. Davis, Deanna Durbin, Mrs. James A. Durbin, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Fadiman, Jay C. Flippin, Glenn Ford, Preston Foster, Benny Goodman, Charlott Greenwood, Mary Hardwick, Tommy Harmon, Stirling Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Hersholt, Richard B. Keech, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew R. Kelley, Alice Marble, Mr. and Mrs. Lauritz Melchior Constance Moore, Wayne Morris, Maureen O'Hara, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pettijohn, George Raft, Al Ritz, Mr. and Mrs. Red Skelton, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Stolting, Eleanor Tennant, Lana Turner, Mildred Turner, Marguerite LeHand, Malvina C. Thompson, Mrs. James M. Helm, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith.

In the evening the President dined with 21 old friends, many of them members of the informal "Cufflinks Club" who have joined the President on his birthday every year since 1921.

The Cufflinks Club is a friendly and very informal organization created by the President as a device of getting together with old friends. Each member receives a pair of cuff links bearing his own and the President's initials.

Those invited last night were Mrs Roosevelt, G. Hall Roosevelt, Mrs Roosevelt's uncle; Secretary and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr.; Basil O'Connor, the President's former law partner; Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, Charles McCarthy, local lawyer who was once the President's stenographer; James P. Sullivan, an old friend; Kirke L. Simpson, a newspaperman who met Mr. Roosevelt during the World War; Stanley Prenosil, who covered Mr. Roosevelt's 1920 campaign; Dr. McIntire, Gen. Edwin M. Watson, military aide; Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, naval aide; Marguerite Le Hand, the President's private secretary; Grace Tully, a White House secretary; Stephen T. Early, press secretary; Marvin McIntyre, Presidential secretary; Malvina Thompson, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary; Helen M. Gahagan, the actress, and Mrs. Robert Baker, daughter of the late Louis Howe.

The White House announced that the annual campaign for funds to combat infantile paralysis had brought $58,000 in dimes to the White House up to noon Wednesday. Last year the comparable figure was more than $100,000, but it was explained that the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation had localized the campaign this year instead of staging the national "March of Dimes" familiar in past years.

National headquarters informed the White House that total contributions throughout the country thus far were in excess of last year's.

Thousands Dance At Birthday Balls

Roosevelt left a gathering of old cronies, shook off the troubles of a warring world and said to the Nation by radio:

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart."

For the rush to dancing thousands at five hotels—the Shoreham, Wardman Park, Mayflower, Washington and Hamilton—the stars fortified themselves with nourishment at a $7.50-a-plate banquet at the Willard Hotel. Six hundred Washingtonians ate with them.

"To the President . . ."

Promptly at 7 p. m., Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, asked for quiet among the scores who were still trying to find their tables and Wallace Beery, the film veteran, stopped talking to his young daughter, Carol Ann, to give the general a hand by going "Shhh!" The spotlight flashed to the orchestra where, a moment before, Lauritz Melchoir, Metropolitan tenor, sang with full voice the highest notes of the National Anthem.

While the diners were still on their feet Gen. Cox gave them a toast—"To the President of the United States." Then the photographers were cleared out and the eating began.

At the head of the table, Stirling Hayden, Hollywood's latest "sensation," and Jean Hersholt, the character player, had for their dinner companion Tommy Harmon, University of Michigan All-American halfback.

Suave George Raft, one of Hollywood's most ardent racing fans, sat next to the startling red-haired beauty of Maurene O'Hara, who came from Dublin just a few years ago. Constance Moore and Deanna Durbin sandwiched Commissioner Hazen.

Lana Is Alone—for Awhile

Al Ritz, the comedian, was, properly, an end-man, sitting at the table not far from the District's solemn Engineer Commissioner, Col. David McCoach, jr.

Incredibly, Lana Turner, the melting blonde, sat by herself for quite a while. A few feet away Charlotte Greenwood joined in the laughter at her own jokes. Wayne Morris, with shoulders broader than Harmon's, looked bored.

By 9:35 p. m. the rush for the hotels was on. But now the stars retained their band box freshness in contrast to their wee sma' hour appearance of torn gowns, disheveled hair and neckties in disarray by the time dawn and the Gold Plate Breakfast rolled around to the Carlton Hotel.

Just as they had appeared at the 6 p. m. broadcast in the Willard's Willard Room, where Deanna Durbin was a dream in pink chiffon, Miss Aldrige ravishing in red and Miss Greenwood as frisky as a hare. They marched up to the microphones, one by one, at the call of Jay C. Flippen, master of ceremonies.

"Everyone out for the ball tonight!" Dr. Christian (Jean Hersholt) ordered his radio audience.

Preston Foster told how happy and lucky he was that he, a former Jersey bus driver, had lunch with the President. Glenn Ford admitted that he, "the most unimportant person here," was overcome with it all.

Red Skelton clowned a bit, letting wife Edna do the serious talk, and Wayne Morris—like most of the others—praised the objective of the Birthday Ball.

Glenn Ford's and Clifton Fadiman's remarks were short and snappy.

First Lady Cheered

When Maj. Brown arrived at the Mayflower he ordered the management to let no one in after 11:15 p. m. whether they had tickets or not. Outside the hotel cars ran five abreast on Connecticut Avenue. On LaSalle Street, adjacent to the Mayflower, vehicles filled the street and were unable to move in either direction.

Mrs. Roosevelt showed up at 10:45 o'clock, five minutes ahead of schedule, and was greeted with a thunderous round of applause. She was accompanied by L. W. "Chip" Robert and Arch McDonald.

"I'm happy to be here," said Mrs. Roosevelt, when the throng stopped cheering. "To think that you people would come here for this magnificent cause affects me deeply."

The vast crowd in the Mayflower ballroom surged forward, and McDonald, who was master of ceremonies, pleaded that it move back and give those in front a chance to breathe.

Arch McDonald, who was master of ceremonies, presented the first star at 9:40 p. m. Wallace Beery responded with an account of his trip to the White House, high spot of the day for him, he said, because President Roosevelt talked with his daughter.

Miss Greenwood, announcing, "I just sold my signature for my weight in dimes," appeared first at the Hamilton. Expressing the hope his wife wasn't around, Bill Crago, the N. B. C. announcer, next presented Miss Aldridge.

Nearly 1,000 persons tried to dance at the Hamilton while District firemen took the place of policemen and stood watchfully in all four corners of the ballroom.

Motorcycle police screamed around the driveway to the Wardman Park Hotel to clear a route through at least 2,000 persons for Mrs. Roosevelt, who came to cut the President's birthday cake.

With Mrs. Roosevelt at the Wardman was the girl Washington has come to know as Cinderella. She is Anna Sklepovich, 14-year-old daughter of a Gary, W. Va., coal-mine mechanic. She began to play the fairy-tale role Wednesday when the President transformed into a real invitation a hoax bid to the White House believed to have been framed by members of her family and neighbors.

Slics of the cake cut by the First Lady were auctioned to swell the paralysis fund.

The crowd at the Shoreham was estimated at 7,000. Only 1,000 of them were able to cram their way into the Blue Room. About the same number stood in the new ballroom. Five thousand more milled in the lobby.

Twohy Also a Year Older

The hotel management reported serving 750 dinners, and said the crowd was twice as large as that at the Inauguration.

Among the Shoreham's celebrators were Mr. and Mrs. James Twohy. Twohy, governor of the Federal Home Loan System, observed his birthday last night, too.

None of those who fainted had the luck of Dorothy Shorb, 19, of Silver Spring, Md. When she came to, she found herself backstage at the Shoreham where all the stars were passing by. Pvt. H. E. Burton, of the Fire Department, carried her there.

One thousand were crammed into the ballroom of the Washington Hotel and Mrs. Roosevelt was coming down the stairs when suddenly the words of Adolf Hitler's speech yesterday came over the public address amplifiers. Somehow, it developed, a radio resume of the address was accidentally piped into the public address system.

No Hint of Hearing It

Mrs. Roosevelt gave no indication that she heard the Fuehrer. Raymond Michael, the master of ceremonies, told an excited assistant: "Never mind; Mrs. Roosevelt's here now."

At the Hamilton the crowd at midnight began calling for Tony Martin, scheduled for a personal appearance. Bill Crago, the master of ceremonies, tried to pawn off a policeman as Tony, but the trick didn't work because everybody knows Martin doesn't wear a blue uniform.

Martin finally showed up at 12:15 a. m.

It was at the Hamilton also that Mrs. Roosevelt confided in someone that the only dance she knows is the Virginia reel.

This year's parties had a distinctly military flavor, for the first time. Uniforms of the Nation's armed services, liberally scattered through the hotels, provided celebrants with their only reminder of the emergency.

As though running to five hotels in one hour were not enough punishment for the human flesh, this year's itinerary for four of the stars included Baltimore. The Misses Turner and O'Hara and Raft and Morris made the round trip and their personal appearances there all in three hours.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, the Metropolitan police chief, assigned 325 men to patrol the parties. The figure included uniformed and motorcycle men and detectives. The Fire Department increased the police detail by assigning 110 of its men.

Text of Roosevelt's Birthday Address

President Roosevelt, Looking Fit

From the bottom of my heart I thank all of you—every man and woman and child who has labored with my old friends, Basil O'Connor and Keith Morgan, in this great cause. And let me, at the outset, also give you my thanks in behalf of all those victims of infantile paralysis to whom this celebration tonight spells new hope and new courage.

Most of all, I am grateful to America—for reaffirming at this hour America's humanity, America's active concern for its children. This is the eighth birthday in a row which all of you have made an occasion for joining hands in this national humanitarian effort.

I cannot say, as you can well understand, that this is for me a completely happy birthday. These are not completely happy days for any of us in the world. Shall we say that American birthdays this year are being made at least happier than they would otherwise be because all of us are still living under a free peoples' philosophy?

Truly a Part of National Defense

It is not only that the lights of peace blaze in our great cities and glow in our towns and villages—that laughter and music still ring out from coast to coast—that we will return to safe beds tonight.

It is not that we feel no concern for the plight of free peoples elsewhere in the world; that we do not hope that they may continue the freedom of their governments and their ways of life in the days to come.

It is because we believe in and insist on the right of the helpless and the weak and the crippled everywhere to play their part in life—and survive.

It is because we know instinctively that this right of the unfortunate comes under our free peoples' philosophy from the bottom up and can never be imposed from the top down.

I do have satisfaction on this birthday of mine because of the fact that definite progress has been made in these past 20 years on a national scale in the fight against infantile paralysis. In a very broad but a very definite sense, this fight is a true part of the national defense of America.

Calls for National Fight

I have always tried to remember that the particular problem of infantile paralysis does call for a truly national fight. We have it in every State of the Union. We are at last organizing adequately to fight it.

We have had to face the necessity of uniting medical scientists and doctors and nurses and public health officers and the general public into a unique offensive—and the battle year by year is gaining greater success.

The year-in, year-out campaign culminating on each January 30 has had the support of almost everyone—from those who give large sums down to the school children who contribute their pennies. Clearly, unquestionably, we are winning the fight—winning it, thanks to all of you.

And so, to all of you I give my own thanks for the rarest birthday present of all—the gift of your charity, your kindliness to each other and to the Nation.

11-Year-Old Boy Defies Police to Touch Lana Turner

All his life Tony Batista, 2716 Twenty-seventh Street Northwest, has wanted to touch a movie star and the reason he got away with it last night was because he's only lived 11 years.

Tony broke through police lines at the Wardman Park Hotel at 11 p. m. Policemen caught him, but he pleaded so earnestly they took him to see Lana Turner.

"I just want to touch you, Miss Turner," he said.

Miss Turner extended her hand. "Oh, the sweet thing!" she said.

Tony put his hand in hers and then withdrew it. He said he wanted to touch the star a second time, but her escorts told him one touch was enough.

D. C. Stenographer Dances With Raft As 'Date' Looks On

Ascending the stage of the new ballroom at the Shoreham Hotel George Raft asked for volunteers to be his partner in a rhumba.

He saw 100 hands go up, then selected Alice Field, 18-year-old stenographer of 4625 Eighth Street Northwest, who with her escort was standing near the front.

Raft extended a hand and lifting the pretty Miss Field, who was there in a flame-colored dress, to the stage. They danced for a few minutes, and then while the other 2,500 dancers in the room cheered the sleek Raft returned her to her escort, Jimmy Courembis, a hotel bellman.

"It was the most marvelous thing that ever happened to me," exclaimed Alice.

"Yes," said Escort Jimmy, "I've planned this date for 30 days only to see my girl whisked off by a movie star."

BEAUTY SALON, SECOND FLOOR

Midnight Ends Day of Thrills for 14-Yr.-Old Cinderella Girl From West Virginia Hills

Anna Sklepovich, the 14-year-old Cinderella girl from the West Virginia coal country, was back in her hotel—unlike Cinderella—at midnight last night after a night of thrills.

She had carried herself with all the assurance of the stars whose paths had criss-crossed hers through a hectic night. Once she was mistaken for one by the crowd when they saw her escorted by police and men in tails. One snatched her silken handkerchief as a souvenir, others asked for autographs and still others tried to touch her pink chiffon gown.

At the Mayflower she was introduced by Arch McDonald, master of ceremonies, as the most courageous girl of the year, whereupon the crowd cheered until it was hoarse. She then made a short speech, in which she said she was "proud and happy to be born on the same date as our great President." Asked how she felt she said "I just can't explain in words just what I feel!"

From the Mayflower she went to the Shoreham, and then to the Wardman Park where she was present when Mrs. Roosevelt cut the birthday cake and the news photographers and movie cameramen photographed the festivities. Asked to say something, she smiled, but only two words would come out, "I'm thrilled!" she said quietly.

Interviewed after her return to her hotel about her greatest thrill the little girl who came to town as the result of a hoax said: "It was at the hotel with Mrs. Roosevelt when they made movies of me."

Anna collected autographs from all the stars she met, Deanna Durbin, Lana Turner and Jean Hersholt. When Mrs. Roosevelt shook hands with Anna, she forgot to ask the First Lady for an autograph—until it was too late, she admitted dolefully.

'Greatest President,' Maureen Declares

Maureen O'Hara, the Irish actress, appearing at the Mayflower in a lovely yellow evening gown. Addressing 3,000 admirers in the ball room she said:

"If you could have sat beside your President and talked to him as I did today, you would truly know how wonderful it is to be an American. He (President Roosevelt) is the greatest President of our times. I say this in all due respect to President De Valera of Eire."

Bellboys Kid 'Doctor' Hersholt With Fake Ills

Bellboys at the Shoreham kidded Jean Hersholt with "Quick, Doc, I'm sick. Take a look, Doc, please." Hersholt is Dr. Dafoe of the movies and Dr. Christian of the radio.

At all hotels, he marveled to the audience about what a wonderful country we live in. "Only in America," he said, "would it be possible for three Danish-born boys, who lived within four blocks of each other in Copenhagen, to reach high station in their adopted land." He referred to himself, Knudsen and Melchior.

He introduced his attractive auburn-haired wife to the crowds as proof that Hollywood marriages can last. They've been married 27 years.

Home Talent Gets Justice's Vote Over Movie Stars

During the banquet at the Willard last night, Supreme Court Justice William Douglas passed a note to tall, suave District Commissioner John Russell Young. It read:

"With all these movie stars around, you are still the handsomest person present."

Social Security Administrator Paul McNutt, acknowledged to be the handsomest man in Washington, attracted more attention than the stars when he came to the banquet, but the presence of Lana Turner on his arm may have helped some.

Fred Snite, Paralysis Patient, Does His Part, Too

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—As his contribution to the cause behind the President's Birthday balls, Fred Snite, jr., world-famous infantile paralysis sufferer, has come to the assistance of a young Miamian similarly stricken.

The entire Snite staff of technicians, nurses and physicians has been placed at the disposal of Steve Happney, 24-year-old electrician, who has been an occupant of a boiler-type "iron lung" for three months.

Cake's First Slice Handed First Lady, 'for President'

William, maitre de hotel at the Wardman Park, got the greatest thrill of all celebrators there last night.

After Mrs. Roosevelt had cut the President's birthday cake, he pounced on the first piece, carefully wrapped it in paper, and handed it to the First Lady.

"For the President," proffered William.

"So thoughtful," smiled back Mrs. Roosevelt. She took the piece of cake and assured William the President would get it, too.

Policeman Hurt Escorting Goodman To Broadcast

Hurled to the street in a crash with an automobile at the height of a race against time through Washington yesterday, a Washington policeman begged the radio star he was escorting to hurry on to his broadcast.

Motorcycle Patrolman Glenville S. Brown was escorting a taxicab bearing Bandsman Benny Goodman out Fifteenth Street. The orchestra leader was already seven minutes late to a 6 o'clock broadcast. After the crash, Goodman leaped from the cab and asked if he could be of assistance.

"You go ahead," Brown gasped. "Hurry up. You're already late."

War Problems Face Scholars' Meeting Here

The problems of what to do about an oversupply of refugee scholars from Europe, how best to reserve documentary sources of knowledge in bomb-torn England, and some of the language questions raised by the national defense effort, confront a gathering of the Nation's leading scholars here today.

The scholars, about 80 in number, arrived yesterday for sessions preliminary to today's opening of the twenty-second annual meeting of the American Council of Learned Societies. Secretaries of the 20 affiliated societies of the council and the organization's executive committee met yesterday at the Washington Hotel, headquarters for the gathering.

A highlight of the meeting's agenda is a discussion of "utilization of displaced foreign scholars and of unemployed American scholars." The discussion is scheduled to take place at a dinner tonight (Friday) at which Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress, will be one of the guests.

The council has been pledged by the Rockefeller Foundation an appropriation of $30,000 for "microcopying" priceless records in England which are endangered by the war. Eugene Power, of the University of Michigan, who is to have charge of the project, will attend the meeting.

The council also will consider arrangements for special and intensive course in Spanish and Portuguese to be given for nine weeks this summer at the University of Wyoming at Laramie, Wyo. A $25,000 grant has been approved for the project by the Rockefeller Foundation.

EXCITEMENT IN THE OFFING. Paul Young is just back from a talent booking expedition to New York. He's working out a floor show line-up for the new Paul Young's due to open over the Roumanian Inn February 11. Al Spieldock's orchestra has been booked, attractive redecoration is under way and all signs point to a great revival of fun unlimited at Paul Young's . . . There's a well founded buzz going round that a new and goodlooking night spot will be launched in about six weeks on Eighteenth Street, just off Connecticut Avenue. Promoter of the project is a popular Washington restaurant man.

Leslie Hare, winner of Milt Herth's singing contest, begins her engagement in the Neptune Room tomorrow afternoon. She's a "natural" with a gift for rhythm that fits perfectly into the "Herthquake" style.

LORGNETTES TO YOU! When Mirth and Mack pretend to be Groucho and Harpo Marx, they lean their elbows on ringsiders' tables in the nonchalant Marx style. When they tried it on Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, she raised her lorgnette and regarded them with considerable astonishment. It was a grand if impromptu tableau . . . Next week's Shoreham show promises to be one of Max Lowe's glossiest. There'll be Sylvia and Christian, dancers starred for six weeks in Billy Rose's Casa Manana; Iris Wayne, specialty stepper of Al Jolson's "Hold On To Your Hats," the Two Vanderbilts in "taprobatics," and that stunning Indian lass, Princess Red Rock, is held over.

THREE STAR MAESTROS will hold forth at the Wardman Park Hotel tonight. Charlie Barnet's band and Ralph Rotger's Pan-American orchestra will play continuously at Georgetown U's Junior Prom, while Ray Heatherton's music will attract Metronome Room customers. There'll certainly be a maestro get-together later in the evening.

RAINBOW ROOM BUZZING. Leader Milton Davis and violinist Durward Bowersox have just made a pair of novachord-violin records as a surprise birthday present for Milt's little daughter, Helen Elizabeth . . . Saxophonist Jim Fitzpatrick spends every afternoon visiting pretty, dark-eyed Virginia Waters who's recovering from a mean riding accident resulting in a couple of broken bones. "I'm getting to be a fairly good practical nurse," says Jim.

Mayfair's Paul Kain will again be Glen Echo's Paul Kain next summer, we hear. The Kain diversion group is one of the finest ever to appear at Mayfair. They'll probably all be incorporated into the big dance band needed at Glen Echo.

LESLIE HARE, winner of Milt Herth's singing contest in the Neptune Room

NEW FACES. A nice young married couple are Jeanne and Joe Rose, El Patio's new melody makers. Jeanne says, "I got so tired of staying home while Joe played in an orchestra. And I could sing. So we started a team." They've played successfully all through the mid-West, are looking forward to a New York engagement . . Bob Marks, Manhattan singer-guitarist, has just joined Jimmy Summerville's Four M's in Hi Hat. He replaces trumpeter Jack Reid who's gone home to Massachusetts to recuperate from flu.

"A SONG FOR EVERY OCCASION" is the slogan of Jack Norman, roving minstrel of the Lounge Riviera. Jack has prepared a tremendous repertoire of songs for wedding, birthday, engagement and anniversary parties, will unreel them at a minute's notice. He's thinking of fixing up melodic sequences for celebrants just back from Reno.

MATINEE SESSIONS. If you want to get eye witness accounts of the fabulous Gold Plate Breakfast, drop into the Carlton Cosmos Room this afternoon or tomorrow and interview Carmen Cavallaro and his boys. They played for the G.P.B. until five this morning . . . The Casino Royal will present its full Chester Daugherty Revue at tomorrow's luncheon session. Dancing to "Jivin' Jack" Schafer's band . . . Early dancing in the Cafe Caprice tomorrow, too. Don Carper's Four will play from 1 to 4 . . . An afternoon at the Silver Fox will be kind to your wallet, lots of fun also. Cocktails are only 25 cents from 3 to 6 . . . The Madrillon's Mayan Room is always cramjammed in the afternoon with folks who know that Ramon's music plus two-bit cocktails is a wonderful buy . . . The most smartly dressed women in town always seem to gravitate to the Mayflower Lounge for afternoon dancing to Dick Koons' music. We think they go there to look each other over, make sure they're not missing any style development.

Patricia Prochnik designs every one of these shimmering gowns she wears at the Troika and her mother, Mme. Prochnik, makes them. You'll be completely dazzled by that number in pale gold lame with brown fur and matching muff.

LOTUS DOINGS. Manager Dick Lam recently counted his employees, says he was amazed to find there were 90. He thought there were about 60. That's the way the pay-roll grows . . . Dancer Ethel Lynn says she has to practice more in Washington than in towns where it doesn't rain so much. Damp weather does things to the muscles, just like grandmother said . . . Erwin Lockwood, formerly of Bill Strickland's band, and his bride ringsided at Lotus lately, received a royal serenade.

PRESTON FOSTER nearly set Burt's Trans-Lux on its ear the other afternoon. Every girl in the place asked for and got his autograph. He wasn't in his talked-about riding clothes but did wear a trick hunt ring in a design of spurs and other tack room accessories.

INTERIOR PANORAMAS. The constantly erupting volcano in Ciro's Famous Village—it's no livelier than "Mayor" Ciro . . . You should feel like Madame Du Barry when you walk into La Salle Versailles. For you'll face a reproduction of the Petit Trianon, built for her by Louis XV . . . Naval officers who've looked over the Anchor Room, say that it's absolutely correct in every detail of its duplication of a battleship's interior,— except for such improvements as Eileen George and the pretty Anchorettes . . . Peter Fritz, Log Cabin out Silver Spring way, has the grandest collection of our furred and feathered friends, including stuffed pheasants, owls, ravens and deer heads. There are also several hornets' nests—uninhabited . . . Kavakos' Grill has one of the biggest dance floors in town—and how it needs it, between those fast jitter steppers and the Tuesday country dancing!

GLENN MILLER STYLE crops out constantly in Rodd Raffell's music at the Nightingale, is probably largely responsible for the way it magnetizes the dancing crowd. The band's stars include trumpeter "Deacon" Gould, singer Tommy Lawrence.

Thailand, Indo-China, Speed Armistice Terms

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 30 (AP).—Under Japanese mediators, Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China sped armistice negotiations toward a conclusion tonight in order to clear the decks for Tokyo talks on final peace and other momentous questions involving their future.

Informed quarters predicted the negotiations would be terminated tomorrow with the telegates putting the pen to a Japanese-dictated agreement aboard the Japanese cruiser Nateri, which is anchored in Saigon Harbor.

Unit Seeks Veterans for Jobs, Not Jobs for Veterans

Today's task of the Veterans' Placement Service is finding applicants for jobs rather than jobs for applicants, O. D. Hollenbeck, chief of the service, told the annual conference of the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion yesterday at the Hamilton Hotel.

Delegates are rehabilitation officers of the legion throughout the United States and its possessions. The legion's national employment committee met at the Ambassador Hotel, and the national legislative committee was in session at legion headquarters, 1608 K Street Northwest. Child welfare workers of the legion and its auxiliary will meet at the Washington Hotel today and tomorrow.

At one time, Hollenbeck said, the placement service had 360,000 veterans on its active list, seeking jobs. Now, he said, the active list has dropped to less than 200, due largely to jobs made available by the defense program.

In CCC camps, he added, there still are 27,000 veterans, though efforts are being made to find among them men with skills which may be used in defense work or who may be given refresher courses.

Possible use of aids to veterans set up by the Legion since the World War, by young men with claims arising out of military service now, was mentioned by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, assistant director of Selective Service. While he did not utterly suggest or recommend use of this machinery, he called attention to its existence in a brief address outlining the work of the Selective Service Act.

Gen. Hershey was introduced by Paul G. Armstrong, vice chairman of the committee and head of selective service in Illinois.

J. J. McIntee, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, discussed during questioning after an address, the possible effect of a CCC ruling which sets a maximum age limit of 35 for subaltern officers in CCC companies. He said this ruling could be productive of difficulties in veteran companies and indicated it would be studied with a view to remedying whatever hardships it might have imposed.

Yesterday morning, members of the committee attended hearings before the Veterans' Committee of the House of Representatives. National Commander Milo J. Warner reviewed legislative proposals.

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

PUSH ON FROM DERNA—Derna, third major Italian base in Libya to fall to British, was fully occupied today. The Middle East command said every effort was being made to drive straight to Bengasi, passing up the coastline of the Cireraican "Hump." In captured Tobruk, the British were busy refitting the harbor for use as an advanced naval base against the Axis

London Has Heaviest Day Raid in Weeks

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 30.—German bombers stabbed at London, Dover, the eastern Midlands and southeast England today with the heaviest daylight raids in weeks, shooting down some of the big bags in Dover's balloon barrage and causing an undetermined number of casualties.

Three alerts were sounded in the capital up to dusk. The Ministry of Home Security announced that some shops and houses were damaged. Officers' quarters adjoining a London hospital were struck, and several persons were believed to have been buried in the wreckage. One body was recovered.

All members of the crew of a German bomber were killed when the plane was shot down over Essex.

In one district a school was reported hit and in the east Midlands, Britons said, a low-flying raider machine-gunned a village street with no reported casualties.

Royal Air Force bombers struck at objectives in northwestern Germany during the night, an official announcement said, with the big naval base at Wilhelmshaven bearing the brunt.

(The German high command said a number of civilians were killed in the British attacks, but added that damage was "slight.")

More than 200 incendiaries started several fires in the working class district of an English town, but all were reported to have been extinguished quickly.

The Luftwaffe failed to follow up the day raiding with night attacks.

The sinking of the British trawler Pelton was reported by the admiralty without elaboration.

Meanwhile the Netherlands government announced in London the loss of one of its submarines on war service. The name of the submarine and the nature of the operations were not disclosed.

Drive Against Britain Near, Rome Predicts

By the Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 30.—A united offensive against Britain which will make previous operations resemble "only preliminary episodes" was predicted by Fascist editorial spokesmen tonight as the high command reported victories by Italian troops counterattacking in Eritrea.

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Telegrafo, in Leghorn, told the armed forces that Premier Mussolini and Adolf Hitler "would make the decisions soon for the attacks against the British."

Speaking over the radio shortly before Hitler's promise of an Axis victory in 1941 was rebroadcast in Italy, Ansaldo indicated the new offensive would be timed to render United States help to Britain futile.

"The Italian and German peoples are well resolved not to let themselves give way to British capitalism, even if it appeals to the other side," Ansaldo said.

"British forces, including an Australian unit which was dislodged from a previously captured position, were put to flight in Eritrea," the war communique said.

Prisoners and arms were reported taken in the attack on the Australians in the northern sector, while in the south, the bulletin said, British columns were routed in three places.

"Our air formations intensively bombed enemy motorized units, troops and positions," the communique continued. One British plane was reported shot down in raids causing "slight damage" to Italian bases.

In Libya, the high command said, British forces were subjected to heavy artillery shelling west of Tobruk, "actively aided by our aviation."

(The communique did not mention specifically Derna, which the British officially announced they captured this morning.)

Bad weather was said to have hampered operations on the Greek front, where prisoners and arms were reported taken in large patrol actions.

town and continuously and heavily shelled the British main forces massing outside.

These artillery duels were followed by two days of heavy ground fighting.

50,000 Face British

Exactly how many men the Italian marshal, Rodolfo Graziani, might have to defend Bengasi was not known but informants said that in view of his series of crushing defeats there could be scarcely more than 100,000 first-line Italian troops left in the whole of Libya.

Of these, roughly half are understood to be stationed around Tripoli watching French Tunisia, the remaining half stands somewhere in the Libyan coastal area into which the British now push on.

For obvious reasons the British themselves have never revealed their strength in this war theater but it is common knowledge that in their major victories they have always outnumbered the Italians.

Feel Out Bengasi Defense

The activity of advanced patrols in the direction of Bengasi—the same feeling-out process that had preceded the grand assaults upon Bardia and Tobruk—suggested that British troops soon would be striking there in force.

On the far-away fronts in East Africa, the British reported that their forces in Italian Eritrea were concentrating behind some 4,000 Italians who have retreated in the Agordat-Barentu sector and are believed preparing to make a stand.

British operations were declared progressing "in all sectors" in Italian Somaliland; on the Ethiopian front intense patrol activity was reported.

The Egyptian Minister of the Interior acknowledged that Axis planes had bombed the area of the Suez Canal today, but declared there were no casualties and no damage.

Greeks Resume Drive, Italians Flee Tepelini

By the United Press

Athens, Jan. 30.—Gen. Ugo Cavellero's Italian forces are evacuating Tepelini, central Albanian Fascist stronghold and barrier to the Greek drive on Valona, Greek military officials reported tonight.

The Italians were said to be falling back upon Valona.

Greek troops also were reported to have stormed and taken the first lines of the Italian defense north of Klisura, Greek-held town 11 miles east of Tepelini.

The new Greek offensive came after an attempted Fascist counter-offensive had failed in the central sector.

A spokesman said the Italians resumed heavy attacks Thursday, four of which were repulsed in the central sector with heavy Fascist losses. More than 200 prisoners have been taken.

Capture of Tepelini would give the Greek right wing another route of attack upon Valona and Berat, 29 miles to the north which is the key not only to Valona but to Elbasan and the Albanian capital of Tirana.

As news of the new Greek victories reached Athens, thousands of persons from here and nearby villages filed by the casket of Premier Gen. John Metaxas, under the great dome of the Athens Cathedral.

The newspaper Proia said the Italians lost nine planes at the front during the last 10 days and that Italian losses in counterattacks were "20 times those suffered by the Greeks."

Italian Losses Said 7,000

Athens (Friday), Jan. 31 (INS).—The Fascists have lost more than 7,000 men in battles in the last few days, it was reported early today.

Hitler Warns He'll Torpedo British Aid

know one thing:

"Every ship, whether important or not, that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed. We are engaged in a war which we didn't desire. On the contrary, one cannot stretch his hand out to the other fellow more often than we did. When, however, others are looking for a fight and aim at extirpating the German nation, then they are in for a terrific surprise."

This was authoritatively interpreted to mean that the United States need not be concerned so long as American ships, in accordance with American neutrality legislation, remained outside British waters.

The Sportspalast, filled with 18,000 Nazi Party men and government officials celebrating the eighth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power, roared with applause.

Wearing the field gray tunic which he wore on the day war broke out and pledged not to discard save in death or victory, Hitler appeared in amiable mood and in the best of health.

There was more laughing than usual at a Hitler address.

Hitler made frequent jokes, such as:

"One English statesman figures out I have made seven mistakes in the past year. I checked up and found I had made 724 mistakes, but my enemies 4,385,000."

There was more laughing than usual at a Hitler address.

He declared that Britain was finished. He ridiculed suggestions that Italy might be falling away from Germany, and asserted that neither by blockade nor by any other possibility "even remotely thinkable" could Germany's victory be denied.

"These gentlemen," he said challengingly of the British, "may rest convinced:

"Our bill is a total bill and it will be paid at the end of the war point by point, square kilometer by square kilometer!"

These were among his other assertions:

". . . I have rearmed, and that, too, mightily. The German people know it today, but they don't by any means know everything."

". . . they (the English) hate our state, irrespective of how it is constituted, whether imperial or National Socialist, democratic or authoritarian . . . above all, they hate the social resurgence of this Reich.

"To the gentlemen on this side and the other side of the ocean I can say but one thing: The world of an awakening social conscience will at long last prove the most successful one. We have proofs for the fact that in other countries, also, cries in this realm are beginning to set in."

". . . England was chased away from the continent. Now, I've read several times that the Englishmen have the intention somewhere to begin with a great offensive. I have but one wish, namely, that they please tell me that beforehand. I'll then have that region evacuated beforehand. I'd like very much to spare them the difficulty of landing."

Germany, Hitler went on, was "standing here on this continent, and wherever we stand nobody can ever force us out. We've created certain bases for ourselves and when the hour comes we'll set out for decisive blows."

He spoke of "the few failures of our partner (Italy)," and said that if Englishmen thought they would achieve victory through those circumstances "then I fail, to understand Englishmen."

He advised the British not to "put much stock in the Balkans as possible helpers," adding:

"Wherever England puts in an appearance we will attack her and we are strong enough to do so."

Hunger could not operate against the Germans, he said. ". . . German people will never starve. Rather the English will do so." Even in raw materials, he went on, the Reich had "provided everything."

Saying that Germany entered this year with "defense forces equipped as never before in German history," he added the challenge:

"At sea, U-boat warfare will begin this spring and our opponent will realize there also that we haven't slept. The Luftwaffe (air force) will likewise make its presentations. The entire armed forces will compel the decision . . ."

The year, he went on, would be a "historic" one for the "great new order for Europe," with a program "opening up the world to all, eliminating preferential rights for individuals and breaking the tyranny of certain peoples.

"I am hoping that even those peoples who today are lined up in enmity against us will one day recognize their greater domestic enemy and that they will then yet enter into one front side by side with us—a front of Aryan humanity against international Jewish exploitation and corruption of peoples.

". . . That God may not desert us in the struggle of the coming year shall be our faith and hope.

"Deutschland! Seig Heil!"

Watch Family Now While Epidemic Colds Are Spreading

At a treacherous time like this, with an epidemic of contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) use Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.

Text of House Committee's Report Approving Amended Lend-Lease Measure

Held Most Efficient Way to Aid Britain, Bolster U. S. Defenses

The report of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the lend-lease bill, titled "An Act to Promote the Defense of the United States," follows in full:

General Statement

This bill was introduced in the House of Representatives on January 10, 1941. Full and extensive hearings on the bill were held for nearly two weeks by your committee. The committee heard, in public session, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, the Director of the Office of Production Management William S. Knudsen, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, Norman Thomas, Hanford MacNider, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Dr. Brooks Emeny, William R. Castle, the Rev. Gerald Smith, John Burke, Benjamin C. Marsh, William J. Grace, William C. Dennis, Ambassador William C. Bullitt, Gen. John F. O'Ryan, Miss Dorothy Thompson, Minister to Norway Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, William Green, Louis Waldman, and Ernest W. Gibson, jr. Statements were submitted by many others. The committee also heard, in executive session, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. George H. Brett, acting Chief of the Air Corps. Also appearances were made by members of Congress.

From these hearings and the public discussion and debate on the bill, it has been clear to your committee that our national policy is and should be: (a) To keep out of war; and (b) for our own national security, to aid Britain and those other nations whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States by supplying them as quickly and as efficiently as possible with defense articles in a manner consistent with our democratic procedures.

In the considered opinion of your committee, the bill, as amended, squarely meets these objectives of our national policy. It is the considered view of your committee, insofar as human minds can evaluate the situation that the probable effect of the bill will be to keep us out of war rather than to get us into it. It is also the judgment of your committee that the bill provides the most efficient way of supplying all possible material aid to those countries which are resisting aggression. It accomplishes this objective in a manner which is best for our national defense and wholly consistent with the Constitution and international law.

Analysis of the Bill

Section 1 of the bill contains the short title, "An Act to Promote the Defense of the United States." It requires no comment.

Section 2 of the bill contains the definition of the words "defense article" and "defense information." It should be noted that the terms "defense article" includes not only all arms, munitions and implements of war but also articles or commodities such as cotton, wheat and all other agricultural products which may be necessary for defense purposes. This term does not include men nor does any other provision of the bill deal with the utilization of our armed forces.

The term "defense article" is also by the terms of the bill intended to include not only articles manufactured or procured especially for any foreign country under the bill but also articles to or of which the United States or any foreign country either now has or hereafter acquires title possession or control.

This additional language in section 2 (a) of the bill describing what is included in the definition of "defense article" when read together with the substantive provisions of the bill:

(1) Empowers the President to authorize the disposition of defense articles, subject to the limitations in the bill, whether or not they are defense articles which have been manufactured or procured especially for any country the defense of which is vital to our national security. If the equipment to be so disposed of is equipment which was not manufactured or procured specifically for such a country, then the disposition can only be made after consultation with the Chief of Staff of the Army or the Chief of Naval Operations of the Navy, as provided by your committee's amendment to paragraph 2 of section 3 (a).

(2) Empowers the President, when he deems it in the interest of the national defense, to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy or the head of any other governmental agency to test, inspect, prove, repair, outfit, recondition or otherwise to place in good working order a vessel or other defense article owned or controlled by a nation whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States. However, this additional language in section (a) of the bill setting forth what is included in the phrase "defense article" is not intended to, and does not, in any way enlarge or modify the powers of the Government to requisition any defense articles such as foreign ships interned in our ports.

Secret Data Not Included

The definition in section 2 (b) of "defense information" when read together with the substantive provisions of the bill means that only those plans, specifications, designs, prototypes, or other information pertaining to defense articles which have been actually transferred, pursuant to the bill, can be communicated to a country the defense of which is vital to the defense of the United States. The bill does not in any way enlarge the powers of the Government or its officers to communicate defense information unless such communication follows after, and is incidental and relates to, a defense article transferred pursuant to the bill. The obvious purpose of authorizing the communication of such defense information is to enable the country to which defense articles are transferred intelligently and effectively to use such defense articles. Obviously, neither this definition nor any of the substantive provisions of the bill would empower the Government or any of its officers to communicate information concerning, for example, the defenses of the Panama Canal or of Fort Knox.

Section 3 is the heart of the bill. Briefly, it empowers the President to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government, to manufacture or procure, dispose of and repair defense articles, and to communicate defense information, to or for the benefit of those nations the defense of which is vital to the defense of the United States, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law.

The expression "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" has been used by the Congress since shortly after the formation of the Union. In 1794, the Congress granted exemption from customs duties to certain munitions, "anything in any former law to the contrary notwithstanding" (1 Stat., 370). Since that time the phrase has been used innumerable times, as for instance in the period from 1814 through 1822: 3 Stat., 49, 143, 261, 334, 412, 462, 582, 610, 640, 662. It has also been used many times since then, as for example, in sections 5 (a) and 14 (a) of the Act of June 28, 1940 (Public, No. 671, 76th Cong.).

The phrase "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" has not only been used many times, but its meaning is clear. When a statute containing this language covers a general subject matter such as the disposition by the Government of military and naval equipment, such a general statute prevails over specific statutes covering part of the field or inconsistent with the general statute. Statutes the application of which would be inconsistent with the provisions of section 3 (a) are not repealed by the bill. The only effect of the phrase "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" is to suspend the application of such inconsistent laws in order to make possible the effective carrying out of the provisions of section 3 (a). Such laws remain in full force and effect with respect to all other matters to which they now apply. Thus H. R. 1776, insofar as it provides that military equipment can be disposed of on such terms as the President deems satisfactory, would prevail over a statute requiring public advertisement before military equipment can be transferred.

Supersedes 1917 Act

Also, the present bill, by empowering the President to authorize the Secretary of the Navy, for example, to build or procure torpedo boats specifically for a belligerent whose defense is vital to our defense and to release them for export, would prevail over section 3 of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 222), which now makes it unlawful to send out of the United States a vessel of war built for a belligerent.

Similarly, the present bill, as amended, would prevail over the act of June 28, 1892, as amended (27 Stat. 321; 45 Stat. 982) which authorizes the Secretary of War in his discretion, if he deems it to be in the public good, to lease, for a period not exceeding 5 years and revocable at any time, such property of the United States under his control as may not at the time be required for public use. Under the terms of the present bill, the President, after consultation with the Chief of Staff of the Army, could authorize the Secretary of War to lease property, over which the Secretary of War has control, which would not be revocable at the option of the Secretary of War.

The expression "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" when read together with the whole of the bill, as amended, does not in any way modify, repeal, or change such legislation as the Walsh-Healey Act, the Wages and Hours Law, the Eight-Hour Law, the Wagner Act, or other similar provisions of domestic law because there is no inconsistency between them and this bill. These laws continue in full force and effect and are in no way affected by this bill. Insofar as the powers granted by subsection (1) of section 3 are concerned, giving the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency, when authorized by the President, the power to manufacture or procure defense articles, no discretion is given to waive domestic legislation of the kind mentioned.

The expression "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" does not repeal the Johnson Act. By its specific terms and by its spirit, that act does not apply to this Government or to a public corporation created by special authorization of Congress or to a public corporation controlled by the Government. The Johnson Act only prohibits the extensions of credit by individuals or private corporations to a foreign country which has defaulted on its debt to the United States. This bill does not in any way authorize the extension of credits by private individuals to any foreign country which has defaulted on its debt to the United States; it simply sets up a method for supplying material aid, in the interests of our national defense, on a straight government-to-government basis.

Nor does this bill repeal the provisions of the Neutrality Act of 1939, which by its terms is applicable to private persons and corporations and not to the Government itself. Section 7 is the only provision of the Neutrality Act which might possibly apply to the Government.

That section is not by its express terms made applicable to this Government, although it does apply to Government corporations such as the Export-Import Bank. It should be noted, however, that in the course of the discussion of that section on the floor of the Congress on the Neutrality Act of 1939, some of the Members of Congress thought that it would apply to the extension of credit by the Government. See (1939) 85 Cong. Rec. 1655, D. I.; (1939) 85 Cong. Rec. 84, D. I. However, even if it should be assumed that the spirit of Section 7 of the Neutrality Act makes it applicable to the Government, it would be modified by this bill insofar as extensions of credit by the Government may conceivably be involved and only to that extent.

Powers For President

Paragraph (1) of section 3 (a) of the bill empowers the President, when he deems it in the interest of the national defense, to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government "(1) To manufacture in arsenals, factories, and shipyards under their jurisdiction, or otherwise procure, any defense article for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States."

At the present time, the Government has no statutory authority to manufacture military and naval equipment in its arsenals or to procure such equipment from private manufacturers directly on behalf of any foreign government, except for the American republics pursuant to the Act of June 15, 1940 (Pub. Res. No. 83, Seventy-sixth Cong.). This paragraph proposes to enlarge the Government's power in this respect to meet the present situation.

This paragraph does not violate international law insofar as the manufacture or procurement of defense articles may be carried on for a belligerent country whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States. In the first place, it is a firmly established principle of international law that a nation is justified in acting in its own self-defense. Secondly, mutuality is an accepted principle of international law as well as of equity, and a nation which violates the basic rules of international law is not in a position to claim that another nation, in the interests of its own defense, is not complying with the less basic rules of international law. Furthermore, the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which is a part of international law not only was intended to outlaw force as a means of resolving international disputes, but its violation has also been regarded by many distinguished international lawyers as giving any signatory the power:

"To decline to observe toward the state violating the pact the duties prescribed by international law, apart from the pact, for a neutral in relation to a belligerent; (and to) supply the state attacked with financial or material assistance, including munitions of war; . . ."

Germany, Italy and Japan are parties to the pact. So, too, are China, Ethiopia, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Netherlands, Belgium, Albania and Greece. The United States is also a party to the pact. The pact is consistently interpreted by distinguished international law experts to mean that a violator of the pact, such as Germany, cannot legally renounce the pact by its violation.

Hague Pact Inoperative

It should also be noted that Hague Convention No. XIII of 1907, which is often erroneously given as a reason in international law for prohibiting the supplying of material aid of the kind in question, is inoperative by its own terms. Article XXVIII of the Hague Convention specifically provides that the Convention shall not apply unless "all the belligerents are parties to the Convention." Great Britain and Italy are not parties to the Convention.

Paragraph (2) of section 3 (a), as amended by your committee, empowers the President, when he deems it in the interest of national defense, to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government, "To sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend, or otherwise dispose of, to any such government any defense article, but no defense article not manufactured or procured under paragraph (1) shall in any way be disposed of under this paragraph, except after consultation with the Chief of Staff of the Army or the Chief of Naval Operations of the Navy, or both."

This, unquestionably, is the most important single provision of the bill. It authorizes the disposition by this Government, to any nation whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States, of any defense article upon those terms and conditions which the President deems satisfactory. As to defense articles which are not specifically manufactured or procured on behalf of such a foreign government, the disposition can only be made after consultation with the Chief of Staff of the Army or the Chief of Naval Operations of the Navy, or both. This provision, in a manner wholly consistent with our Constitution, gives the flexibility necessary to meet the fast changing situation in the war abroad in order that our national defense interests may be served best. It places this power of negotiation and disposition in the President, the Chief Executive and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy. As Mr. Justice Sutherland said in United States vs. Curtiss-Wright Export Corp., 299 U. S. 304, 319, 320:

"It is important to bear in mind that we are here dealing not alone with an authority vested in the President by an exertion of legislative power, but with such an authority plus the very delicate, plenary and exclusive power of the President as the sole organ of the Federal Government in the field of international relations . . . It is quite apparent that, if in the maintenance of our international relations, embarrassment—perhaps serious embarrassment—is to be avoided and success of our aims achieved, Congressional legislation which is to be made effective through negotiation and inquiry within the international field must often accord to the President a degree of discretion and freedom from statutory restriction which would not be admissible were domestic affairs alone involved . . .

"When the President is to be authorized by legislation to act in respect of a matter intended to affect a situation in foreign territory, the legislator properly bears in mind the important consideration that the form of the President's action—or, indeed, whether he shall act at all—may well depend, among other things, upon the nature of the confidential information which he has or may thereafter receive, or upon the effect which his action may have upon our foreign relations. This consideration, in connection with what we have already said on the subject, discloses the unwisdom of requiring Congress in this field of governmental power to lay down narrowly definite standards by which the President is to be governed. . . ."

Repayment in Goods

Section 3 also empowers the President to require that in return for the disposition of defense articles, any country, for example Britain, shall pay with rubber, tin, the transfer of defense plants owned in this country, or any other direct or indirect benefit to the United States. The compelling need for this provision is the fact that Britain, for example, only has enough assets which can be converted into dollars in both this country and abroad to pay for orders already placed in this country. According to the testimony of the Secretary of the Treasury, Britain does not have available assets convertible into dollars which can be used to place further orders or to acquire further defense articles in this country. The flexibility granted by this provision to the Chief Executive, who is, by the Constitution, the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, is intended to enable him to act quickly and decisively in the best interests of this Nation. It is conceivable that our national security may be materially furthered by supplying certain defending countries, such as Britain, for example, with certain war equipment without repayment in kind or property or any benefit other than that Britain actually uses it in the defense of the British Isles, thereby furthering our own national defense. Where the interests of our national defense are consistent with requiring payment for defense articles, for example, in tin, rubber, or other property, the Chief Executive of this Government undoubtedly will make the best bargain possible for this country. Under this bill, this Government would be empowered to transfer to Britain, for example, certain defense articles for use in the defense of the British Isles resulting in a benefit to the United States in that if Britain is successful in her gallant defense of our civilization our defense expenditures are likely to be reduced, or if Britain's ability to hold out is merely enhanced, we thus obtain valuable time adequately to prepare. In the opinion of your committee, this would be one of the kinds of benefits contemplated by the bill. However, this power is discretionary and not mandatory. In addition to such a benefit, the Government, of course, can require payment in kind or property.

Paragraph (3) of section 3 (a) enables the President to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government, "To test, inspect, prove, repair, outfit, recondition, or otherwise to place in good working order any defense article for any such government." Under this provision, the War Department could, for example, test tanks procured for Britain at its Aberdeen Proving Ground, and the Navy Department could repair the H. M. S. George V in in the Norfolk Navy Yard, if the President deemed it in the interest of the national defense to do so. Here again the power is permissive not mandatory.

These permissive powers, if exercised, would not violate international law for the reasons previously given in connection with the discussion of paragraph (1) of section 3 (a).

Safeguard Patent Rights

Paragraph (4) of section 3 (a) enables the President to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government, "To communicate to any such government any defense information, pertaining to any defense article furnished to such government under paragraph (2) of this subsection." In addition to the explanation about this subject previously given in this report, several other facts should be noted. Within its limitations, this section covers two practical situations. The first is where, for example, a private individual or a firm has a patent on a particular item of military equipment, such as, for instance, the Sperry bombsight. In such a case—prior to recent legislation—it has been the practice of the War and Navy Departments to obtain a contract obligation from the holder of the patent rights not to disclose the patent or military secret without first obtaining the consent of the War or Navy Department. Normally, after a new sight is developed, the War and Navy Departments consent to the release of the information. Under this section of the bill, read together with section 7, the release, for example, of the Sperry bombsight to the Chinese Government would carry with it the obligation on the part of the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to see to it that the patent rights of the American holder were adequately protected.

Another type of case is the one where the Government itself holds the patent to a military or naval discovery by reason of an invention made by an employe of the Government in the scope of his governmental work and transferred pursuant to statute to the Government, or where the Government has otherwise obtained such a patent in its own name. Paragraph (4) of section 3 (a) of the bill enables the President to authorize the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to communicate the defense information relating to any such defense article which has been transferred to a country whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States.

Paragraph (5) of section 3 (a) enables the President to authorize the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the Government "to release for export any defense article to any such government." This provision does not in any way modify or enlarge the right to transport defense articles.

The intent and purpose of this paragraph is essentially twofold: (1) As already indicated, it prevails over existing laws prohibiting the taking out of the United States of vessels of war built for a belligerent, and (2) it makes it possible for the Secretary of War, for example, to release for export defense articles for Greece without requiring a license from the administrator of Export Control pursuant to section 6 of the act of July 2, 1940 (Pub. No. 103, Seventy-sixth Congress). However, it should be noted that under section 5 of the bill, as amended by your committee, full and detailed reports of the transactions must be made to the Congress and to the administrator of Export Control.

Subsection (b) of section 3 has already been discussed in detail.

Time Limit Fixed

Subsections (c) and (d) of section 3 are both committee amendments. Subsection (c) fixes the terminal date of the powers granted to the President or the head of any department or agency of the Government at June 30, 1943, except that contracts entered into before that date, with a government whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States, may be carried out. Thus, by way of illustration, a contract with such a country made on December 1, 1941, to procure 1,000 pursuit planes which would require 19 months to perform could be carried out by delivery of the planes in August of 1943. However, a similar contract with such a country could not be entered into on July 2, 1943. In this connection it should also be noted that in addition to this time limitation provided by this amended subsection (c), the bill cannot be completely carried into effect unless and until Congress appropriates the funds in the usual manner to manufacture or procure defense articles pursuant to paragraph 1 of section 3 (a). This appropriation limitation will be discussed in more detail in connection with section 6 of the bill.

Subsection (d), which is added to this bill by your committee's amendment, speaks for itself. This subsection provides that the bill shall in no way be construed to authorize or to permit the authorizing of convoying by naval vessels of the United States. In fact, without the amendment it was the view of your committee that nothing in the bill in any way enlarged the powers of the Navy to convoy vessels. However, to avoid any doubt on this highly controversial issue, your committee deems it wise to recommend this amendment.

Sections 4 through 9 of H. R. 1776 are substantially the same as sections 3 through 7 of the Aid-to-American Republics Act of June 15, 1940 (Public Res. No. 83, 76th Cong.), except for a committee amendment which adds a new subsection (h) to section 5 of this bill, which requires reports to the Congress of the details of the transactions disposing of defense articles. The act of June 15, 1940, does not require such reporting to the Congress.

Section 4 of H. R. 1776 is intended as a limitation upon the powers granted by the bill and as a protection to the Government. It retains part of the control in the United States Government over defense articles transferred to any country whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States. Thus, for example, rifles transferred to Britain for the defense of the British Isles could not be transferred by Britain to any country without first obtaining the consent of the President of the United States.

Must Keep Records

Section 5 of the bill requires the keeping of accurate and detailed records showing the quantity, character, value, terms of disposition, and the destination of the defense articles and information transferred to any foreign Government. It also requires the reporting of such information to the Congress, insofar as it is compatible with the public interest to do so. It also requires reporting to the Administrator of Export Control.

Section 6 of H. R. 776 contains an authorization for an appropriation. Such an authorization, of course, does not appropriate funds nor does it make available immediately funds which can be used to manufacture or procure defense articles for disposition pursuant to the bill. Article I, section 9, clause 7 of the Constitution provides that:

"No money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law; and a regular Statement and Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."

It is, therefore, illegal to contract or otherwise to commit the Government, unless Congress has appropriated funds therefor, or authorized the commitment.

Paragraph (b) of section 6 provides, in effect, a revolving fund, so that any moneys collected from the disposition of articles pursuant to the bill can be used for two years to manufacture or procure equipment under the bill. This is a customary and valid provision. Article I, section 8, clause 2 of the Constitution provides that Congress shall have the power:

"To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years";

It is well known that the purpose of this constitutional provision is to prevent a large standing army without the constant check and surveillance of the Congress through the means of appropriations. It should be noted that this provision of the Constitution, neither by its terms nor its spirit, applies to appropriation for military equipment or defense articles. See (1904) 25 Op. Atty. Gen. 102. It has long been customary for the Congress to provide for revolving funds in connection with military and naval equipment. During the World War, there were innumerable statutes making provision for similar revolving funds. A similar provision is contained in the Act of October 10, 1940 (Pub. Res. No. 629, 76th Cong.—the Requisitioning Act). A provision virtually identical for present purposes was included in the Act of June 15, 1940 (Pub. Res. No. 83, 76th Cong.). This is the act authorizing material aid to the American republics.

Right to Buy Defense Articles

Section 7 requires the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, and the head of any other department or agency concerned, to make provision for safeguarding the rights of citizens of the United States who have patent rights in any defense article or defense information transferred to a foreign government.

Section 8 authorizes the Secretaries of War and Navy to purchase or acquire arms, ammunition, and implements of war produced within the jurisdiction of any country whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States, if the President deems such an acquisition necessary in the defense of the United States. Under this provision, the Secretaries of War and Navy could be authorized, for example, to purchase tin from Bolivia or power-driven turrets from Canada, if the President considered such a purchase of acquisition necessary in the interests of the defense of this country.

Section 9 authorizes the President to formulate rules and regulations which may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the bill, and he may exercise any power or authority conferred upon him by the bill, through such department, agency, or officer as he shall direct.

This is a customary statutory provision. Rules and regulations issued under an act must, of course, be consistent with the terms and purposes of the act. Thus, the President cannot, for example, provide by rules and regulations that the patent rights of American citizens in any defense articles which are transferred to a foreign government can be disregarded, since this would be contrary to the provisions of section 7 of the bill.

By his rules and regulations and by the authority vested in him by this section to delegate his authority under the bill, the President can provide that the actual administration shall be handled by those people who know most about the subject matter to be covered. Thus, for instance, in connection with the formulation of certain standard specifications for both United States and British tanks, the regulations might well provide that the Secretary of War, acting with the advice of the Chief of Staff and the Chief of Ordnance, should determine whether the armor plate should be 1 inch or 2 inches thick. Similar administrative matters can equally well be provided for in the regulations, and the necessary administrative power can be delegated.

CONCLUSION—

It is the firm opinion of your committee that, taking into consideration existing world conditions, prompt enactment of H. R. 1776 into law is of the highest importance to the vital interests of our country—and even of our civilization.

Wife Got FAT— No Longer Attractive LOST HUSBAND'S LOVE

The above headlines appeared in a New York newspaper in connection with a divorce trial that had attracted wide attention: "She was a beautiful, woman," an witness testified, "but she got fat and is not attractive any more."

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do. If you are fat, how would you like to lose some of it and at the same time gain in physical charm and attractiveness—more energy—greater activity?

Why not do what thousands of women have done to get rid of pounds of unwanted fat? Take ½ teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts (a famous English formula) in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and keep it up for thirty days. Institution in Laurel Only One Officials Point To With Pride is chiefly a medical problem, however, rather than one of social welfare accounts to some extent for the favored position of the school.

While staffed adequately in general, the school, according to Dr. Lewald, needs a social service worker and a parole officer to direct the return of the less handicapped inmates to society. Many of those of the moron type, he explained, are taught vocations which enable them to fill jobs and earn their own livelihood.

A few of the inmates have been paroled in this fashion, but the lack of supervisory officers slows up the releases and prevents proper guidance of them after they have been paroled.

The result is a stagnation within the school and a denial of training to many on the waiting list who otherwise might be admitted.

Another bad effect of the lack of dormitory space is that Dr. Lewald has been unable to classify the feeble-minded inmates as he thinks they should be and to segregate them accordingly.

Four separate units are necesary, Dr. Lewald explained, for every type of classification: two for sexes and two for races. Consequently, small living units, rather than large dormitories, are desirable. Because of the present limitations, only the broadest segregation, i. e., between the upper and lower grades of feeble-mindedness, is possible.

The House Subcommittee on District appropriations commented on the lack of landscaping on the grounds but declined to provide an appropriation for the work. The committee suggested that the job could be done out of regular appropriations with labor furnished by the inmates.

Yet only $5,000 was allowed for repairs on an institution which cost more than $1,000,000. The normal repair cost is 2 per cent; that would be $20,000 for the District Training School. The committee also cut $5,000 from the $110,000 estimate for maintenance. Fortunately, the Senate added $1,000 for repairs and $2,500 for maintenance.

The 1942 budget increases the repair allowance to $7,500, the maintenance to $112,500, and personnal was given an additional $29,000 to extend the 44-hour week to more employes.

The House Subcommittee on Appropriations noted that "general conditions" at the District Training School "were good" and "that the school was being operated on an efficient and economic basis."

The D'Alesandro committee suggested that a school building capable of caring for 1,200 should be built during the next five years. It noted that a new laundry building was needed along with a school and an employes' residence building. An adequate water supply, landscaping and new roadways also were recommended.

None of these recommendations, save the continued dormitory construction, were provided for in the 1941 supply bill and there is no money for them in the 1942 estimates.

The roadway leading to the ultra-modern hospital is little better than a succession of mud holes. The cleared forest land presents a bleak setting in contrast to the handsome brick buildings.

The handwork of feeble-minded female inmates, much of it beautiful, is offered for sale periodically. The money is used to purchase more material for the looms and needles.

All except the hopelessly crippled or bed-ridden are occupied with educational, recreational, or manual pursuits throughout the day. There is, consequently, none of the idleness that makes such a depressing scene at the Home for the Aged and Infirm.

P.U.C., Utility Rate Dispute Hearing Today

Revival of a dispute between the Potomac Electric Power Co. and experts of the Public Utilities Commission over the method of accounting last January's power company receipts, will be staged today at 2 p. m. at a public hearing before the regulatory body.

Because of the accounting issue, the commission yesterday reopened the case in connection with this year's reduction in electric rates. This temporarily delayed final adjustment of the 1941 power schedules.

However, Commission Chairman Riley E. Elgen said if the issue could be settled today it still would be possible for the pending $338,000 rate reduction order of the commission to be applied on power meter readings beginning tomorrow.

The commission's order for reopening of the case stated that the company had failed to supply "certain essential information," that the commission had requested.

Involved in the issue is a sum of about $42,000. The commission had directed the company to supply 1941 rate schedules on the basis of last year's reduced rates which actually began on February 1. The company had contended at the original hearing, a few days ago, that an adjustment should be made for January of last year. The commission said the company could submit a new rate schedule with this adjustment, but first demanded that a rate schedule be supplied without this adjustment.

After studying the new rate schedules filed Wednesday by the company, commission experts said yesterday the company had filed only a schedule containing the adjustment.

U. S. Surpluses Point to More Crop Control

By the Associated Press

Government control over production and marketing of major farm crops may be extended this year far beyond the scope of the past, Agriculture Department officials said yesterday.

Increasing surpluses in cotton, tobacco, wheat, corn, lard and many other farm products make more rigid measures necessary, they said. The Government itself has more than $1,000,000,000 invested in such surpluses.

For the first time since inauguration of New Deal crop control measures in 1933, the department is preparing plans to invoke strict marketing quotas on the Midwest's two major crops—wheat and corn. If the growers vote approval of such quotas, farmers would be required to limit sales and feedings to allotments given them by the department, or pay stiff penalty taxes.

Federal control over marketing of this year's cotton and tobacco crops has already been authorized.

Surpluses of cotton, wheat, tobacco and corn are of record proportions. Much of the unmarketable supplies are stored under Government loans to producers. Officials said two factors contributed to this situation: Shrinkage of foreign markets as a result of war blockades and increased world competition, and higher yields resulting from technological developments.

U. S. Navy Goes To Aid Stranded Liner

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Units of the United States Navy gave a hand today in attempts to refloat the grounded liner Manhattan. A destroyer, the [illegible], worked unsuccessfully with three oceangoing tugs during the afternoon. Other destroyers were expected to join the attempt, but naval sources declined to say how many would come or when they would arrive.

The destroyer sought, by racing along in deep water and churning her propellors, to create a swell that would help lift the Manhattan from the sand bar on which she grounded the night of January 12.

Welles Sees Economic Threat To Hemisphere if Axis Wins

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—Questioning whether a negotiated peace now would "be worth the paper on which it was written," Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, declared tonight that an Axis victory in Europe would lead to economic and political attacks on South America.

He added that if these attempts were successful a "physical invasion" of the area would soon follow.

He described this as a more imminent danger than an "immediat attack directed against continental United States" and asserted that "the menace to our security through the passage of the control of the high seas to unfriendly hands is to my mind overwhelmingly apparent."

In an address prepared for the annual dinner of the Alumni Association of the New York School of Law, Welles declared that this Nation must be prepared in its own self-defense to render Great Britain, China and Greece "all necessary assistance which America can produce."

"The provisions of the legislation now pending in the Congress (the lease-lend measure), if enacted into law, would greatly facilitate that task," he said.

Answering accusations of Japanese leaders that the United States is "pursuing an aggressive policy in the Far East" and that "we have placed our line of defense in the western Pacific," Welles asserted this country's "lines of defense are determined solely by the acts and by the policies of other nations."

Denying that the United States was seeking to extend "its hegemony or jurisdiction in the Pacific area," Welles said "those lines of defense are fixed solely by what we estimate is required, in the light of such policies and acts by others, to insure the inviolability and the safety of our territory."

With reference to a negotiated peace in Europe, Welles cited countries invaded by Germany in violation, he said, of "binding assurances." Then he asked:

"Under conditions in Europe today could American public opinion conceivably favor a negotiation for peace which would sanction the continued enslavement of the nations now occupied by German military forces?"

Taking up "arguments that no successful crossing of the Atlantic by a hostile air power or a hostile invading force could be undertaken so long as we are properly prepared to defend ourselves," Welles said:

"Those who take this point of view seem to envision ultimate danger to the United States in the event of a victory by the Axis powers solely in the nature of an immediate attack directed against continental United States.

"Under the German barter system, with all of its complicated and attendant manipulation, the Axis powers would inevitably attempt to impose a commercial and financial stranglehold upon these neighbors of ours and would at the same time commence immediately to undertake that same policy of commercial concessions which has been carried out in so many instances in their dealings with the smaller nations of Europe.

"If, as a result of this combination of pressure and penetration, the successful conquerors of other continents were enabled to find receptive elements in the populations of some of the South American nations, it would not be long before subversive movements on a large scale would be undertaken.

"Should these prove successful, physical invasion would soon follow."

The United States, he said would "undertake to join our neighbors in the defense of the Americas," but added that this would be difficult "until and unless our own sea power had reached the full total now planned or under construction and were thus prepared to guard two oceans."

On Buying Safety

The community effort to stop the slaughter of human beings on the streets is being properly concentrated for the present in a drive for more traffic policemen. Experts have removed all doubt that additional traffic officers are needed. Until Congress recognizes the close relationship between adequate enforcement of the law and fatal accidents, there will be no sound basis on which a safety campaign can be built.

Police Superintendent Brown has laid the problem before Representative Schulte's committee in no uncertain terms. In the ten years from 1930 to 1940, he points out, Washington's population increased 36 per cent and traffic problems doubled, but the police force was expanded by less than 14 per cent. Further revealing details have been provided by Burton W. Marsh, of the American Automobile Association. He shows that the District has only 173 full-time traffic policemen. Standards approved by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, if adopted here, would raise this figure to 265.

Under the proposal of Commissioner McCoach, seconded by Commissioner Young and Major Brown, the highway funds would be tapped to pay at least 50 of the 92 additional traffic policemen the experts say we need. Existing law forbids the payment of more than 15 per cent of all police salaries from the separate highway fund. But that act can be readily amended if it is found to be out of keeping with present-day requirements. It is particularly fortunate that this additional expense can be paid from gasoline-tax revenue, for a small surplus in this fund is anticipated for the fiscal year 1942. The one thing certain, however, is that Washington must have more traffic policemen to curb slaughter on its streets regardless of whence the money comes.

The Civic Theatre

The Washington Civic Theatre, which will open its second production of the current season (Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People") this evening at the Wardman Park Theatre merits city-wide encouragement in the effort it is now making to put the enterprise on a wholly self-sustaining basis.

A frequent practice among little theatre groups has been to solicit subsidization on the basis of their cultural contributions to the community. It is doubtful, however, whether the cultural level of any community can be raised, as it were, by main force. If large-enough audiences can be attracted to the performances, continued subsidies become unnecessary. If, on the other hand, the group theatre fails to attract audiences its cultural value is, to say the least, debatable.

Leaders of the Washington Civic Theatre believe, and we think correctly, that their undertaking has a very definite and economically valuable function in the community. It affords a kind of entertainment not provided by the movies, and only occasionally by the professional theatre, at prices within the reach of almost anyone. Assuming a reasonably high standard in the production as well as in the selection of plays, this entertainment may easily be regarded as a public bargain. If this is recognized by enough of us to fill the house at each performance, the Civic Theatre will soon be one of our most firmly established institutions.

Good Starting Point

There is increasing evidence that Congress intends to meet the problem of strikes in defense industries in a forthright manner. It is not yet certain what steps the House Judiciary Committee plans to take with regard to numerous bills before it. But at least it is exploring the problem and will doubtless conduct hearings to determine whether additional legislation covering sabotage and similar offenses is needed.

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Committee has taken a proper step in drafting a bill applying to defense industries restrictions similar to those which now limit the rights of railway employes to strike. Certainly improved machinery for mediation and arbitration of disputes in defense plants is needed, and if these are combined with a waiting period during which no strike could be legally called, stoppage of work in defense plants may be completely eliminated. Obviously whatever legislation is written, however, should apply to all defense industries rather than merely those working on naval construction.

The entire problem needs an airing and the proposed Vinson bill will be an excellent starting point for such a discussion. Many modifications may be found desirable before the measure is ready for final enactment. The important point at the moment is that Congress is giving the problem serious thought without waiting for more extensive walkouts further to threaten the defense program.

Hitler's War Aim

The speech which Hitler made yesterday on the eighth anniversary of his accession to power generally followed a now familiar pattern. Again, as in so many past utterances, the Fuehrer vented his wrath against Great Britain and sought to fix blame for the present war on that nation. Again he boasted of Germany's invincible might. The Reich's enemies, he said, "haven't even seen anything of our strength." And again he denied that Germany "has any quarrel with the American people." That statement, incidentally, should arouse bitter memories in the minds of Czechs, Poles, Belgians and others who have learned through cruel experience what value can be placed on Hitler's assurances.

The address was not, however, without its revealing aspects concerning American aid to Britain. Hitler undoubtedly realizes, as do many of his countrymen, that this aid can play a decisive role in the events of the next months. To bring out that point by threatening war against the United States, however, might prove self-defeating. Americans are not easily intimidated. And any undue emphasis on the danger to Germany arising out of American assistance to Britain might frighten the Germans. What happened in 1917-1918 taught them the danger of underestimating the United States. So Hitler treated the subject casually. Germany, he said, is "now fully prepared for whatever may happen in relation with America's help." "Every ship that comes within the reach of our torpedoes," he added, "will be torpedoed." He went so far as to insist that the Nazi regime foresaw and prepared to meet American assistance to Germany's enemies as far back as the beginning of the war.

In the light of Hitler's boasts the Germans must be doing a lot of wondering why, six months after the fall of France, total victory for the Reich is still out of sight. Addressing himself to such questions, Hitler gave a specific pledge of "victory within a year." Germany now has a new timetable. But whether it will operate any better than the last one did can hardly be clear to the Germans.

Not least important in the Fuehrer's speech was the way in which he professed to speak not in the name of Germany alone but for all Europe. "If non-European powers try to intervene here," he said, "Europe will rise." He was thus unwittingly giving an answer to the Wheelers and Nyes who have been clamoring for a statement of war aims by the belligerents as a prelude to a negotiated peace. Germany's war aim, Hitler himself now admits, is to maintain German control over Europe. To that end total war is being waged and, according to Hitler, it "will never end until total destruction of England has been accomplished."

Sky Magnet

When Hitler's all-out attack on Great Britain begins—experts now believe such an attack to be a practical certainty in the not-too-distant future—the role of air power may well prove decisive. So there is special significance in the report that the British have at last begun to discover effective ways and means of fighting night raiders.

Our military experts estimate that by April or May Germany will have in the vicinity of 18,000 first-line planes with a reserve force of at least equal size. Great Britain may not be able to muster more than a third or a fourth that number of planes. From the viewpoint of numerical superiority, therefore, the advantages will be entirely in favor of the Third Reich.

Could the British beat off aerial attacks at night as well as they have done in daylight hours, the chances of a successful German assault on England would be greatly diminished. In the past this problem of combating night bombing has proved to be especially difficult. Anti-aircraft fire has made it necessary for the German bombers to fly high and resort to indiscriminate bombing but has not succeeded in keeping the raiders away. And it seemed useless to send up fighter planes to do battle with night bombers because in that vast sea of darkness location of the raiders became as difficult as finding a needle in a haystack. Yet finding a needle in a haystack becomes a simple matter if one possesses a powerful enough magnet.

Precisely this principle is now apparently being employed by the British. The latest British fighter planes are said to be equipped with a so-called "homing" device which directs the hunter to the quarry, tracking him down through the darkness as though endowed with magnetic force.

To the extent that this device proves workable and can be produced in sufficient quantities to enable a sizable night fighter force to operate, Germany's luftwaffe will be subjected to depredations at night approximating those it has suffered in daylight raids. In aerial warfare numbers are undoubtedly important. But numbers are not everything. That has been proved to the hilt in North Africa. It may now be illustrated even more emphatically in the fighting over Britain.

Seeking Civic Unity

One of the most hopeful civic movements initiated by Washingtonians in recent years will reach a climax tonight at the Y. W. C. A. when the representatives of possibly 1,000 local organizations will meet to create a municipal assembly. What is sought is nothing less than a representative civic agency that will be capable of speaking for the District as a community. If such an organization can be created and given leadership that will be at once dynamic and tactful, its emergence should mark the beginning of a new and more effective effort to rescue the District from its political chaos and impotence.

Municipal assemblies have been organized in many cities as a means of making the influence of citizens felt in municipal affairs. The need for such a focal point of public opinion is multiplied tenfold in Washington because of our disfranchisement. Much good work has been done in the past by the citizens' associations and many other civic groups. But there has never been one single agency that could speak for the entire community on vital municipal policies of city-wide interest. With this gap effectively bridged, local residents would certainly have a better opportunity to present their wishes to Congress and to work for a genuine local government.

The fact that a large number of civic-minded individuals are sponsoring this move should give the proposed municipal assembly a good start. Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, will be temporary chairman; Senator Burton, former Mayor of Cleveland, will be the speaker and Mrs. Roosevelt will be on hand to give the proposed organization her blessing. Here is a real opportunity for Washingtonians of all different occupations and interests and of all parts of the city to merge their strength into a unified demand for better local government.

On various occasions The Post has sponsored cooperative civic enterprises in which many of the organizations represented in this movement have been asked to join. So it is especially gratifying to add our sponsorship to this hopeful movement. Considering the District's acute need for unified and energetic leadership, a mere statement of the proposed assembly's aims should bring civic groups flocking to its support.

The Pure In Heart

Our Hollywood friends are so much accustomed to being creatures in and out of fairy tales that possibly they take the job too casually. You can't have a fairy story without something in the way of dramatic contrast. So it is not surprising that a bashful little stranger from some dismal soft-coal town in West Virginia was able to take the spotlight and the affections of Prince Publicity himself right away from all that beautiful and wondrous galaxy arriving for the President's Birthday Ball. She was the only one that the magic slipper of what we like to call romance really fitted.

Though Cinderella had no trouble getting by the footman at the palace, poor little Anna Sklepovich got no farther than the Secret Service guard at the White House, which shows how much difference a few clothes and an impressive equipage can make in this world. The clock struck—or seemed to strike—midnight for Anna before the ball had even begun. From the White House she was sent to the Detention Home, where, it seems, nothing special in the way of dress or liveried attendants is required.

Happily, however, romance is not dead in Washington and least of all in the White House. On reading Anna's story in The Post the President said something to Mr. Steve Early, who said something to Mr. George Allen, who promptly sent his secretary to fetch the necessary mice and pumpkin. Doubtless Mr. Allen's motives were undilutedly romantic, but as a matter of fact this story, which had grown up wild, so to speak, was worth whole truckfuls of expensive hothouse publicity.

And that, dear children, is how little Anna Sklepovich came to be the belle of the big Birthday Ball. We are so sure that she was the belle that we haven't even bothered to check with the society department.

RELEASE BY CANDLELIGHT

Candlelight is kindly light.
Would you know release
From the furor of the day,
Strains that do not cease,

Bar the door against the world;
Curtain out the night;
Build a fire upon the hearth.
Then, by candlelight,

Kindly thoughts will venture forth,
Phrases that are meet,
From the shadowed quietness
Of their long retreat.

When your heart is calmed again,
Eased of doubts and cares,
Let the candle's flickering light
Guide you up the stairs.

Facts And Conclusions

As usual Col. Lindbergh's conclusions on international affairs are about as wrong as his facts are right. His factual statements prior to the Munich negotiation in regard to the German air force were probably right, but there are many who believe the conclusion that its threatened use should determine any nation's fundamental policy were both cowardly and wrong. His statement that the United States need not fear invasion from across the Atlantic may be right, but if, from that, the conclusion is drawn that we need not fear attack, the conclusion is wrong. We can be attacked from the south and we can be attacked from within; we can be attacked in the Philippines and we can be attacked in Alaska. As long as there are aggressors without and defeatists within we can be attacked from two directions at once.

Col. Lindbergh was possibly right when he made the statement that without a miracle the United States and Great Britain together could not drive back the German army from the conquered areas, but absolutely wrong in discounting the possibility, the probability, or even the certainty of that miracle. Who has not heard of the miracle of Dunkerque? Or of the R. A. F. victories over the "invincible" Luftwaffe? Or of the army of the Nile? Or of the Greek counter-invasion of Albania? Or of the splendid courage of British civilians? These are all miracles of courage that a defeatist would not recognize and therefore could not understand.

A Grave Responsibility

Are we sure that we are doing the people of Great Britain a favor by enacting the lend-lease bill? Surely we are not trying to force this loan on them so that they will keep the war going for our sake? You know they are taking all the chances of any further war. There is a possibility that the Germans, in sheer desperation, will be forced to try to take the British Isles or to snuff out part of the population with an unknown gas.

There is also the possibility that the English blockade in four or five years will cause starvation, revolt and such turmoil on the main continent of Europe as to make the French Revolution look like small-time stuff. If that should happen, bolshevism would probably take over, which might also engulf the British Isles and we would have to have our house in good order to avoid the same fate.

We in the United States face a grave responsibility. We have the power to call a peace conference or to spread the war. The common people of Great Britain would probably welcome a trial of negotiating for peace. All avenues of peace should be explored before a total war is launched in which we will probably participate.

Supreme Court Vacancy

Let it be remembered that although the Republican Party had been in full control of the Government for 12 years, there were four Democrats on the Supreme Court when Franklin D. Roosevelt went into office March 4, 1933. A President's conception of lofty public service is not shown in his appointing members of the opposition party to Cabinet positions, which may be good political policy, but in his attitude and relations toward the Supreme Court and the entire Federal judiciary. If the President makes his sixth nomination to the Supreme Court from members of his own political party it will constitute one of the most unjustifiable acts of rank partisanship in American history. A True World

There are three splendid letters in The Post of January 25, and I have cut them out for preservation. They refer to a "negotiated peace" and "Col. Lindbergh."

If people are to live on in this world it should be made fit for them to live in! A world ruled by a despot and tyrant, who ruthlessly destroys men, women and children, burning homes and hospitals, is a hell and not a home for sane people! Germany should be beaten until there is nothing left of her to fight, or to fight with! She was disarmed once—why was she ever allow to stock up with implements of destruction again? Her running mad set a bad example to Russia, Japan and Italy.

Let us hope it is not true that England cannot win with our help. She may not be able to win without it. Her winning will make France, Belgium, Holland, Poland, Denmark and Norway free nations once more. Is that worth our help? It is better to go down fighting for the right than to not fight at all!

"Cannot Understand . . ."

The Post of January 27 contains a dispatch to the effect that a large group of our citizens are coming to Washington in an effort to influence Congress to stop further assistance to Great Britain, fearing that a continuation of this help will put us into the war. I cannot understand why this group is so blind to the fact that it is a grave question whether Great Britain can survive without our help. There is no question but that Great Britain is a cushion between the United States and Germany.

Without Britain we would be in the war up to the hilt. Is it not very much better for us to give all our support to Britain now so that she can directly carry the fight to Germany without our getting into it ourselves. Let us do nothing now to discourage the British people, but on the contrary, let us do everything to boost their morale.

Behind The President

Trust your President to continue to serve the masses of the people of this country wisely. Trust Secretary Stimson, who is one of the truly great men of this country, President Roosevelt, in my opinion, could not have selected a better and more capable man for his Secretary of War than Stimson, and yet Stimson tells you just exactly the opposite of what Lindbergh and Wheeler and Nye and Clark have to say. Trust William Bullitt and trust Secretary of State Cordell Hull and you won't be misled. Pay no attention to the slurs against President Roosevelt. He is acting wisely in the best interests of this country.

A Footless Question

If there only could be another day in the history of the White House like that early morning when Senator Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts, called and found President Lincoln polishing shoes and asked: "Why, Mr. Lincoln, do you black your own boots?" To which Mr. Lincoln replied: "Whose shoes did you think I blacked?"

Marx And Christianity

In these widespread social upheavals the recent testimony of a world-famous Christian evangelist on the social influence of Marx from the standpoint of Christianity is worth noting: "Three times religion has had to make a major adjustment with modern science: When it had to alter its view of the universe because of the revelations of Copernican astronomy; when it had to revolutionize its view of creation and nature and come to terms with Darwin's theory of evolution; and today with its adjustment to the far more important modern science of economics, of which Marx, as the conscious economist of the poor, was the prophet.

"Marx reflected upon the heavy burden of suffering humanity and laid a scientific economic foundation for man's deliverance from poverty. The poor at last were to inherit the earth. We need his economic interpretation to understand the present world situation, though many still look upon Marx with deep aversion, just as people did in the day of the Copernicans and Darwin. But God is swiftly educating the world today and writing its lesson in skies which are red and lowering."

Martial Music.

A recent article in The Post states that Leopold Stokowski has been authorized by the War Department to modernize band music through reinstrumentation and rescoring, and to make it more typically American. This statement is disconcerting. Why change? Is anything more patriotic and truly American than the "Washington Post March," "Stars and Stripes Forever" and similar stirring compositions? Do the boys want any juggling around with arousing tunes already known and enjoyed, tunes that stir the blood and the soldiers' spirit? It would seem not.

Stokowski is a well-known orchestral director, foreign-born, an iconoclast and frequently an advocate of unpalatable cacophony of sound. He is also daring, determined and eccentric. The latter trait might be exemplified by a recent concert in Washington, when he placed the growling basses in front and the delicate woodwinds and violins in the back.

Sousa, had he lived, would have been the ideal for any innovation. Not Stokowski. The right military music with its swing, tunes, traditions, has a definite value at this crucial time.

In Praise Of Sen. Wheeler

In response to the views expressed in a letter signed C. O. P. in The Post of January 26, may I express agreement with him regarding the proper attitude that should be forthcoming from Senator Wheeler's colleagues. It is correct to say that one who has proven his patriotism, true liberalism and unquestioned statesmanship during a long period of unparalleled service to the Nation in recent history should have the sympathetic support and understanding of those would-be critics who, if stacked as high as the laws of nature permit, still would produce but a shadow by comparison, measured in terms of statesmanship, to that presented by the eminent Montanan.

May the likes of the Senator multiply and be long-lived and may those who are momentarily in high places, perhaps best explained by ever-present human frailty and shortcomings, learn to depend upon and be counseled by those possessed of sterling character and statesmanship such as is exemplified by Senator Wheeler. Why Can't You Be A Lady—Like Mom

YOU'RE 3 YEARS OLD today, but, so help me, you're still the baby! Why, when I was your age, young lady, I was already a dreat (I mean great) big man—and darned proud of it!

I'm 2½ years older than you and sometimes I feel like your father. Just like a doting parent (only I don't dote) I have to make sacrifices for you. I know as a person gets older he gets more sense, and I realize I'm getting along in years; but, drat it all, a guy likes to play with his own toys once in a while, and have them to himself in peace and quiet. But if you happen to get your greedy little eyes on something that I have, all you have to do is snatch, and if I don't give in like a "meeky" right away, then you set up one of those Indian wails of yours and it's up to me to make the supreme sacrifice. Because you're the "baby." Sometimes I get so sick of babies! I never take your toys away from you, do I? Or do I? Well, you can't blame a fellow for having his little revenge when nobody's looking.

To make matters worse, you have to be a girl! Boys can't fight girls; or so they tell me, when it looks as if I'm winning the argument. For the life of me I can't see why. You're fat and pudgy and you certainly look as if you could take it; fatter than I was at your age. I'll say! I had a good figure.

You're supposed to be smarter than I was when I was little. They say you learned to talk faster. Take it from me, sister, you have your big brother here to thank for that! I talked sense to you once in a while (at least when I was on speaking terms with you). You didn't have to learn the hard way like I did. You didn't have to listen to that baby prattle the old folks dish out. Such a dribbling dialect! Why I declare, even a pup couldn't understand the old folks' baby talk. No sir, Toots! I saw to it, from the very beginning, that you learned to talk without that insipid cradle accent!

ANOTHER thing. You make it very embarrassing for me when the fellows drop in. Not all of them have little sisters, I guess. Anyway, they're a bit shy. But does that stop you? No. You're so brazen, you force your company on us in spite of the fact that I've told you time and time again we don't want any women around. And goodness knows you're no social asset. You don't help the conversation a bit . . . you're no "life of the party" by any means! But you manage to let them know you're around, don't you—with that nasty little habit of yours of crying when you don't get your way. Maybe some of the fellows fall for that stuff, but I know all your little tricks too well!

And another thing. It gets a fellow down when he's just finished building a fairly substantial looking bridge that might look swell down in South America or over in India, if they wait long enough, and you waddle in and ruin it. You certainly are going to be a millstone around some poor guy's neck! The utter ruination of all his ambitions.

Maybe I've got the best break, after all. I only have to put up with you now. But I feel awfully sorry for that other poor fellow! Boy! He doesn't know what he's in for!

Maybe when he comes I'll tell him about you. I suppose that wouldn't go over so big with Mom; for it would sure spoil your matrimonial chances. But what the heck! Us fellows have to stick together. That's what Pop says. You know, Pop's a good guy. I'm glad he was lucky enough to get a nice girl like Mom. Gee, I hope they have some around like her when I grow up! Why can't you be a lady; like Mom?

BUT AS I WAS saying, I can't stand around and see a fine, clean-cut, serious-minded fellow like my brother-in-law get stuck for life with a frivolous dame like you; ready to take advantage of him every time his back is turned. Yes, and to his face, for that matter. I never saw any woman that could do more with a pair of eyes than you can!

Oh, I know you'll be able to wind the poor guy around your little finger; just like you do with Pop. And with Mom, too. I have to hand it to you. You sure can wow 'em; even if you haven't any looks to speak of. You're nearly as good as I was at your age. And I was clever! But they were stricter in the old days. Why, if I committed one-half the crimes that you do, I'd have been sent to bed for bad behavior so often that I'd have sleeping sickness by now!

Pay attention to me, because I have something pretty serious to tell you. I've been places, you know; I go to kindergarten. I see people and I've learned a lot. A lot about life. I've noticed that most of the children in kindergarten have more brothers and sisters than you and I have. Of course, I don't wish you any bad luck, b-a-b-y, but suppose we'd have a little brother or sister. Then where would you be? You wouldn't be "baby" any more. Boy, how you would squawk! I can see you now! But that's all part of life, see? You have to learn to take it. Here I am giving you some brotherly advice and what do you do? You fall asleep. All right, then—sleep. But don't say I didn't warn you—and don't come to me for sympathy if——

But heck, it won't happen to you. You were born with a bunny's foot in your pocket! KATE MARTIN.

'Buy-a-Bond' Campaign

By Ernest Lindley

Soon To Be Started

THE "BUY A BOND" campaign soon to be launched by the Treasury will be like the Liberty Loan drives of World War I in several respects. It is planned to mobilize community groups and form local committees to promote the sale of Government securities to individuals of all income levels.

The campaign will be chiefly educational, however. Treasury officials wish to avoid the superpatriotic overtones and high-pressure methods of Liberty Loan days. In World War I local committees assigned quotas to their fellow citizens and often dragooned them into buying bonds. As became the time, the whole business was surrounded by a sort of war frenzy.

Although the note of patriotism will not be lacking in the forthcoming campaign, the main emphasis will be on the economic advantage to the individual of buying bonds.

A SPECIAL effort will be made to induce buying by wage earners. Hundreds of thousands are receiving extra pay at overtime rates. Many of these, for the first time in many years, will earn more than they need for living expenses. Thus they become potential savers. The projected Treasury campaign will stress the wisdom of putting something aside for the future.

The Treasury probably will have to borrow about $17,000,000,000 in the next 18 months. About two-thirds of this will be new money, the rest refunding of securities now outstanding. The Treasury's aim is to obtain as much of the new money as possible from investors instead of from the banks. This policy was also strongly advocated in the special report to Congress of the Federal Reserve System, published on December 31.

The main purpose in fostering bond purchases by individuals is to prevent a major inflation of prices. When commercial banks buy the bonds, deposits are correspondingly increased, and with them the danger of inflation. When investors buy the bonds, deposits are not increased. When individuals, especially persons with small and medium incomes, buy them, Government spending is offset by a reduction in private spending.

WE ARE entering a period in which the effective demand for certain articles seems likely to exceed the supply. The natural tendency, under such circumstances, is for prices to rise sharply.

Government officials are trying to check this tendency by several means. One is by trying to foresee the bottlenecks and prevailing on industries to expand. Another is by obtaining the cooperation of various producing groups in holding prices reasonably stable, regardless of the demand. In a few cases, such as the lumber industry, threats have been resorted to openly.

In general, however, the upward pressure on prices can be relieved by increased saving by persons of moderate and small incomes. At the same time a reservoir odf purchasing power is accumulated, to be drawn upon after the rearmament boom has passed.

TREASURY officials, some of whom are veterans of the World War financing, have been working on plans for the "buy a bond" campaign for several months. Experts outside the Government have been consulted. The exact forms of the securities to be offerred have not yet been finally determined. But it seems probable that at least two types will be offered in addition to those now available.

The first will be something corresponding to the savings stamps of World War days. These will be for small investors who wish to save their money a few dollars at a time.

The second will be a long-term bond, maturing perhaps in 20 years—although 30- and 40-year maturities have been discussed. These may be combination interest-bearing and discount bonds.

The present United States Saving Bonds are discount bonds. You pay $75 for a bond which has a face value of $100, and for which you will receive $100 if you hold it ten years. The interest accumulates and is reflected in the sum you receive when you redeem your bond. It is on a sliding scale, however, so that you have an inducement to hold the bond for the full ten-year period.

THE COMBINATION type now proposed would discourage redemption during the first five years, but would yield enough to be attractive to long-term investors.

The sale of Savings Bonds will be continued, but the interest rate—now 2.9 over the ten-year period—may be reduced and the maximum which one person is allowed to buy annually may be lowered from $10,000 to $5,000. This, it is anticipated, would encourage investment in the new longer-term bonds to be offered.

A final purpose in the campaign will be to spread ownership of the Federal debt as widely as possible. Secretary Morgenthau has long held the belief that the ownership of a Federal security, like the payment of taxes, promotes interest in the affairs of the national Government, and especially in sound fiscal management.

Several million more Federal security owners could be a useful and enduring check on monetary and fiscal policies which might lead to a disastrous inflation.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

A Peace Offensive

BOTH IN THE hearings before Congress, in the press, and on the various forums of the air, the question is constantly arising: Why does not Britain state her peace aims?

The answer to that is very simple; Britain cannot state her peace aims. For peace aims mean a plan of reconstruction and Britain cannot make any kind of reconstruction apart from us.

THE PEACE of the world for many centuries depends on the solution of two questions; that of Britain versus the Continent of Europe; and that of Europe versus the Americas. The failure to solve either of these problems in 1918 is the basic reason why this war could occur.

The solution of the whole world problem depends upon the relations between continental Europe, the British Commonwealth and North America.

In continental Europe, Britain and North America, are concentrated approximately nine-tenths of all the technology, machinery, industry and science of the globe, that is to say the ultimate economic and military power of the earth.

If Europe, Great Britain and North America can settle their affairs in a manner which will assure peace and cooperation between them, there will not be another major war in the lifetime of our children, and their children's children, and their children's children.

THOMPSON: "Our problem is to turn Hitler's destruction into an eventual blessing to mankind instead of a curse"

A SOLUTION of these relations therefore must be our aim, in war or in peace.

It is the German peace aim. The German peace aim is to effect this settlement by the defeat of Britain, by the consolidation of the British Isles and the continent under the exclusive domination of Germany, and by forcing the Americas into the new order by economic, political and military pressure.

If the Nazis succeed in Europe, South America will immediately be a pushover for this, because of economic necessities.

The triumph of the German plan might keep the peace, once we were rendered powerless, but it would keep it in a Nazi world at the cost of the encirclement of North America and the obliteration of all freedom. The Nazi program is absolutely incompatible with the maintenance of our basic institutions. It would be based on monopolized force and would be hell.

BUT WE HAVE still got to solve the problem—and defeating Germany is no more a program than keeping out of war is a program! The idea current in reactionary minds that Germany be defeated and broken up, and Europe again pulverized into small sovereign states, with America and Britain maintaining their power by the division of Europe, would only mean another war in another 30 years.

A great many people in France held that idea, but the British mind is a large mind and is accustomed to think in world terms, whereas the French mind has been provincial, and accustomed to think wholly in terms of French security.

A SOLUTION for the problem, compatible both with the historic desire of the European Continent to unite and with the freedom and equality of the peoples of Europe with each other, and with the peoples of the British Federation of Nations, and with the Republics of America, North and South, would seem to be:

1. A United States of the Continent of Europe, in all probability established by interlocking federations of northern and southern blocks, in which certain matters, notably defense, customs and currency, are no longer matters of individual national sovereignty.

That would give Germany more influence on the Continent than that possessed by any other single nation of people, but it would not give her more influence than all the others put together.

2. The guaranteeing of the freedom and independence of the British Isles, Commonwealth and any parts of the empire that freely wish to join this Commonwealth on equal terms. The British Isles themselves to be mutually guaranteed both by the Americas and by the Continent of Europe.

This could best be accomplished, in my mind, by the union of the English-speaking world—of Britain and the Commonwealth with the United States in a loose federation.

3. A peace ratified between this federation and the federation of the European Continent—or between the three federations, Continent, Britain, America—and a common program of both or all for the development by colonization of the unused areas of this earth, and for free and equal access to raw materials.

The two or three federations must undertake to guarentee the freedom of the seas and to enforce the peace of the world, something they could do at infinitely less cost than that of their own rival armaments for the last twenty years.

OBVIOUSLY these cannot be British aims, for the simple reason that Britain is not strong enough to secure or enforce such a program.

But they might very well be British, American and German aims, since they are obviously in the equal interests of everybody concerned—if justice, equality and peace are what we are looking for. And if Britain and America decide together on such aims, and keep the Nazis from winning the war, Hitler is defeated.

SINCE GOD MOVES in a mysterious way his wonders to perform, and since, as Goethe remarks in "Faust," the evil spirit often promotes the good, even Hitler has done a lot to help us realize these aims, because he has brought home to every nation in Europe the realization that their national sovereignties and their ideas of neutrality are invitations to suicide, not to independence.

I, therefore, am for a peace offensive from this country and from Britain, but not a peace offensive for a negotiated peace between two incompatible concepts, but a peace offensive for a real new order between Europe, Britain and America, an order that makes as much sense for Germany as for anyone.

IT IS RIDICULOUS to think that there is nobody in Germany who would be open to such ideas. You cannot destroy the brains of a country in seven years. Our object should not be to destroy Germany, but to destroy Hitlerism in order that Germany and the rest of us can live.

Our defeatism consists in timidity before concepts that are as large as Hitler's, but much more sensible.

Our problem is to turn Hitler's destruction into an eventual blessing to mankind instead of a curse.

WHEN EUROPE and we find the framework in which we can collaborate, and be certain of peace with each other, this world is in for the greatest period of prosperity, development and liberation that it has ever known in human history.

[No United States of Europe can be set up on the American pattern, which is the detailed fault, in my mind, of Mr. Streit's plan. Two European Federations—the Swiss Republic and the old Austro-Hungarian monarchy—are more likely to furnish basic suggestions.]

License To Graft

THE GREAT pick-and-shovel shakedown department of the American Federation of Labor, which at present is extorting some vast sums from horny-handed American toilers of the poorest bracket, is governed by an exclusive, self-perpetuating group of labor racketeers who never confide in the rank-and-file members, or slaves. Joe Moreschi, the president of the racket, known officially as the International Hod-Carriers' Building and Common Laborers' Union, just eased into the presidency by vote or conspiracy of the executive board on the death of Dominick D'Allessandro, in 1926, and since the time of the last international convention of the shake, 31 years ago, no vacancy in any international office has been filled by popular vote. The bosses just get together and decide whom to cut in on the racket without saying aye, yes or no to members.

Possibly no such decision was submitted to the members or any elected representatives of the members for some years before that. But a span of 31 years without elections, conventions or reports to the membership surely is enough to prove the character of the racket which controls 250,000 stiffs in all parts of the country and bleeds out of their small and intermittent earnings upward of $6,000,000 a year.

OF THIS enormous shake the international gets a little over $1,000,000 a year in per capita taxes at the rate of 35 cents per head per month, plus $5 out of each initiation fee—provided, of course, that the gangsters who have charge of some of the locals don't forget to kick in.

It is unlikely that the hoodlums would be so foolish as to hold out, however, because the boys in charge of the international may easily cancel the charter of an unethical gorilla, which, after all, is a valuable license to graft from employers and extort from workers.

This year, with the locals shaking down former members of the WPA force, farmers and casual laborers for permission to work on cantonments and other rearmament projects, the international should collect at least $0,000 and perhaps twice that many $5 dividends on the initiation fees. So the total receipts of, Moreschi's office should run well over $1,250,000.

They just don't bother to tell the rank and file what they do with all this money. They don't like to worry the poor, dumb rank and file with big figures. But they do pay a modest office expense, including the cost of charters, or racketeering licenses, for enterprising gorillas starting new locals, and there is a theory that they sometimes pay a death benefit of from $50 to $200, Although in Chicago, when that subject was mentioned to members of the mob, they offered no book figures but just smiled.

SOME OF the locals have a theoretical $5 a week accident benefit for members injured on the job, but, again referring to Chicago, the 25 local unions were all held in the single ownership of an old-time gunman of the South Side prostitution trade named Mike Carrozzo, and he was bashful about his generosities.

Incidentally, although $200 is the maximum theoretical death benefit, after a man passes his sixtieth birthday, though he may have been a member all his working life, the maximum drops to $50. As death becomes more probable the racket, with its vast take from the earnings of the sucker, shies away from him.

Of course, it will be discovered that William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, has been utterly unaware of the nature of this racket all this time, for Mr. Green being a man who likes to think good thoughts of his associates in the cause of labor with an uppercase L.

BUT IN MAY, 1931, Mr. Green was one of those invited to a testimonial dinner in Boston in honor of Moreschi as that great crusader for the rights, and dues, of the pick-and-shovel stiff prepared to shove off for Bristol, England, as a fraternal delegate of the A. F. of L. to the British Trades Union Congress. Mr. Green did not attend, but Frank H. McCarthy, New England organizer of the A. F. of L., officially represented him at a feast adorned by the presence of Army and Navy officers, the Italian Consul and other persons of rank and note.

Mr. Moreschi was praised as "a man and leader of men," and sailed away for England to view the quaintly scrupulous financial and electoral customs of unionism there, bearing in his pocket "a substantial check" from his devoted followers.

"Mr. Moreschi," said a news story of the following morning, "has been similarly feted by members of unions of his organization throughout the country in recognition of his services and of the honor paid him by the A. F. of L. in selecting him as its delegate."

Capper to Offer District Public Defender Bill

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, announced yesterday he will reintroduce a bill to create an office of public defender in the U. S. District Court in Washington and expressed confidence that it will have united support.

The measure is similar to a measure offered last year except for minor changes. One of these specifies that the public defender, who shall be paid $7,000 a year, must "devote himself exclusively to the duties of the office."

The public defender would be appointed by the President for a term of four years. Asssitants may be named by the Attorney General.

Financing Defense

By Anna P. Youngman

Do We Need A Dual Budget System?

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU intends to withhold recommendations for new taxes until the March 15 income tax payments have been made. It will then be possible to estimate more accurately the amount of revenue derivable from existing taxes, particularly those voted in 1940. The requirements of the defense program will also be better known. However, it is none too soon for Congress to consider whether defense costs are to be treated as extraordinary outlays to be financed largely or entirely by borrowing or regarded as additions to budgetary expenditures to be covered by current tax receipts insofar as the country's taxable capacity permits.

The present set-up makes no provision for any kind of extraordinary budget, although the separate classification of so-called emergency expenditures for recovery and relief is a by-product of the depression years which might eventually become the basis for a dual budget system. However, our budgetary classifications of expenditures are extremely unreliable for purposes of comparison from year to year, due to the shifting of items from one category to another. As a result, Senator Byrd, who has a keen eye for detecting budgetary idiosyncrasies, has had an expert from the General Accounting Office prepare revised summaries of classified expenditures for his personal use in order to put the figures on a more strictly comparable basis.

AS DR. H. DEWEY ANDERSON says in a study on "Taxation, Recovery and Defense," prepared for the Temporary National Economic Committee, scientific budget construction is in its infancy in the United States, and much remains to be done before it would be possible to set up any dual budget system. Dr. Anderson himself thinks that eventually the country should have a two-budget system consisting (1) of a current expense budget to cover items of customary budgeting and (2) a capital or investment account budget to take care of economic emergencies and provide employment during depression. Indeed, this kind of dual budget system seems essential from the viewpoint of those who believe that the Government ought to increase spending when times are bad and use the surpluses of good years to retire the indebtedness contracted in depression years.

Dr. Anderson concedes that this type of dual budgeting is not simple either in theory or practice. In any case it is "out of the window" for the present because demands for a dual budget are now coming from an entirely different quarter. Recovery and relief expenditures no longer hold the spotlight; defense outlays have become an insurmountable obstacle to budget balancing. Hence there is a call for a dual budget system based on a segregation of defense from nondefense expenditures. The approbation accorded suggestions of this kind by some of the severest critics of dual budgeting along the lines indicated above is disquieting, especially as it is frequently followed by recommendations that defense outlays be financed without adding to present tax burdens.

OBJECTIONS to the dual budget system are due to the fact that in most countries where it has been employed the system has been used as a blind for loose financial practices. When the public is told that the regular or ordinary budget is in balance, it is less inclined to worry about deficits that may be piling up in so-called extraordinary accounts. As a result the pressure to economize or alternatively vote new taxes to cover outlays is relaxed. Such practical objections to the dual budget system apply with especial force to proposals to throw all defense expenditures into a separate budget. There would certainly be a great temptation to underestimate the need for new taxes to cover a greater part of the defense cost, if a dual budget were to be established along the lines strongly suggested in the President's recent budget message. Mr. Roosevelt presented a compact little table of estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1942 assigning $10,811,000,000 to the defense program, $3,196,000,000 to fixed commitments, and $3,478,000,000 to other activities—making a total of $17,485,000,000. Excluding the defense outlays, the remaining expenditures amount to only $6,674,000,000. If revenue should rise to $9,000,000,000, in 1942, as the President assumes, a very substantial surplus of about $2,300,000,000 would be available to apply toward the current costs of the defense program. Why vote additional taxes then?

The answer is that a defense budget so constituted would include ordinary recurrent expenses of the defense program as well as extraordinary outlays. Even the salaries of the Secretaries of War and Navy are included in the $10,811,000,000 total. During the first two years of the Hoover Administration we were spending over $700,000,000 yearly on national defense. Following a drop in 1933 and 1934, defense outlays began to rise again, amounting to over $800,000,000 (regular and emergency, in 1935); $1,010,000,000 in 1939, and $1,530,000,000 in 1940. To obtain any fair idea of the cost of running the Government in normal times at least $1,000,000,000 and probably a good deal more should be allowed to cover recurrent defense costs. That would bring total ordinary expenditures for 1942 to $7,800,000,000 leaving only $1,400,000,000 to apply to emergency defense costs.

HOWEVER, it is very doubtful whether even this reduced sum would be available. Certainly not, if Congress follows its customary practice of voting for unbudgeted expenditures. Nondefense expenditure estimates for 1942 are about $400,000,000 below the estimates of 1941, if the capital surpluses returned to the Government by corporations are excluded from consideration, as they should be. The difference is accounted for by the reduction in work relief requirements. But voices are already being raised in protest against the proposed reduction in WPA outlays. The argument now advanced is that WPA projects such as roads, airports, etc., are essential defense activities that must not be cut off. Of course, much the same could be said for many types of governmental activity. The ease with which the concept of defense can be expanded to embrace diverse activities is another very strong argument against a dual budget system to separate defense from nondefense expenditures.

Assuming that the budgeted estimates for relief are not raised, that Congress refrains from voting increases for other nondefense purposes, and that tax receipts come up to expectations—all highly improbable suppositions—the tax revenue on hand in 1942 after all ordinary, recurrent expenses have been met would cover a pitifully small proportion of the total defense bill allocated to that year. And in addition, consideration must be given to the deficits piling up this year and the following years in which the defense program will be developing. Its total cost is placed by the President at $28,400,000,000, not including additional billions required to step up aid for Britain and for other purposes.

DEFENSE SPENDING will lead inevitably to inflation if borrowing occurs on such an extensive scale as to exhaust the Nation's savings and force the Treasury to rely upon the banks to purchase billions of Government bonds on credit. That happened during the World War and we do not want it to happen again. The way to avoid disaster is to keep budget deficits as low as possible by tapping new sources of taxable income in ways that do not interfere seriously with the execution of the defense program. The financial road ahead of us is a hard one; it will not be made any easier to travel by setting up a separate defense budget and labeling the deficits "extraordinary."

Hitler's Latest

By Barnet Nover

Thursday At The Sportspalast

IN DAYS GONE by it was enough for Hitler to announce that he was going to make a speech to set in motion a great tremor of alarm in all neighboring lands. And every word of his long-winded and fuliginous harangues was listened to with fascinated attention by a frightened world.

Indeed, the great majority of Hitler's earlier speeches were directed far more to foreign nations and peoples than to the Fuehrer's own regimented countrymen. Each of these pronouncements was in one way or another an application of that strategy of terror which won so many easy victories for the Third Reich. They were designed to disarm those nations who were living in the hope that the Nazi lightning would not strike them and to increase the fear of those who were marked out as Hitler's next victims. And they did their job. Hitler's speeches were oratorical barrages that cleared the way for the occupation of the Rhineland, the annexation of Austria, Munich, the war on Poland, the invasion of Denmark, Norway and the Low Countries, the collapse of France.

AFTER FRANCE fell, Hitler tried that strategy of terror against the British. When verbal threats failed to cow them he tried more lethal instruments.

NOVER: "Hitler's . . . speech is additional proof that the hour of decision draws near"

Since August, Great Britain has been subjected to fearful punishment. But her spirit is unbroken. And what incendiary and explosive bombs, marine mines and U-boats have failed to do, speeches by him certainly will not be able to do.

No doubt Hitler knows it. His Sportspalast address was full of predictions of the dire fate that, he insists, is in store for Great Britain, regardless of the kind and volume of assistance it may receive from the United States. But the Fuehrer cannot help but realize that these threats will have no effect on the British. Those who had stood up to German bombers will hardly be intimidated by an air rifle.

HIS SPEECH, then, must be regarded as intended very largely for home consumption. As such, the pattern is easily discernible.

The German people must be asking themselves a lot of questions these days. They must be wondering why the spectacular victories of last year did not produce that final triumph which Nazi spokesmen and the Nazi press had repeatedly declared was just around the corner. They are certainly not unaware of what has been happening to Germany's ally, Italy. The German press had played up the British evacuation of Berbera as the beginning of the end of the British Empire in Africa, the Italian capture of Sidi Barrani as proof that the fall of Suez was not far off. No amount of praise of Italian heroism can delude Germans into believing that the capture of Sidi Barrani, Sollum, Bardia, Tobruk and Derna are Axis triumphs.

The German people have furthermore been told, and told repeatedly, that London is in ruins, that Goering's Luftwaffe commands the air over Britain, that British industry is in a desperate state. Yet the nightly visitations of R. A. F. bombers give the lie to this oft-told tale of British weakness. And the censorship has not been able to keep from Germans the news that the United States is on its way to becoming in a very real sense the "arsenal of the democracies." Those Germans who lived through the first World War are under no illusions as to what this may mean to the Reich.

HITLER'S speech was primarily an attempt to answer these questions, resolve these doubts, replace the growing German skepticism regarding the promised victory by renewed belief in the certainty of a German triumph, and one, moreover, that is to be achieved in the not-too-distant future.

How well he succeeded in this endeavor there is no way of knowing. The important thing at this time is that he found it necessary to try. That is why he went to great lengths to minimize the effectiveness of America's potential contribution to Great Britain. He declared that this aid would come too late, that Great Britain was already licked, that Germany is now "fully prepared for whatever may happen in relation to America's help," indeed, that "when we were forced into this war we had plans even then for this emergency."

For the same reason he boasted of Germany's tremendous strength which with her present resources can be "a thousand times as strong as the strength we have already displayed" and minimized the rumors of Italian weakness.

THE SPEECH was, even more than the one of December 10, a pep-talk to the German people. Because of this, however, one must not assume that Germany is weak, that the German people are ready to rebel, that Hitler's pledge of total war on a greater scale than ever with the purpose of bringing about "the total destruction of England" is a bluff.

Indeed, the very circumstance that Hitler has found it necessary to bolster Germany's morale, hold out the promise of a victory this year suggests that he is likely very soon to throw everything Germany has into the scales in order to win such a decision in that time. For Germany to wait would be fatal to Hitler's chances of victory by increasing the strength of his enemies abroad, by multiplying the number of doubters at home. Hitler's Sportspalast speech is additional proof that the hour of decision draws near.

Many New Ways to Serve Same Old Steaks, Chops

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor

HAVE YOU ever started to plan a meal and then wished that someone would invent a new animal because you are so weary of the same old steaks, chops and roasts? There is little hope of a new animal being created so the next best thing to do is to try cooking the old familiars in new ways and serving them more attractively.

Martha Ellyn

Veal kidney chops, highly praised by the epicure, are luckily enough, cosmopolitan in nature so that they can be enjoyed by the family at home. And when the chops are thoroughly cooked and served surrounded by mashed potato baskets on toast squares, and filled with green lima beans, there is little more to be desired.

With so much emphasis being placed on the need for vitamins in the diet to keep citizens in good health for any national emergency, it is well to remember that meat specilities, including kidneys, provide vitamin A and the three important components of vitamin B—thiamine, riboflavin, nicotinic acid. So veal chops are a nonchalant way for giving an extra serving of health. Try making veal chops this way:

Veal Kidney Chops—Braise veal chops, dredge them with flour and brown them on both sides in hot fat. The browning is one of the most important steps, so be sure that the meat is well browned on all sides before the liquid is added. After the chops are a rich, brown color, season with salt, pepper and paprika. Then pour a small amount of sour cream for flavor accent. About 1 cupful will be needed for 6 chops. Cover the meat and cook until done. It will take from 45 to 60 minutes

As long as women have luncheons there are sure to be lamb chops. And this dish usually gets a hearty response from gentlemen, too. Lamb chops to be at their best should be cut thick, so when broiled the outside will be nicely browned and the inside tender and juicy. Have the butcher french the chops (cut the meat from the ends of the rib bones), then frills may be slipped over the rib ends.

Broiled Lamb Chops—Thoroughly heat the oven, place the chops on the broiler rack far enough from the flame or heating element, so by the time they are browned they will be about half done. If the oven regulator is turned to "high" this means a distance of about 3 inches. If the distance must be less, the temperature should be lowered accordingly. When the chops are nicely browned, season them with salt and pepper, turn, and allow to brown and finish cooking on the other side. Lamb chops cut ¾ of an inch thick require 10 to 12 minutes for broiling.

Roast breast of veal with raisin stuffing should be served by every cook interested in cutting the food budget. Veal has an unusually savory flavor when cooked in this roll form and makes an attractive serving. A friend of mine associated with the California Foods Research Institute told me about making this dish. Here are the directions:

Roast Breast of Veal with Raisin Stuffing—Have butcher bone 4 pounds of breast of veal. Rub inside and out with salt and pepper. Make the dressing this way: Sift 1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour with ¾ teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and 1½ tablespoons granulated sugar. Add ½ cup yellow corn meal and mix. Add 1½ cups milk and 1 beaten egg and beat all thoroughly. Fry on a hot griddle. When fried break into small cakes. Rinse 2/3 cup seedless raisins in hot water and drain. Fry 1/3 cup finely cut onion and ¼ cup chopped mushrooms in a small quantity of fat until onion is wilted but not brown. Combine prepared cakes, raisins, onions and mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste and ½ cup broth, or butter and water, and blend thoroughly. Lay the veal out flat, spread stuffing on boned side and roll as for jelly roll. Sew up or hold firmly together with skewers. More stuffing may be inserted in ends after the meat is rolled and sewed. Rub the outside with fat and place in baking pan or roaster. Bake uncovered in moderate oven, 300 degrees, about 3 hours or until meat is tender.

Pork chops can be "just pork chops" or the best pork chops you've ever eaten. Usually it's the difference between proper and improper cooking that determines the classification. Pork chops, to be at their best, should be cooked slowly by braising. It's only by long, slow and thorough cooking that you get the real benefit of the full, rich flavor of pork. Extra flavor and goodness are also in store if you have the chops cut about an inch thick or at least three-quarters of an inch.

Braised Pork Chops—Dredge the chops with flour and season with salt and pepper. Brown well on fat edges then brown both sides. Cover closely and cook slowly, turning occasionally for even browning. This will take about 45 minutes for 1-inch chops. Pork chops cooked this way have a lusciously browned, almost glazed exterior and a white, tender, juicy interior. Always give pork plenty of time in cooking, the results will be worth the time and effort.

For a different flavor, a clove of garlic may be placed in the pan while browning the chops, then removed. A bayleaf may also be used for flavor variety.

Glazed Apple Rings—Apple slices used as a garnish are an appropriate accompaniment for pork chops. To make them, boil 1 cup sugar and ½ cup water for 5 minutes. Do not peel apples, but slice into three-quarter slices. Place apple slices in pan with syrup, cover tightly and simmer slowly until apples are tender, but not soft.

LAMB CHOPS—Instead of serving lamb chops with the traditional mint jelly, try garnishing with fresh mint and place in center of serving platter a whole tomato cut in wedges and topped with sprig of mint

BREAST OF VEAL—Roast breast of veal with raisin stuffing is an economical dish chuck full of savory flavor. Veal prepared in roll form needs but a parsley garnish to make it a distinctive dish

PORK CHOPS—Pork chops are an old standby with many cooks. To serve them at their best have them cut thick and cook slowly by braising method. Serve with glazed apple rings as pictured here

KIDNEY VEAL CHOPS—The chops pictured here are being served with mashed potato baskets, made by tubing the potatoes around a square of toast and filling center with green lima beans

Peanuts Used Now in Many Cooked Dishes

THE DAY of confining peanut eating to circus, ball game and other such events is past. Now the peanut has found its way into the kitchen in many kinds of cooked dishes and baked products. Peanuts now have their own week in the line up of national food weeks that are being observed.

According to Albert M. Dickson, who is in charge of the peanut marketing program of the Surplus Marketing Administration, United States Department of Agriculture, this year's harvest of peanuts is the largest on record. So that means we have lots of peanuts to consume.

To those who are surprised at the idea of using peanuts as a main dish, nutritionists explain that the food values found in peanuts give them the right to headline any meal. Like nuts, peanuts are rich in fat; and they are rich in protein, as are legumes. They are also a good source of phosphorus and vitamin B1. Aside from having merit as a valuable food they have decided appeal on the basis of flavor. They are especially good when baked in cookies, cakes, biscuits, or rolls. Peanuts are so rich in fat that they may take the place of part or all the shortening in some recipes. For example, use less fat in biscuits that have peanut butter added, and make peanut butter drop cookies with peanut butter as the only source of fat. Here is a recipe for making peanut butter biscuit, worked out in the experimental kitchens of the Bureau of Home Economics.

Recpie for Peanut Butter Biscuit

Peanut Butter Biscuit—Combine 2 cups sifted flour with ¾ teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder and rub 4 tablespoons peanut butter and 2 tablespoons fat into the flour with the tips of the fingers. Make a well in this dry mixture and stirring from the center, slowly add enough milk to make a soft dough. Knead slightly, pat to about ½ inch thickness on a lightly floured board, and cut into rounds. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees for about 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

The Bureau of Home Economics also says it is easy enough to make peanut butter at home with an ordinary meat grinder equipped with a very fine blade. The peanuts must be roasted first, either purchased that way or roasted in the oven at home. Use peanuts with the shells and skins removed, and grind the nuts two or three times so the butter is fine and granular, but not pasty. Mix a little salt with the peanut butter and add a little bland table oil if it seems too dry. Pack into a dish or jar that can be covered tightly and keep in a cool place.

But the use of peanut butter is not confined to sandwiches for it makes a soup that is entirely different and delicious. Simply blend peanut butter with the juice from canned or cooked tomatoes, and add a little flour. Then add the hot cooked tomatoes and season with salt and pepper.

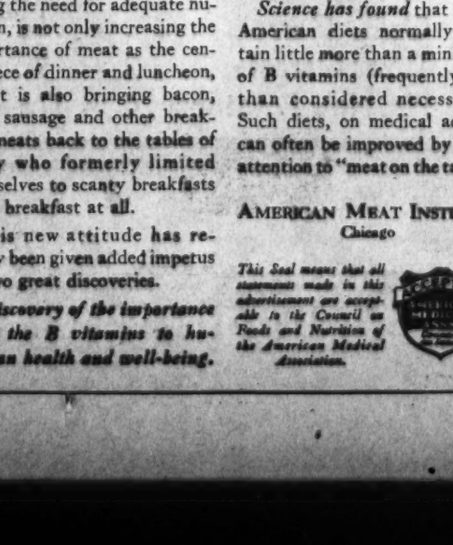
The New Importance of B VITAMINS in MEAT



The great new knowledge of nutrition now sweeping the country recognizes meat for its important place in a well-balanced diet.

On the advice of their physicians, many who once believed meat to be bad for high blood pressure, kidney disorders and other conditions are again enjoying the flavor and benefits of meat.

Women are finding that they can reduce more safely and comfortably on diets liberal in lean meat, and therefore liberal in complete, high quality proteins.

This newer knowledge, recognizing the need for adequate nutrition, is not only increasing the importance of meat as the centerpiece of dinner and luncheon, but it is also bringing bacon, ham, sausage and other breakfast meats back to the tables of many who formerly limited themselves to scanty breakfasts or no breakfast at all.

This new attitude has recently been given added impetus by two great discoveries.

1. Discovery of the importance of the B vitamins to human health and well-being.
2. Discovery of meat as one of the good natural sources of at least three important B vitamins.

These are: thiamine (vitamin B_1), riboflavin (vitamin B_2) and the anti-pellagra vitamin. All are important for growth and appetite and as protection against certain diseases and nervous disorders arising from their deficiency.

Science has found that many American diets normally contain little more than a minimum of B vitamins (frequently less than considered necessary). Such diets, on medical advice, can often be improved by more attention to "meat on the table."

Gas Tax Boost Urged to Add 100 Policemen

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

An increase of 1 cent in the District gasoline tax which, if is estimated, would raise $1,500,000—to finance an estimated cost of $250,000 for 100 additional policemen, was proposed and indorsed yesterday as a House subcommittee opened another inquiry on traffic.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., stated flatly that the District's general revenue fund could not bear the added cost of 100 more policemen, and declared that the highway fund does not bear a fair share of the cost of traffic patrol at present.

He said he would not object to an increase of 1 cent in the gas tax, provided the revenue were used exclusively for traffic purposes.

Chairman Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, thereafter indorsed the proposal, as he insisted that the 100 more police for traffic duty were essential.

Jail for Speeders Urged

Police Judge John P. McMahon suggested a mandatory jail sentence for excessive speeding "if the subcommittee is interested in reducing accidents."

Women drivers, tourists, university students and motorists with diplomatic immunity were blamed for many of Washington's traffic problems by Charles G. Morgan, jr., secretary of the District Trucking Association.

Attending the hearing were Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, chairman of a special Traffic Subcommittee of the Senate District Committee, and members of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations.

Senator Burton took copious notes but did not participate in the cross-examination or discussion.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, insisted that a survey of street lighting is needed, although Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, said that a study had been made and that recommendations were now being tested.

McCoach Disagrees With Brown

Engineer Commissioner McCoach took issue with some of the statistics offered by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and commented that "more police is not a cure-all" for th ecity's traffic problems.

McCoach suggested that legislation be enacted to change the law relating to the portion of police costs that may be assessed against the highway fund. The limitation is now 15 per cent, but the Engineer Commissioner pointed out that this does not take into account the retirement fund and the park police. Actually, he said, the highway fund bears only about 11 per cent of police costs, whereas 12 per cent of the police force are on full-time traffic duty.

Maj. Brown pointed out that the Metropolitan Police Department had grown by only 13.9 per cent during the last decade, while the population increased 36.2 per cent.

Judge McMahon expressed the opinion that the chief causes of accidents are speeding and violation of the right-of-way rule, which he called "abominable." When the speed limit was 22 miles an hour, he said, most people drove from 30 to 40. When it was raised to 25 miles an hour, they stepped up the average speed another 5 to 10 miles.

Bates Hints at "Fixing"

Without recommending it, Judge McMahon said that a mandatory jail sentence of from two to ten days which could not be suspended would slow up the speeders. He did not suggest for what speed the jail sentence should be imposed.

"That isn't going to solve the problem," snapped Representative Bates. "The trouble is that the court too often lets 'em go after a certain amount of pulling and hauling around."

"They don't pull and haul me around," retorted Judge McMahon.

Representative Schulte said that when the subcommittee meets again he probably would hold a night session to continue the inquiry, after consulting other members of his subcommittee.

Keech to Probe Modification Of Charges

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A possible shakeup in the Police Court Corporation Counsel's office loomed last night as Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech announced plans for a thorough investigation of traffic cases in which original charges have been altered or modified.

Keech said he would head the inquiry. His action was prompted by a story in The Post yesterday in which it was shown that a local lawyer, accused of driving while drunk, escaped with a $25 fine on the charge of driving on the wrong side of a street after the more serious count had been nolle prossed by an assistant corporation counsel.

Calling for a complete report on the incident, Keech said he wanted to know "all the facts in this case and any others which might exist," and indicated he would take drastic action if any evidences of laxity among his Police Court assistants were disclosed.

"I consider the Police Court branch one of the most important parts of my office," said the chief prosecutor, "and in view of the present traffic situation, I feel its functions should be conducted with maximum efficiency, above reproach."

There are four assistant corporation counsels assigned to Police Court. They work independently of one another, nad there is no single person charged with overseeing the offices activities.

In this connection, Keech said he planned at the "earliest possible moment" to assign a man full-time to head the office and report periodically to him on the handling and dispositions of all cases.

Keech, appointed corporation counsel November 1, had earlier announced intentions of looking into Police Court procedures, but wanted to wait until he "got his feet on the ground" in his new job.

"I don't want to jump at conclusions without a personal investigation of the whole setup," he said yesterday, "and I think the time has come for that investigation. I will start it at once."

The case cited in yesterday's Post was the second within recent weeks that directed attention to Police Court procedure in traffic matters. In another instance, a motorist charged with driving while drunk waited more than one year for a trial. During that period, it was admitted, attempts were made to change the charge to a lesser count and avoid a trial if the man would plead guilty. He finally was exonerated in a jury trial.

The Police Court corporation counsel's office has long been referred to as a "training school" for young attorneys. While drawing a salary from the District, the prosecutors, it has been charged, receive a free education in the rudiments of court work and then resign to enter private practice.

Strubing Case To Jury Today

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 30 (AP).—The case of Joseph Spell, 31, colored butler accused of criminal attack upon Mrs. John K. Strubing, jr., of Greenwich, is expected to go to the jury tomorrow.

Prosecutor Lorin W. Willis in his summation demanded the maximum penalty of 30 years' imprisonment for Spell, whom the society matron testified thrice attacked her on December 10, forced her to write a ransom note, then hurled her, bound and gagged, into a lonely Westchester, N. Y., reservoir. Court was adjourned until tomorrow morning, when Judge Carl Foster said he would deliver his charge.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur ("Bugs") Baer.

I saw Willkie's picture, ready for a London air raid, and it gave me an idea to brighten the war up. I'm going to get a job painting smiles on gas masks.

Wendell didn't win the election but he got a nice trip out of it. A traveling salesman always has more fun than the fellow who owns the factory.

Whether we get into the war depends mostly on how far a tall fellow can wade before he has to swim.

Congress just about voted Franklin D. power to do most anything, including backing a Broadway musical comedy.

That's about the only thing more expensive than war. I see the towns that got PWA bridges have now got munitions plants. So you can expect the bridges to get blown up any minute now.

For the next two years Franklin D. can run the works. He will have a tough time stopping profiteering in wartime. Profiteering is oiling the monkey wrench instead of the machinery.

Right now I would say our position in the war is pretty much like a fellow fishing through the ice.

It's good sport but we will have to get away from there before the thaw starts in.

Crude Chromos of Early Days Inspire New Style Designs

Grandmother's era is taking over in women's fashions. Hand crocheting highlights this "Nasty Blue" wool dress created by John-Fredrics. Mr. John, who is the designer of the firm, got his inspiration from his collection of American primitive paintings. Crocheted strips trim the bodice of the dress and wool lace embroidery decorates the hemline of the skirt. The "Jealous Yellow" accessories also have crochet trim

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor.

Early American limners would perhaps be shocked if they knew their treasured paintings were inspiring American designers. Mr. John, the designer of John-Fredrics, who is a collector of Early American art, has found the vigorous colorings and crude subject matter of these paintings enchanting in simplicity, and a source of inspiration in his work.

Mr. John, in the study of his hobby, found the reason for the strange relationship the faces in the paintings bore to the bodies and dress of the subjects. The artists of the period sometimes painted the bodies in large cities where they could find the newest fashions. Then they took their partly finished paintings to households of the countryside in search of patrons wealthy enough to pay for having their own portraits painted into the pictures. This accounts for the curious distorted charm of these early artistic efforts.

Examination of the costume details of these canvases gives an appreciation of fabrics, needlework, knitting and crocheting typical in early American dress. They inspired Mr. John to design a whole wardrobe, borrowing from these clothes of the past to make modern costumes for the future. Special emphasis in his designs is placed on brilliant colors and decorative crocheted touches.

Such colors as "Mean Red," "Funny Beige," "Nasty Blue" and "Jealous Yellow" appear in silk, jersey and wool voiles for two-piece suits, street dresses, evening dresses and accessories—handbags, hats and gloves. There also are bright colored crocheted hat pins and crocheted trim for dresses and suits. Harking back to the authentic costumes are the red crochet pantalettes that are worn with these outfits.

With American designers looking to their forefathers for the source of their inspiration, there's no limit to what they will discover next. All of which proves we had to be thrown on our own to appreciate the riches of our land.

How Induce Husband to Treat Her as Human Being, Instead of 'Household Fixture,' Asks Wife Who Helped Him Out of Debt, Up Ladder of Fortune

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Eight years ago, I married a man who was then just a year out of college. He had a very small-salaried job and numerous debts. Ever since we married, I have been working to help him pay off his debts, denying myself many things to which I had been accustomed. During the past four years, he has gradually been promoted to a fine position, so that now his salary is three times as large as mine. This is fine, of course, and I am glad he has been so successful. But I can't help thinking I should share in his good fortune.

However, he refuses to give me any money. The only bills he pays are his own—plus installment payments and upkeep on the house, which we obtained by using my savings as a down payment. I have always clothed myself and my mother, who lives with us, acting as housekeeper. I pay for all our food and also defray the "incidental" housekeeping expenses. This takes all my salary,—whereas my husband has two-thirds of his salary to do with as he pleases.

He refuses to have a joint bank account and keeps his savings-book at the bank, so that I cannot know what he has. He is out of town nearly every week, coming home only for weekends. He never lets me know where he is or how he is, and refuses to answer me when I ask for an explanation. When he is at home, he is always engrossed in his hobbies or his work and never suggests anything in the way of social activities. If we are invited out by friends, he is eager to go; but he never will go out with me at my suggestion.

He finds fault with almost everything I do and his favorite pastime is criticizing my mother. I realize it is not the best policy to have a mother-in-law in the home, but in my case it is a godsend, because otherwise I would be alone too much of the time. And mother does try constantly to please my husband.

I feel as though I am just existing, without any purpose in life. Although my husband always declares he loves me, I don't believe him. Surely if he did, he would want to share his life with me and not go his own way so completely. Perhaps I am wrong but I feel the only solution is to leave him, before I am too old to find any happiness. I long for love and companionship and understanding and I hardly think I shall ever know them in the present circumstances.

Please tell me—would I be a "quitter" if I left him? And if you think I should stay—what can I do to make him realize I am a human being and not just a household fixture? B. D.

Knock His Ears Down By Indirection

DEAR B. D.: Your husband's behavior implies that he has been badly spoiled by your financial ministrations to his comfort and that he is, for the time being, at least, "out of love" with you. It is my opinion that you have little to lose, therefore, and perhaps much to gain, in adopting a briskly business-like attitude toward money matters—and having done with pleading for a share of his "good fortune."

Hereafter, treat your own earnings as a form of personal allowance and let him pay every household bill—including groceries, light, heat, telephone, etc. After all, when he took you as his wife, he obligated himself for your support—and support includes such "necessities of life" as food, shelter and some sartorial protection against the elements. By the time he has shucked sufficient greenbacks off his bankroll every pay day to meet the family's "running expenses"—(for which, I repeat, he is legally responsible, so long as the marriage contract holds)—his net profit of earnings will just about equal your regular income.

This gives you an economic basis from which to match his social gait. On the one hand, his decreased "spending money" should automatically cut down the number of his mysterious out-of-town trips. On the other hand, you will have a tidy and steadily accumulating amount of cash to invest in a self-improvement program—of beautification, study, recreational pursuits, trips, etc. And I would advise such a program for the immediate future in preference to separating from him.

Since his fortunes have begun to improve, it is likely your attitude toward him has fluctuated between long-faced martyrdom and tense anticipation of earned reward. Perhaps you have acted, too, on the assumption that now he has turned out to be something of a Wonder Boy, he requires kid-gloved handling by one of your lesser earning ability. The healthier attitude is to look him straight in the eye, as one business partner to the other, and demand fair treatment in money matters—as the very minimum of your rights and expectations.

Talk in business terms, if you like. You have been investing heavily—"giving your all," as the saying goes—in this partnership for eight years, and now the profits are rolling in, you are entitled to your cut. One way you can take it, as you may tell him, is to reserve your salary for "pin money" usages, as suggested above. And let him know that this is exactly what you propose to do, unless he has a better plan to follow.

Having put your foot down on the subject of finances, steer a pleasantly noncommittal, self-sufficient social course in future, and let him guess whether or not you would be happier for having him at your side. Don't cajole him with suggestions about going here or there with you. Never ask him where he has been. When friends invite you as a couple, and he eagerly responds, go along casually, as though it were just one more evening in your life, and not a super-special event because he happens to be squiring you.

In order to register on his consciousness as a "human being instead of a household fixture,"—make yourself as beautiful as possible to look upon; treat him with invariable, impeccable courtesy but at the same time stoutly assert yourself as an individual who cannot be "walked over;" and demonstrate your ability to make friends and enjoy a substantial social life quite independently of him. In brief, knock his ears down by indirection. This is much better than cutting off your nose to spite your face—which I think your walking out on him would amount to. M. H.

Soap, Water, Outdoor Exercise—Hedy Lamarr's Beauty Aids

Movie Star Walks, Works in Garden To Keep Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

SOMEHOW or other, we have come to think of glamour as the hothouse variety of beauty. But Hedy Lamarr, the No. 1 glamour girl of the films, follows a program based on the conviction that health is the surest road to beauty.

Although hopping a fence is her favorite stunt for keeping a slim waist, you will be relieved to know that her regular exercise is more conventional. She likes gardening—and doesn't confine herself to bossing the gardner!

HEDY LAMARR

Protects Her Skin

What about the sun and that peaches-and-cream complexion? She lets the sun beat directly on her face for 10 minutes a day, but from then on protects her skin with a large straw hat.

She is a soap and water baby! She believes in washing her face night and morning with pure castile soap, rubbing the thick lather in and massaging briskly with an up-and-out motion. The water for this treatment is hot. The soap is then rinsed off with warm water and she finishes with a dash of cold—

Because Miss Lamarr thinks cream bases have a made-up appearance she avoids them as much as possible and uses a hand lotion as a foundation. After working at the studio, she removes the make-up with mineral oil, washes her face thorpughly, pats on the hand lotion—and leaves off powder for the ride home. She thinks screen work puts enough strain on the skin and at least one day a week goes without make-up of any kind.

Her one cosmetic tip is to be careful in choosing the right powder for your coloring.

Brushes Hair Stiffy

Miss Lamarr's hair, which is remarkable even in Hollywood for its lovely, burnished look, receives the same old-fashioned treatment as her skin. She shaves pure soap into warm water and brings it to a boil, then uses this for her shampoo. But first she massages her scalp with odorless castor oil which is rinsed out with cold water—warm water turns the oil gummy—before the soapy lather is massaged into the scalp. She pushes a wave into place, wraps her hair in a towel, and allows it to dry naturally. Ever since she was a tiny girl she has made a habit of brushing her hair each night before retiring. She doesn't count the strokes—just gives her hair a good, thorough brushing.

There's just one more thing that she does—but it is probably one that you don't do! She gets up in time to walk for three-quarters of an hour each morning before breakfast. She walks at a brisk pace and takes the hills in high. That, together with the gardening, keeps her measurements perfect. Here they are: Bust, 33½ inches; waist, 25¾ inches, and hips, 35¼ inches.

Glamour is such an intangible thing that it's really a relief to discover that Hedy Lamarr's "secrets" are soap and water and activity in the sun and air!

How nice to have just one best dress,
It saves so much indecision,
And people you meet the second time,
Your face so much better envision.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Local socialites, the Torch is happy to report, are gallantly carrying on despite the ravages of the flu.

Though confined to her bed, Mrs. Caspar de Menthe Bougainvillea is proceeding with arrangements for the Lovers' Lark benefit to be held Valentine's Day to help provide large and spectacular weddings for indigent couples. Mrs. Bougainvillea has three telephones at her bedside, and two secretaries work in her room, which is a bower of American beauty roses, sent by her many admirers. Yesterday she held a called meeting of her committee, the members being provided with hospital robes and gas masks. Mrs. Bougainvillea was wearing a peach colored satin nightie, trimmed with Alencon lace, and a white marabou bed jacket, which she accented with a single large orchid. She also wore her famous three-strand pearl necklace, especially designed for bed wear.

Mrs. Coatsworth Coddle, who is recovering from a severe cold, will run down to Palm Beach for several weeks to regain her strength, but will not give up her place as chairman of the Committee to Aid Maladjusted Titled Refugees. "At a time like this," said Mrs. Coddle, "we should not let our personal ills interfere with our work for humanity."

Some Very Good Names

Rock-ribbed members of the conservative set turned out for the tea given yesterday at the Plush Sofa Club to launch the new "Ski in America" movement recently announced by Buzzie Bellwether.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln De-Peyster, wearing her famous sables, arrived early and chatted with Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Pelf, who wore a Russian mink coat and her famous emeralds. Chinchilla clad, Mrs. Andrew Jackson Snipp surveyed the party through her diamond-studded lorgnette, and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Van Swaggerton, in her knee-length silver fox cape, discussed democracy with Count Domino, whose mother was the former Betsy Ross DeBilk. Among those pouring were Mrs. Paul Revere Stuveysant, wife of the famous turfman; Mrs. Benedict Arnold Mayfair, recently returned to this country after a long residence abroad; Mrs. Patrick Henry Piddleford, in gray caracul and rubies, and Mrs. Daniel Webster Tinfoil, whose ensemble of black Persian lamb with red accents, exactly matched that of her poodle, "Snooks," whose curly black coat of natural poodle hair was set off with a red bow on the collar.

Diplomats and Statesmen Are Overshadowed By Hollywood Glamor at Birthday Ball Parties

By Hope Ridings Miller

WASHINGTON NOTABLES took a back seat all day yesterday and last night while the town, as a whole, basked in the reflected glory of numerous Hollywood luminaries. At the President's birthday dinner last night, at the Gold Plate Breakfast early this morning, and at the White House luncheon yesterday stars of stage and screen completely took over the Capital's social scene.

The breakfast, an annual sequel to the Birthday Balls, took place at the Carlton Hotel. Guests paid $25 each for the privilege of eating wild pheasant and getting a good look at each other. Glamour girl Lana Turner glimpsed such well-known Capitalites as Justice Frank Murphy and Senator Alben Barkley, and the latter had a chance to meet a complete galaxy of motion picture stars that would have been an autograph hunter's dream-come-true.

Justice Murphy and Senator Barkley were among the guests of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, who has made a flock of reservations for the breakfast each year since it became a Capital institution. Earlier in the evening, she was hostess at her home, Friendship. There, a large number of guests dined and viewed a motion picture afterward. At midnight, the company arrived at the Carlton for the gold-plate fete, and the party moved along for several hours after that.

Among those in Mrs. McLean's party, in addition to Justice Murphy and Senator Barkley, were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Minister from Finland, Hjalmar Procope; Mrs. Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Senator Joseph Guffey, Joseph Hergesheimer, the novelist, and several others.

Soviet Envoy Attends Breakfast

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky had guests at the Gold Plate Breakfast. Their presence at the party was not, however, just another cooperative step in the lifting of the "moral embargo" between this country and the Soviet, for the Oumanskys have made reservations for the party for several years.

Mme. Oumansky appeared last night in a frock of brown velvet. With her and the envoy were the First Secretary of the Embassy, Dmitri S. Chuvakhin, and the Assistant Military Attache and Mme. Ovchinnikov.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close were others from the Diplomatic Corps who had reserved places at the famous function, which began promptly at midnight. Also there were the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, the latter wearing a cheerful jacket of blue and flame color over her gold frock. At a table together were Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, in her favorite black, with Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Fred Roy and Jack Logan. Others who had places at the party included William Stanley, Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem and Leo T. Crowley.

Willard Dinner Is Colorful Fete

Several hours earlier, at the Willard Hotel, the large ballroom was a moving mass of guests assembled at tables decorated with red, white and blue blossoms—including tulips, carnations, delphinium and roses. The dinner, which started promptly at 7 o'clock and ended at 8:30 was prefaced by a reception in the small ballroom. There the stars glittered for the benefit of national figures who went almost unnoticed in last night's throng.

Probably the luckiest man at the party was Gen. Albert L. Cox, who by virtue of being head of the dinner committee, was flanked on either side by Deanna Durbin and blonde Lana Turner. However, the Gen. says he is somewhat immune to glamour as last year he was seated between Olivia de Havilland and Dorothy Lamour.

They were seated at the head table as were the remainder of the stars and the three Commissioners, Melvin Hazen, Russell Young and Col. David McCoach, jr. Richmond Keech, active in the Birthday ball committee, was also seated at that table.

Under the flag-draped ceiling, Lauritz Melchior, sang the "Star Spangled Banner," starting off the evening's celebration. Following the song, Gen. Cox proposed a toast to the President of the United States in which all guests joined. He then introduced the incomparable Clifton Fadiman brought down from New York to act as master of ceremonies. From then on things were pretty informal, each of the stars introduced and said their little piece.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

Several Cabinet officers, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jones, did their bit of "star-gazing" last night.

The Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George C. Marshall entertained several guests. They included the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold Stark and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stettinius. The former Ambassador to Belgium and Mrs. Joseph Davies entertained at a large table. Among their guests were the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Mrs. McNutt had charge of the flower arrangements for the dinner.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, was the ranking guest at the table where Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bruce Smith entertained. Others in the company were Associate Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the Counselor of the Chinese Ambassador, Liu Chieh; Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

At another table Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose—who had given $500 to the infantile paralysis fund—entertained several guests including Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Gen. and Mrs. Guy Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Dr. and Mrs. James A. Lyon and J. C. Nichols. Other Senators there were Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass and Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes. Mrs. John Allan Daugherty had a party of friends.

Mrs. Albert L. Cox entertained a party including Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Dan Sheaffer, of Philadelphia; Mrs. David McCoach, jr., Alfred G. Neal, Col. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Leahy. Diplomats proved that they, too, were interested in Hollywood glamour. A large table of Argentinians, headed by the Naval Attache and Senora de Godoy, were there. A merry table of Brazilians also enlivened the dinner. In the party were the Military Attache and Senora Machado. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ash were there, introducing around the latter's cousin, Miss Constance Moore, of Hollywood fame. Mrs. Irene Caldwell, who headed the ticket committee for the Birthday Balls, was among those present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Col and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, and many others.

White House Luncheon Draws Celebrities

Hollywood stars, tennis champions, and musical celebrities were very much in evidence yesterday when President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at a White House luncheon.

District Commissioners were there, too, and enough members of the White House staff to make the visitors feel at home. Filmland notables in the company included Wallace Beery and his daughter, Carol Ann; Miss Deanna Durbin and her mother, Mrs. James A. Durbin; Preston Foster, Glenn Ford, Miss Charlotte Greenwood, Tommy Harmon, Stirling Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Hersholt.

Still others there were Miss Constance Moore, Wayne Morris, Miss Maureen O'Hara, George Raft, Al Ritz, Mr. and Mrs. Red Skelton, Miss Lana Turner and Mrs. Mildred Turner, Miss Kay Aldridge, Mrs. Robert Baker, Martin Broones and Miss Eleanor Tennant.

Miss Alice Marble and Miss Mary Hardwicke, of tennis fame, were there; also Lauritz Melchior, the noted singer, and Mrs. Melchior, and Clifton Fadiman ("Information, Please") and Mrs. Fadiman. Benny Goodman, well-known orchestra leader, was in the company, as were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pettijohn, Jay C. Flippin, Miss Margaret H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Stolting and Richmond B. Keech.

Local notables who were present included Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner and Mrs. David McCoach, jr., Commissioner and Mrs. John Russell Young, former Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew R. Kelley, Stephen T. Early, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Miss Marguerite Le Hand, Miss Malvina C. Thompson, Mrs. James M. Helm, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Horace B. Smith.

The table at which guests were seated was decorated with roses, snapdragons, carnations, freesia and maidenhair fern.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THE DRAFT may have caused some gnashing of teeth among debutantes and others, but it is responsible for bringing almost as many people to Washington as it takes away. Shortly to spend several months here while her husband does military training is Mrs. Reverdy Wadsworth, daughter of Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mr Wadsworth will leave on Monday for Fort Devans as part of the Genesee Valley group. His wife is bringing to Washington their baby son, Henry Roosevelt Wadsworth, born just a few weeks ago. His mother is the former Miss Eleanor Roosevelt. Since their marriage the Wadsworths have been farming in Genesee Valley.

WHO SAYS that movie actors are allergic to crowds of autograph hunters? The other evening one of the stars here for the Birthday Ball entered a well-known restaurant to have dinner. It was at least 20 minutes before the other diners got around to noticing him. During that time our actor kept glancing hopefully over his shoulder, as though wondering when the public would recognize him.

The latest Goldwynism, speaking of the movies, was told to a group of Washingtonians the other night by a Hollywood official. He had been arguing with the famous star about the merits of a certain picture, which he thought rotten. In Goldwyn's opinion the movie was wonderful. Finally, really getting angry, Mr. Goldwyn burst out with, "How can we possibly discuss matters if you don't agree with me?"

MISS Helen Davis, energetic daughter of Dwight Davis, has decided to live in New York. She hopes to get a job there. Her sister, Miss Cynthia Davis, has made her home in Manhattan for several years. They will not live together, however, for Cynthia has only a small apartment, with the lease running for several more months.

As a farewell to Helen, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., and Rebecca Wellington will give a dinner in her honor next Wednesday.

UNACCUSTOMED as they are to snow in Washington, local sports lovers usually end up battered and bruised when they go in for skiing or sledding. One gay group spent a whole morning tobogganning without injuries, however, the other day. Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe and the latter's young sister, Miss Bella Hagner, went out to Mrs. Randall Hagner's place in Maryland for a morning in the snow.

Mrs. Lee will leave on Monday for another stay in Florida, her visit earlier this month having been cut short. Later in the season she will have as her house guest here Jane Grant, who was formerly married to Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker. Mrs. Grant was in Washington a week or so ago to visit the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettingill.

TO CLEAR up any misapprehension, this column desires to state that every penny raised by the District Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society's ball this winter will go to American sailors, and not to Great Britain, as reported.

HAVE YOU HEARD that Mussolini is helping Hitler by all aid short of war?

THE National Theater curtain for "Claudia" was half an hour late going up Wednesday night. Just as everyone was restlessly wondering what on earth was the matter, in came Mrs. Roosevelt. Another in the audience was Actress Helen Gahagan.

Mrs. Jesse Jones Luncheon Guest Of Mrs. D. C. Roper

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper entertained at a luncheon party in honor of Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce yesterday afternoon at the Ropers' home on Woodland Drive.

Dwight Fiske Entertains For Langhorne Party

Dwight Fiske, coming to Washington from Miami Beach, Fla., especially for the occasion, entertained a sizable number of Capitalites last night at a party at the 1925 F Street Club.

Hostess for the fete was Mrs. Cary Langhorne, who had invited in a large company for dinner, and about a hundred additional guests for the party afterward. Many in the company had heard Dwight Fiske before. His own particular brand of entertainment burst onto the night club scene several years ago, and since then he has been popular as a player and singer whose selections are distinctly of the double entendre type.

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon and Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin were ranking guests at Mrs. Langhorne's dinner. Others in the company were Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Rear Admiral and Mrs. H. Pott, of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane, Commander and Mrs. J. H. Colhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. William Littauer, Mr. and Mrs. Fentriss Hill, of California.

Still others there were Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Lady Bailey, Mrs. Emory Sands, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. Rowley Byers, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Moulton Johnson, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, Dr. Roberto Mendoza, George T. Summerlin, Myron Hofer, Samuel Reber, Lammot Belin, William Elmslie, Chester Snow and Edwin McElwain.

Among other hostesses who entertained at dinner before the party were Miss Carolyn Nash, who gathered in a few friends at the Carlton hotel—among them the Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel and George Abell, and Mrs. Henry Downe, who had in her party her sister, Countess de Merange, who recently arrived in this country from France; the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne-Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Col. Thomas Riley.

Dr. Rowe Host At Luncheon

Guests included the Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long, District Commissioner John Russell Young, Chief of the Protocol Division George T. Summerlin, Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker, Surgeon Gen. Hugh S. Cumming, Assistant Director of the Pan American Union Pedro de Alba, Acting Chief of the State Department's Division of American Republics Philip W. Bonsal, Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education; Edgar Morris, Dr. Charles Seeger, John J. Clisham, Dr. William Manger and Don Enrique Coronado.

Admiral Hoopers Give Reunion Tea For Old Grads

Rear Admiral and Mrs. S. C. Hooper gathered in a few friends for a gala reunion yesterday afternoon at tea time. The fete, planned for members of the Naval Academy's class of 1905—all those living in Washington, Annapolis and surrounding territory, that is—took place at the Hooper home, 4425 Garfield Street.

The affair marked the 36th anniversary of the graduation of the 1905 class, and reminiscences were very much in order as the party moved merrily along.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll. Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold Bowen, Rear Admiral Ingersoll, Rear Admiral Nimitz, Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, Rear Admiral Walter B. Woodson, and Rear Admiral Albert T. Church.

Still other members of the class of 1905 who attended included Capt. Lee Border, Capt. James O. Gawne, Capt. William O. Spears, Capt. Edgar G. Oberlin, Capt. Joseph V. Ogan, Capt. Laurence McNair, Capt. Jonahtah Dowell, Capt. William S. McClintic, Lieut. Comdr. Hugo Frankenberger, Lieut. Comdr. Needham Jones, honorary member of the class.

Mrs. Knox Plans House-Warming

Mrs. McCook Knox has issued interesting invitations — copied from an original bid to dinner by Thomas Jefferson—for a house warming. Written in colonial script, the invitations read: "Mrs. McCook Knox requests the favour of your company on Friday, Feb. 7th or Feb. 14th—at four o'clock or whatever later hour is convenient."

Mrs. Knox purchased a house on N Street some time ago and then leased it, and now she is having a housewarming. She is in hopes that her daughter, Mrs. Richard Smith, will come down from New York City for the first party at least. The invitation also informs the recipient that N Street was formerly First Street, between Market and Potomac, Georgetown. Tea and punch will be served.

Several to Entertain At Theater Parties

A number of small theater parties are scheduled for tonight, when the Washington Civic Theater will open its production of "The Gentle People" at the Wardman Park Theater.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Foster Wood (Mr. Wood is president of the theater) will entertain at dinner at the University Club and then take their guests on to the show. In the party will be Miss Alice Richardson, Mrs. William A. Molster, and E. R. True.

Davies' Fete The Moscickis

A reunion in Washington took place yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies entertained at luncheon in honor of Dr. Moscicki, Ambassador to Belgium from Poland during Mr. Davies' tenure as U. S. Ambassador to Belgium, and Mme. Moscicka. Dr. Moscicki is the son of the last President of Poland.

The Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten Ponthoz; the Brazilian envoy and Senhora de Martins, and the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness de Gruben were among the guests. Also present were Orme Wilson, formerly counselor at the American Embassy in Brussels, and Mrs. Wilson.

Other guests were the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Kwapiszewska, Senator and Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, Mrs. Eleanor Rand, daughter of Mrs. Davies; Phil Davies, of San Francisco, and Dr. Jacques Errera, now at Princeton, and formerly a member of the faculty of the University of Brussels.

Mrs. W. F. George To Be Honored At Luncheon

Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, 2820 Thirty-sixth Place Northwest, will entertain at tea this afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock in honor of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of United States Senator George, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Guests will include wives of foreign service officers in Washington, the embassy wives and wives of members of Congress. Assisting Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. George in receiving will be Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. Randolph Blinn, Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Frank Cripple, Mrs. Felthan Watson, Mrs. Bennett Venable, Mrs. Robert Armistead and Mrs. Wilson Taylor.

Place for Music Urged In Defense Program

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Culture must be taken into account in total defense, Mrs. Vincent Hilles Ober, of Norfolk, Va., president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, said yesterday.

Speaking before the music appreciation group of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase and later at a luncheon arranged in her honor at the Y. W. C. A. by Gertrude Lyons, a member of the national board of the federation, Mrs. Ober urged that budgets not be curtailed to exclude support of music in churches, music education in schools, symphony orchestras, concerts on platforms or chamber music in the home.

"More, rather than less, music is needed in a time like this," she said. "It touches the heart, balances the emotions and helps to integrate different populations into a united citizenship."

Music properly understood is an instrument through which diversified national and racial groups learn to understand each other, Mrs. Ober declared. Emphasis at present should be placed on the folk music of the world, she said, with an appreciation of the contribution made by different nationalities in this country, "although we may despise acts of their governments." Nationalism should not be allowed to creep into our music, she said. When that tone dominates, people miss the true message of music, she asserted.

Mrs. Morton L. Ring, chairman of the music appreciation group, presided at its meeting in the morning and Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, club president, was among those present. On the program were Arsenio Ralon, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Charles V. Imlay, Gertrude Troutman, child pianist, and Harry McMains, who sang.

Mr. McMains and the young pianist were both on the program at the Music Federation luncheon also. Other artists presented by Mrs. Lyons included Eloy Fominoya, violinist, local winner in the Edgar Stillman Kelly scholarship contest last fall, who was accompanied by Mrs. Gerald Whittaker; Michael Kudlick, 6, pianist and winner of a national certificate in the competitive junior festival, and Helene Finnacom, who represented the student division of the District Federation of Music Clubs.

Dr. John Rustin offered the invocation at the luncheon and, immediately following, Mrs. Lyons led the guests in singing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." She also led singing of the "Hello Song" as a greeting to Mrs. Ober, the honor guest.

Last night, Mrs. Ring entertained at a supper at her home, 8 Rosemary Street, Chevy Chase, in honor of Mrs. Ober, and later at a box party, to hear St. Olaf's Choir.

Best's "MOCCASIN" is a new favorite

This new moccasin-type step-in is a smash hit with growing girls. It's just like big brother's — and so comfortable! Mothers will like its trim, neat look. Daughters will like a shoe they can "step into" and adore its casual style. It's a perfect shoe for walking or "every day wear" and a change from the traditional saddle oxford. It's made of sturdy tan elk-tanned calf with leather soles and heels. Sizes 3 to 9.

D. C. Club Joins Hygiene Day

As part of the Nation-wide celebration of National Social Hygiene Day, Wednesday, the District of Columbia Social Hygiene Society will hold a luncheon meeting at 12:15 p. m. in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest. Featured speakers will be Miss Mary Craig Mc Geachy, press officer at the British Embassy, representing the Ministry of Economic Warfare, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner, Work Projects Administration. Their talks will deal with the parts played by girls and women in the preparedness programs of the two countries.

The 1940 William Freeman Snow Medal "for outstanding service to social hygiene" will be presented to a noted British woman—a leader in public health education. In 1939 the award went to Gen. John J. Pershing, and in 1938 to Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general, United States Public Health Service. Though the formal presentation will be made by proxy at a meeting of the American Social Hygiene Association in Philadelphia, Miss McGeachy, who was associated with Mrs. Rolfe in League of Nation's Health Section activities at Geneva, Switzerland, will acknowledge the honor informally on behalf of British womanhood at the Washington assembly.

Dr. Henry H. Hazen, president of the Social Hygiene Society, will be chairman and Ray H. Everett, executive secretary, will briefly outline local social hygiene problems entering into preparedness efforts.

Among the representative Washington women who already have made reservations are Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Judge Fay L. Bentley, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Miss Katharine Lenroot, Mrs. G. Howland Chase, Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, Mrs. Rhea L. Bernton, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, Miss Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Maurice D. Rosenberg, Mrs. William Kittle, Mrs. Emile Berliner and Mrs. Henry King.

To Talk on Mission

"The Woman's Phase of the National Christian Mission" will be discussed by Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Council of Church Women, and Mrs. C. D. THE NATIONAL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA GUILD is ready for the word "go" in the annual campaign for funds. Last year, with a quota of $6,500, the guild brought in $10,000. This year, in consequence, its quota has been boosted to $8,500 and the women are smiling and preparing to get to work.

The habit of going over the top had its beginning when, at a guild tea about four years ago, it was voted to help with the fund campaign, taking over the cards in the office that were considered "dead wood." With these to go on, the guild members turned over $1,000 the first year.

The next season, those in charge of the drive took the guild's work more seriously and turned over to it cards that were not in the "dead wood" category. Last season the members handled 1,250 and this year have been given 3,000, the largest number handed by any group working in the interest of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Eugene Byrnes and Mrs. Foster Adams are cochairmen of the guild and Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Charles Bittinger, cochairman of the campaign committee.

Some of the veteran members are literally gluttons for punishment when it comes to taking cards, Mrs. Adams says. Some will take 50 or 60. Mrs. Bittinger heads the list this year with 200 she expects to cover herself—and they all will be taken care of, Mrs. Adams adds.

Among those who have worked faithfully for several seasons are Mrs. G. A. Goetchius, Mrs. Adela Payne, Mrs. John Hutson, Miss Jean Stier, Miss Mary Hobart, Mrs. J. Frank Staley, Mrs. Rufus Lusk and Mrs. Boyd Taylor. Miss Dorothy Thompson, of the American Red Cross, is another active worker.

Among new members this season are Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mrs. Benjamin Biays, Mrs. Stanley Surrey, Mrs. Wiley Patterson Reis, manager of the Washington Ballet, and Mrs. James Stokley.

In addition to regular guild members, about 25 extra recruits work during the yearly drive.

PRESENT TRAY—Federal City Chapter of the D. A. R., at its meeting this week, presented a silver tray to the chapter house. It was presented by the vice regent, Mrs. Charles H. Plotner, and received by Mrs. Harry C. Grove, president of the Chapter House Corporation.

PLAN FAIR—Beta Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, women's legal fraternity, will deviate from the usual monthly forum dinners, by holding an old-fashioned fair, promising much fun and entertainment, at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place Northwest, Saturday, commencing at 8 p. m.

The committee on arrangements includes Masinia Rulien, chairman; Mrs. Marie Allen, president of the chapter; Alice Schlinger, Mrs. Myrtle Sherrill, Mrs. Veatrice Truitt, Rosalind Skehan, Delia Jackson, Sylvia Hukriede, Selma Anderson, Berniece Woodward and Pauline Meitzler.

Founders' Board Convenes Here

Mrs. Charles L. Jackman, of Concord, N. H., national vice president of the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, presided yesterday at the meeting of the national board, held at the headquarters on I street. Mrs. E. H. Darrach, of Indianapolis, was prevented by illness from attending.

Announcement was made that 21 new members had been accepted into the society, two of them affiliated with the District Chapter—Mrs. George E. Warfield, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Albert Conradis, of Bethesda.

It also was announced that Mrs. Darrach had made a gift of $100 to the committee on the preservation and restoration of records for its work in Maryland.

'In a Better Cause'

Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., Jan. 30 (AP)—A cannon ball fired by the Redcoats in the Revolutionary War is going back to Britain with an American's request that it be modernized and "fired again in a better cause."

"For the purpose of adding one more shot in the heroic fight Britain is making," said Hamilton Cochrane in sending it to the Namesake Towns Committee.

At 105, She Knows Answers

Roy, Utah, Jan. 30 (AP).—On her 100th birthday, five years ago, Mrs. Mary Field Garner predicted President Roosevelt would be re-elected, not only to a second, but a third term.

Today, in a 105th birthday interview, she said, "Well, he made it, didn't he?" The interviews marked her first and second use of the telephone.

3,000 Rats to Ride In Style to New Home

Rats don't live a dog's life at the Agriculture Department. They live the proverbial life of Riley. Nothing is too good for them. Today, for example, nearly 3,000 test rats of the Bureau of Home Economics are to be moved from the department here to new quarters at Beltsville, Md. Some of the very special rats will make the 12-mile journey in stylish fashion, being carried in air-conditioned ambulances. Most of the rats, however, will be sent in heated trucks. And the temperature in each truck must be so-so.

Canopies are being erected from the building to the trucks both here and at Beltsville to protect the rats from the breeze. No photographer will be permitted to take pictures. Exploding flash bulbs might upset the creatures. Employes at Beltsville probably will be required to beat the bushes to keep the cats away.

The rats are valuable specimens and months of important work would be wiped out if they caught cold or anything else damaging happened to them. It seems they are delicate creatures. That's the reason for all the precautions.

Overtime for Guard Force

The calling of National Guardsmen to active service has placed a terrific burden on the Guard personnel office in the Winder Building. It was planned to put on a night force to lighten the work load but the Army overruled the plan when sufficient experienced personnel couldn't be found for the jobs. The result is long hours of overtime, chiefly for supervisory personnel. Nineteen additional employes were added this week, bringing the total to 127.

Sam Bledsoe, chief of Agriculture's press section, has been detailed temporarily to the office of Vice President Wallace . . . President Roosevelt soon will ask Congress for a WPA deficiency appropriation of $400,000,000. He'll estimate, however, that only $350,000,000 will be spent before July 1 . . . Dr. Leonard White has drafted a "final" report for the Reed Committee on Civil Service improvement and copies are in the hands of members. It's reported that there are enough votes to approve the report and that it'll go to the White House within two weeks . . . A cook at Alcatraz, the Federal penitentiary, prepares food exclusively Oriental style.

Several high-placed New Dealers have a plan which they believe would relieve the President of much of his trouble. Briefly, they would have President Roosevelt appoint what in effect would be an assistant president in charge of domestic affairs. They point out that the President's time is taken up now with international affairs and defense and that agencies largely confined to domestic problems are drifting along without direction. The proposed assistant president, they believe, could determine domestic policy, subject to President Roosevelt's approval, and see to it that the policy was carried out by departments and agencies.

Blocked Merit System Attack

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, yesterday again proved that he believes in Civil Service. He killed the attempt to open up the defense program to politics and patronage by bringing up successful points of order against the language in the Independent Offices appropriation bill that would have suspended merit laws. The principal appropriation affected was the President's proposed $100,000,000 "blank check."

Henry Hubbard, of the Council of Personnel Administration, and Dr. C. L. Shartle, of the Social Security Board, will teach a class in public personnel problems in G. W. U.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

F. Melius Christiansen conducts the St. Olaf Lutheran Choir in Constitution Hall on Thursday night. Program of unaccompanied choral music by Brahms, Hassler, Shvedov, Paul Christiansen, Mendelssohn, Arnold Mendelssohn, George Schumann, Grechaninov, Luvaas and Melius Christiansen.

Before an enthusiastic audience which included Crown Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Norway, the St. Olaf Lutheran Choir, of Northfield, Minn., was conducted by F. Melius Christiansen last evening in the best choral concert that has been heard here for many a season. If there had been a question of a contest with the Westminster Choir, which had appeared in the same hall the night before, the laurel wreath would have been awarded without a dissenting vote to the American-Norwegian singers. It was not rivalry, however, but only a juxtaposition of booking dates that brought about the comparison.

BROWN

The superiority of the Minnesotans resides in the beautiful tone quality of the blended voices and also in the suavity of the phrasing. That quality is best described as instrumental because the element of individuality was so carefully excluded. Considered as a mixture of timbres, the singing was impersonal, although expressive shading was not lacking. It was as though each singer had been trained to use the voice for the production of pure tone untinged by emotion, yet by some subtlety the emotion was present.

Beginning with the Brahms motet, "O Savior, Throw the Heavens Wide," the choir of some 60 voices displayed at the outset its finesse in the clear exposition of parts. The melodic lines in the variations were carried with perfect distinctness so that the pattern was transparent. In the following hymn, Hans Leo Hassler's "O Sacred Head," there was a remarkable simulation of organ tones. Lovely coloring emerged in the readings of Konstantin Shvedov's "We Have No Other Guide" and Paul Christiansen's "The Lord Reigneth."

In the second group of compositions, the Mendelssohn cousins, Felix and Arnold, were represented, respectively, by "Savior of Sinners" and "Thanksgiving Motet." Georg Schumann's "Come, Guest Divine" and Grechaninov's "Faith Victorious" concluded the section.

The director included in the final group three of his own works, "When Curtained Darkness Falls," "Beauty in Humility" and "Lullaby on Christmas Eve." The second had to be repeated, so delighted was the audience by the technical skill of performance, and the applause seemed to ask as well for a repetition of the exquisitely sung lullaby. On the program were also Morten Luvaas' "Sing Unto Him," an arrangement of the Rhenish folksong, "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming," and 'Beautiful Savior." The last was sung in Norwegian as a salutation to the royal visitors, to whom the audience paid a standing tribute.

Expert as the choir is in modern tonal effects, one would like to have heard less of these devices and more of classical strictness in the styles of Bach and Palestrina. For it is not often that one has the opportunity to enjoy so perfected and so smooth a tonal texture.

D. C. Water Safeguard Funds Asked

Roosevelt Requests $75,000 to Convert Power Plant Into Pumping Station

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to Congress a request of the District Commissioners for an immediate $75,000 supplemental appropriation to guard against sabotage of Washington's water supply system.

The fund would be used to equip the Dalecarlia hydroelectric generating plant so that it could be turned into a pumping station in an emergency. Water, now brought into the city through 10-mile-long conduits from Great Falls, would be pumped out of the old Chesapeake & Potomac Canal.

The estimate is included in the regular 1942 budget estimates, but the Budget Bureau explained that "because of possibilities of sabotage and possible delays in securing machinery, the District Commissioners consider it unwise to await passage of the annual supply bill.

Other supplemental and deficiency budgetary estimates bring the total requested yesterday to $668,517.75. Principal among these are:

District unemployment compensation fund, $15,000, because of unexpected demands.

To finance the motor vehicle lien division of the Recorder of Deeds' office, authorized to start operations January 1, $6,720.

Sewer extensions, $160,000.

Street improvements, $250,000, necessitated by abnormal building activity.

For extensions of water system within the city, $150,000.

The budget director explained that work relief will supplement the activities of the sewer and water divisions.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Virginia,' in Technicolor, Glorifies Old Dominion

Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray Costar In New Screen Feature at the Earle Theater; Fred Sanborn and Roxyettes Top Stage Bill

"VIRGINIA." Paramount picturization of a story by Edward H. Griffith and Virginia Van Upp, adapted to the screen by Miss Van Upp, costarring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, with Stirling Hayden, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee, Marie Wilson, Paul Hurst, Tom Rutherford, Leigh Whipper, Louise Beavers and Darby Jones. Directed by Mr. Griffith. At the Earle.

"VIRGINIA," currently observing its world premiere engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater, is one of the better "State" pictures. Its superb Technicolor photography imparts new and arresting beauty to the countryside around Charlottesville, where it was filmed on the actual sites it utilizes so effectively, and its story plumbs a little deeper into human values than the ephemeral thrills of horse racing or the frivolous vapidities of the nouveau riche.

BELL

The story, however, is not so substantial a piece of sound dramatic writing as one might wish. While it does create something of the "atmosphere" of both the old and the new South, and employs the clash between impoverished tradition and ultra-rich modernity as the basis of its essential conflict, it also introduces obvious theatrical devices that fall short of the dignity and psychological power the play should possess. The finding of the buried family fortune, only to discover, in 1940, that it is in Confederate money, and the return of the errant wife as a mournful shipment in the baggage car strike a dissonant note in a film play not usually quite so desperate for "dramatic effect." And the final wedding scene—strikingly like the one that will be seen in "The Philadelphia Story"—falls a little this side of the conviction it should exert.

Apparent as they are, these occasional lapses from strict dramaturgic integrity are of minor importance in the larger view of the picture's preponderant merit.

The authors of "Virginia" have been particularly happy in their discovery of the symbols of both the old South and the new in plausible characters of the present day. In a young doctor, whose love of his ancestral lands outweighs his pride of profession, they have found the faithful embodiment of the young Southerner who cherishes the traditions of his people and the ties of blood that bind him fast to his principles. The steel for his flint is provided by the rich Northern invaders," who buy up the rambling estates of the former aristocracy no longer able to support them. And as a spark for the romance of it all, is introduced the penniless "show girl" from New York, who returns to Dunterry, where she was born, to sell the estate she has not visited since she was a tiny tot. Wavering between inborn instinct and the tug of lifelong association, she gives the romantic movement of the play a continuously interesting and often humorous ebb and flow that holds attention and compounds suspense to the final flicker. There is generous excitement worked in, too.

This colorful narrative—and it is colorful in more ways than one—centers in Madeleine Carroll, as Charlotte ("Miss Charlie") Dunterry, and Fred MacMurray, cast as the unregenerated "rebel." Neither carries over into "Virginia' the slightest suggestion of the flippancy of "Honeymoon in Bali." Both bring new talents and new forcefulness to this latest joint vehicle. As exponents of the viewpoint of the young, Northern rich, Stirling Hayden and Marie Wilson supply a fine measure of contrast. The towering Mr. Hayden makes a splendid impression in his first film, with a few rough edges still in need of polishing and a touch of awkwardness to be overcome. Helen Broderick and Paul Hurst carry a secondary, comedy romance with the skill of veterans and little Carolyn Lee, not quite so prodigious as she seemed in "Bali," still manages to be one of the most precocious youngsters before the cameras. Tom Rutherford and Louise Beavers are easily tops among the supporting players.

Were it not for the presence of Fred Sanborn, it is by no means a certainty that the Roxyettes would not walk off with first honors on the stage at the Earle his week. Their "English Johnny" and "Black Art" routines rank near the top of their most impressive achievements. But Mr. Sanborn is present. One of the most expert and musicianly xylophonists that ever spanked a pile of kindling with a handful of hammers, Mr. Sanborn, in a pantomimic sort of way, is a very funny fellow. The Stapletons also are two very fancy dancers, who pick 'em up and lay 'em down with trip-hammer efficiency. The newsreel and Jo Lombardi's overture, with vocal interpolation of "There'll Always Be an England," further augment a feature that one need not be a Virginian to enjoy. Those who are will eat it up.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 30.

A little more than a year ago, work stopped on the picture "I Take This Woman," starring Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr. At that time, no one seemed to want to take her. But the American public rose up to say, "If you don't want her, we want her." In "Come Live With Me," she romped through like a veteran, and now I'll be darned if her acting ability doesn't match her beauty. When you've said that, that's all there is—there isn't any more. And for the second time, Jimmy Stewart plays Mr. Smith. Smith is becoming almost as well known as Stewart.

HOPPER

In this, Jimmy makes a transition from a struggling writer, hanging on by his toenails in a big city, to the simple, sincere country boy he really is, when he takes Hedy down to the farm. Picture's gay, light, chucklesome, and just what the exhibitors ordered.

Grandma is played by 82-year-old Adeline DeWalt Reynolds, and her performance will just about clean out all the old ladies' homes, 'cause when they see her, the old gals will say, "If she can do it, I can do it."

This is her first part, yet you could believe she had been trouping all her life. Right after the picture finished, she took up fencing and singing to keep fit. She graduated from Berkeley at 76. Now she's begging to team in a pictare with Wally Beery. And I'm telling you, if they found the right story, she'd be terrific . . .

Verree Teasdale's hat, if you can call it that, was the darndest thing—more like a disguise, and made her look like Mephistopheles, horns and all. Even critics howled. But the picture, directed by Clarence Brown, is a wow.

Come May, Ros Russell can make any kind of a deal she likes, 'cause then her contract with Metro is up. Her career has been amazing. She stole honors in "The Women," has been borrowed by every studio in town, they've given her top roles. But she hasn't played on her own lot since that picture. Nobody knows why—not even they. When she leaves there, instead of the studio getting part of her salary each week, she'll get it all.

Even in this town, where wives come high, Frank Borzage's settlement of $250,000 on his wife was something. Sounds like the good old days before 1929, doesn't it? . . .

When the network objected to Bob Hope's gag about an old song worn ragged, Hope said he wouldn't take it out. Network said they'd cut him off the air unless he did. "All right," said Hope, "I'll rehearse the cut for you." He did, show went on, Hope was cut off the air, and everyone was happy—except "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair"—who's sorry she ever had any . . .

Fur will fly if it's true that Garbo has taken Marlene Dietrich's best beau, Erich Remarque, away from her. They're certainly being seen a lot around New York together.

Astaire, Shaw And Ace Cast Hit at Capitol

By Richard L. Coe

"SECOND CHORUS." Paramount Picturization of a screen play by Elaine Ryan and Ian McClelland Hunter, from a story by Frank Cavett, starring Fred Astaire and Paulette Goddard with Artie Shaw and his Band, Burgess Meredith, Charles Butterworth, Frank Melton, Jimmy Conlon and Don Brodie. Music by Artie Shaw Bernie Hanighen and Hal Borne, lyrics by Johnny Mercer. Directed by H. C. Potter. Produced by Boris Morros. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Here's a handful of votes for Fred Astaire, Burgess Meredith and Artie Shaw in the Capitol's "Second Chorus," a lightweight screen pleasantry of two college swingsters and what happens to them when they hit the big time. It has its conventionalities to be sure, but it has music by Shaw, humor by Meredith and Charley Butterworth, and dancing by Astaire and Paulette Goddard.

A refusal to take itself seriously makes "Second Chorus" as blithely entertaining as it is. Messrs. Astaire and Meredith, we learn, have been managing to stay in college for seven years for the sake of their well-paying band, aptly monikered "The Perennials." Dented but not daunted when they finally are forced to leave college, they hope to storm the top spots with the help of their former secretary who has managed to become Artie Shaw's manager.

Artie is in a serious mood and hopes for a symphonic concert for which he'll need financial backing. With the help of Miss Goddard as his manager he gets it and with ambitious intentions of Astaire and Meredith all but loses it.

Meredith's Clowning Scores

Sidelights on how these not exceptional events transpire are most always amusing. We have Meredith writing in some new notes for Astaire's instrumental audition with the band, resulting in a wild musical trick. Affluent backer turns out to be C. Butterworth, bewildered as ever. There's a scene in which Meredith decides to shock solemn Butterworth. As you can see, much of the humor in "Second Chorus" boils down to some scene-stealing antics by a bubbling Meredith in a role much like the one he played some time back in that college film called "Spring Madness," adapted from one of Philip Barry's minor efforts.

Nor is the amazingly lithe Astaire in the shade through "Second Chorus." While he has but two dances, "I Ain't Hep to That Step" and as "The Dancing Conductor," he makes a most amusing Russian of the Troika school and blows a trumpet almost too mean! Gifted Artie Shaw plays his new "Hot Concerto" with a tantalizing luster and has far more to do than in his first film, "Dancing Co-ed." While Miss Goddard is no Ginger Rogers, she's naturally a luscious partner for the dancing Astaire.

Hal Le Roy's Taps Tops

Dancing tops the stage doings at the Capitol this week, too, with Hal Le Roy proving that even if he was one of Ziegfeld's last discoveries, the old master hadn't lost his incomparable touch. Le Roy's facile style continues to give the impression that his routines are suave improvisations that fascinate as surely as though they were plotted by a general. Nice going, Mr. Le Roy.

Other dancing doings on the stage include the boisterous bumpings of the Three Sailors, the precision stepping of the Rhythm Rockets, and the wondrous tossings about that slender blonde receives from her three boy friends, the Stuart-Morgan Dancers.

Lynn Allison sings a new song by Rocket Captain Sandy Grant, who proves her versatility by playing it on the celeste while the stage itself does mechanical tricks. The Romano Brothers harmonize some favorites, and for an overture, Sam Jack Kaufman has had the happy idea of reviving some pre-ASCAP-BMI themes that are a treat to hear. Art Brown is at the organ, too, naturally worried about an accident which may cripple his playing. Yesterday, however, his ice-capade didn't mar a generous bill.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Jan. 30.

ENTERPRISE: The New York press is practically unanimous in supporting Herbert Bayard Swope as chairman of the State Racing Commission. Swope started as a reporter, and was one of the greatest of our times. During his rise to the executive editorship of the World, he became acquainted with almost every American notable, and his army of friends now span the country . . . When Swope returned from Europe, after covering the World War, he wrote a book—as did other correspondents. At a Gridiron dinner in Washington he asked Frank Simonds, the Sun's correspondent: "How many copies did your book sell?" . . . "17,500," Simonds proudly informed. "And how many copies did your book sell?" . . . "30,000," Swope told him . . . To which Simonds replied: "By personal solicitation, no doubt."

LOCAL NEWS: The Lepke prosecution for murder in Brooklyn is being delayed because Dist. Atty. O'Dwyer needs only one more witness—the missing "Mendy" Weiss . . . Brentano's will publish original French novels, to corner the market. Its first will be DeKobra's "Emigre de Luxe" . . . The Canadian government has borrowed Earle McGill, of C. B. S., to direct the first of its "Theater of Freedom" series, which will star Walter Huston . . . James Hayes and Robert Sher, who prosecuted the anti-trust case against the motion picture industry, are resigning from the Dept. of Justice to practice law in Washington . . . Horse meat now is sold in Britain for feeding dogs. The horse meat is dyed green, so that the butchers won't make a mistake and sell it as beef.

SWANK: Amy Vanderbilt, author of "The Poor Vanderbilts" now appearing in the American Mercury, is telling of her great aunt, the mother of the present Cornelius Vanderbilt, sr. . . . She was determined upon ruling American society, and believed that her position was so acknowledged that the title "Mrs. Vanderbilt" was sufficiently identifying. Any additional identification, she believed, was superfluous—for there could be no other. Thus when a messenger brought her a large envelope stuffed with bonds—addressed to "Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt"—the lady haughtily returned them, and told the messenger: "There is no Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt here. I am Mrs. Vanderbilt."

INSIGNIA: Despite the censorship, the citizens of Paris have heard of the defeats being administered to the Fascist armies in Albania and Africa—those same armies which tried to show the world their invincibility by leaping upon the back of stricken France . . . The Parisiennes are not permitted to utter any words derogatory to either member of the Axis. But they have devised a common way of exhibiting their contempt for Fascist soldiering. That's why the civilians of Paris now wear a strip of spaghetti pulled through the buttonholes of their lapels.

DEFEAT: Shortly before Ginger Rogers came to N. Y. an independent producer asked her and 14 friends to inspect his newest picture. Miss Rogers agreed and suggested that the preview be held in one of the studio's projection rooms. "No," the producer told her, "we'll hold it in a Pomona theater. I want to get an additional audience-reaction." . . . That night the producer took Miss Rogers and her 14 friends over the long route to Pomona. Just as his picture began, a sign was flashed upon the screen: "Smudge Tonight"—a warning to the citizens that a frost was due and smudge lamps should be lit as a preventive . . . The audience rushed out, leaving—as the previewers—the producer, Miss Rogers and the 14 friends.

PRIDE: Larry MacPhail, who brought the Brooklyn Dodgers back into the major leagues, now is agitating for additional recognition for his constituency. He has asked for a ruling which would compel all National League teams playing against the Dodgers to live in Brooklyn hotels while the series is being played in that borough. He believes that as long as these rival teams are paid for playing in Brooklyn they should spend their money at Brooklyn hotels, instead of in Manhattan . . . Leo Durocher, manager of MacPhail's Dodgers, always resides at the same hotel during the playing season—the Hotel New Yorker, on West Thirty-fourth Street.

CELEBRATION: The newsreels showing N. Y. C. celebrating New Year's Eve had only one night club scene—taken in the Gay White Way. George was anxious to make sure that no other cafe received such a publicity break. He accomplished it in this way: After the cameramen had completed their work at his place he induced them to sip Scotch, rye, brandy and champagne all at once.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 30 (INS).—A million-dollar "Western" to end all "Westerns" is being planned by Republic, no less, with Gene Autry as the star. Because the famous cowboy is one of the first ten of the annual Quigley box office poll, it has been decided to pour all that money into "Down Mexico Way," an outdoor thriller to be filmed in Mexico. Red-headed Susan Hayward, who is now playing in Republic's "Sis Hopkins," is being sought for one of the feminine leads opposite the amazing Gene. Negotiations are also under way for Xavier Cugat and his orchestra and one of the biggest femme names in the industry has been offered a terrific salary to costar with Gene.

Ernest Hemingway slipped quietly into town to confer with the Paramount biggies on his best-seller, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." There have been so many guesses as to who would play Maria that I was especially interested to hear today that in all likelihood little Betty Field, who did so well in "Victory" and whose "Shepherd of the Hills" is also said to be another vote in her favor, is leading the race. The decision will actually rest with Hemingway, the author. Paulette Goddard has also been widely discussed for Maria.

I had a long talk with Judith Anderson at Orry Kelly's home, where we both were dinner guests. Judith, who, in Belasco's day, was called the number one actress of the theater, has been approached by Lester Cowan to play one of the demented sisters in "Ladies in Retirement." She told me that she hadn't made up her mind to accept the offer and I understand Lillian Gish, who has been invited to play the Estelle Winwood role, hasn't yet obtained her release from the "Life with Father" company.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Virginia Field and Al Vanderbilt at the Mocambo. Who has more fun than Virginia, who really enjoys herself these days and yet, when you talk with her, her one topic of conversation is Richard Greene; Alice Faye and Artie Shaw tete-a-tete at the Beverly Tropics, created a young sensation; Bob Taplinger's brother, Sylvan Taplinger, marries Tyra Asinder, socialite in New York, Saturday.

Liz Whitney dining cozily at the Brown Derby with Bruce Cabot; Fibber McGee has been elected president of the Encino Chamber of Commerce and will take over office with big doings at the Grace Hayes lodge Friday night. All valleyites plan to be present; Boots Mallory, Jimmie Cagney's pretty sister-in-law, may do a Broadway show; William Collier, sr., who has been so very ill, is completely recovered and looks like a million.

Alexander Paal, who shot all the wonderful pictures of Charlie Chaplin and his family, is now connected with Stage Magazine; Dan Dailey, jr., Eleanor Powell's present big moment, has written a new song called, "I've Got A Splitting Heartache;"

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

"I'll be back in June. They can't keep me out of the big leagues."

The speaker was a gentleman farmer who looked surprisingly at home in a modern farmhouse some 10 miles beyond Silver Spring. You drive out Briggs Road, off the Colesville Pike on R.F.D. 2. A mile or so back you come to the white frame house with a huge snowman out front.

WHITTLESEY

The sculpture attracts your attention as a baseball bat is stuck in the armpit and a baseball cap adorns the somewhat lop-sided snowball meant for a head.

A second glance takes in a newly painted mailbox and closer inspection brings out the newly painted name of A. J. Powell. Jake to you.

A great dane puppy and a big, black Chesapeake Bay Retriever bounds around front and behind them a swaggering, 200-pound figure in his very early 30's. The fellow is a young veteran of 8½ years in the major leagues and four World Series.

Yes, it's Farmer Jake now. The former outfielder with the Nats and Yankees has purchased 170 acres just north of Colesville, Md., including the home, a garage, farmhouse and all that goes with it. Jake lives there with Mrs. Powell and 7-year-old Joan. It's just a mile or so from Sam Rice's chicken farm.

Jake is probably thinking of the farm as a place for his future for right now he swings into baseball and, as we said before, Jake says he will be back in the majors in June.

The Yankees sold him to San Francisco, you know. He wasn't much good to the former champions after smashing head first into a concrete wall during an exhibition game in Ashland, Ky., last year. He played in only five full games, 12 in all, and the story is that the Yanks sold him and the other clubs waived him out of the league to see if his head is all right, to see if he can take steady play.

Jake is too good a ball player to be through in the big time at his early age. For a fellow whose major crime appeared to be trying too hard in an exhibition game, it appears Jake is getting none of the best of it. But he doesn't look at it that way.

"As soon as that San Francisco Club sends me a contract with enough money on it (he's sent two back unsigned) I'll start for the Coast. I'll murder that pitching, out there. The Yankees, Tigers and Giants all need a right-handed hitting outfielder, they'll need one worse by June and that's me."

The picture of the 1936 World Series hero, the fellow who broke Hank Greenberg's arm by crashing into him at first base, the ball player who has drawn both cheers and boos in every ball park, is not too bright in San Francisco.

"The boys tell me the Seals have got two old timers, Barney Freiberg, the former Cub, at shortstop and Tony Lazzeri on second. I'll probably play centerfield and handle every ball hit between first and third that doesn't go right to them. They play a season of 184 games out there, too, 160 night games, and I'm not crazy about that night ball. The parks in the minors don't have decent lights."

"When they bring me back I just want about three more years, throw in a World Series or two and then give me a club to manage. I'd like to get hold of that Dayton franchise. They called me "Pants" Powell when I played out there. I was wearing a pair of pants Walter Johnson gave me and there wasn't enough elastic in them to hold 'em up. Every time I'd run they'd fall around my ankles and it was 'pants' from then on.

"We played before three fans and 32 peanut venders in the league one night. Another time the sheriff attached the property of our opponents. They took their uniforms home so they had them to wear, we loaned them three broken bats and our gloves and they beat us, 14-2."

Jake is going to miss the majors, for a while at least. He'd like to be in Florida right now, practicing for that baseball players' golf tournament. "Tony Cuccinello beat me out last year, but I'm tougher now. I'd win that driving contest, too."

Jake can hit that golf ball a country mile. Denny Galehouse beat him out for the driving contest last year after a half-dozen playoffs. They tied at a 281-yard average for three balls and again at 295. The winner was to be the best average, but all balls had to be in bounds.

Denny was hitting first, according to Jake, and he finally hit one out of the stakes. All Powell would have had to do was bunt three down the fairway, but he swung hard and also went O. B. "Then I hit first, knocked my third ball out and Denny got up there and just tapped three down the middle and won the contest in the rain, just before dark."

One thing Jake likes about that Coast league, he'll be able to play golf in the daytime. He thinks they'll get together on terms, they'll have to before long if he is going to get in shape as the Coast season starts April 5, and the Seals will be leaving for the Mexican border for training before long.

Jake asked us to pardon him at this point. He went down in the cellar, where a ping-pong table, three bags of golf clubs, baseball bats, bicycles and a game to keep his batting eye sharpened were clustred. He reached in a bag and pulled out a sweat shirt, pulled it over his head and asked us to accompany him on a little conditioning jaunt, just run a couple miles through the woods.

That's where we back-tracked toward Silver Spring.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Santa Anita, Jan. 30.—They're going to pay an unforgettable honor to a horse here next week. At the first running of the Seabiscuit Stakes (don't make that steaks, Mr. Printer) the old champ himself will make an appearance and lead the field to the post.

CONSIDINE

That's not all. They're unveiling a life size bronze statue of the Biscuit, hard by the paddock where he once stamped and fretted, and snuffled, "Lemme at 'em." Red Pollard who was up on him a lot of times when Seabiscuit was carving that unique niche in racing, will climb into his old Howard silks for the occasion, and ride the Biscuit to the post, when he comes out to parade before his howling admirers.

The old gentleman will come down here a couple of days before the ceremony. His home now is Ridgewood Ranch, to the North in the redwood country. He is the sultan of that California thoroughbred breeding center. Already he has seven sons and daughters. They are yearlings now, having been foaled last spring. They go to the racing wars in the spring of 1942. Charley Howard says that two or three of the colts are spittin' images of the good-natured, fat-barreled old nonentity who became one of the great all time thoroughbreds.

None of the seven heirs and heiresses of his great old racing heart were born when the old man won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap here last March.

But they were on the way. The expectant father put forth all the effort which is tradition in that situation. He, who had broken down after winning the championship from War Admiral, and been retired to stud, forgot his housemaid's knee and other distractions long enough to beat Kayak II and some other good horses to win the big race which twice before had eluded him by a whisker. He won enough to take care of the veterinary's fees, too. His share amounted to $86,080, and that upped his lifetime earnings to $437,730—replacing Sun Beau's long-time top figure of $376,744. It was quite a performance for an old guy who had given hostages to fortune.

All seven of the Biscuit's first-season mares are owned by Howard. The best known is Fair Knightess. This coming spring Howard will begin to sell Seabiscuit's services. The fee will be $2,500, or half the fee of Man o' War, who has had between 250 and 300 foals. There has been a grand rush to get on the Biscuit's book in the hope that he can duplicate himself. He was a lot of horse, as they say. He had to be a lot of horse to shake off a backbreaking 2-year-old career and a 3-year-old career which twice saw him run in cheap claiming races.

Seabiscuit is in pretty good shape today. Pollard is probably going to have a devil of a time keeping him out of that starting gate, the day he leads the field to the post.

For a long, long time the Biscuit went right into the gate and got himself ready for the start. It became a habit that still suffuses every corpuscle. We think he'll be indignant when

Penn State Wins Easily Over A. U., 32-17

Nittany Lions Take Early 10-2 Lead

Capt. John Barr Stars For Penn State; Schulze Shines for Washington Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Penn State bounced back after its overtime defeat at the hands of Georgetown to toy with American U. in hanging up a 32-17 victory last night in the Eagle gym.

The Nittany Lions, rated as one of the East's best teams before the game with the Hoyas, recorded their seventh victory of the season against three defeats while it was A. U.'s fifth loss in seven starts.

Making its first start in more than three weeks the host club was never in the running as the bigger and more experienced Penn State club ran up an early 10-2 lead and coasted in to a 15-point margin of victory.

As in the Georgetown game, Penn State produced the best ball player on the floor in Capt. John Barr, the 6 foot 2, 200-pound forward who scored only six points, but he was in on virtually every play, directed the attack and bottled up the A. U. offensive.

Schulze Scores 9 Points

Dutch Schulze, captain and star of Coach Staff Cassell's host outfit, was held to two field goals, but he dropped five out of six foul shots for a nine-point total for the night. Schulze played under the basket in an attempt to break up the Penn State zone defense, but his mates rarely worked the ball in to him. He accounted for two snowbirds while the only other A. U. man to make more than two points was Sub Jack Payne, who flipped two long shots from midcourt.

High-scoring honors went to the gangling center of the State College club, Herschel Baltimore, who dashed in on five follow-up shots and converted them for field goals and a 10-point total. Bob Ramin was next with nine points.

Penn State ran the score to 12-4 at the end of the first period with Barr and Baltimore making 10 of the 12 points. The Eagles spurted briefly in the second half, Dutch Schulze scoring four consecutive points and Gus Frizzell working the ball under the basket for a goal that cut the State margin to 16-10 but at halftime it was 19-10, Johnny Egli scoring all three points on foul shots.

Put on Exhibition

The invaders boasted a near double score lead at the end of the third period, 27-14, and they put on a passing exhibition as they were content to outscore A. U., 5-3, in the final 10 minutes.

Due to the fact that his club was playing two games in as many nights after a lay-off, Coach Johnny Lawther of the Penn State requested that both Georgetown and Penn State games be played in 10-minute quarters.

The result was somewhat surprising as on comparative scores, A. U. against Georgetown and Penn State against the same club, the Eagles were figured to put up a battle. They started missing assignments, however, and were too far behind most all the way to make up the difference.

Willie Hoppe Captures 3d Cue Match

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Willie Hoppe required 55 innings tonight to win his third successive match in defense of the world's three-cushion billiards championship.

Following his formula of turning on the heat after the intermission, Hoppe won, 50 to 26, over Irving Crane, of Livonia, N. Y., 26-year-old freshman in the title tournament.

The champion had more difficulty tonight than in his two previous matches, which he won in a total of 68 innings. The score was close until the intermission when Hoppe led, 27 to 23, at 36 innings. Then he drew away. At the forty-eighth frame the count was 37 to 25. After that he scored in every inning but one, going out with a cluster of 3.

Hoppe, who recently recovered from influenza and pneumonia, had a high run of 5, made twice. Crane's best was 4.

Lou Transparenti Stops Montana

Baltimore, Jan. 30 (AP).—Lou Transparenti, Baltimore bantamweight, punched out a unanimous decision over small Montana, Filipino, in the wind-up bout of the Arena Club's program of four ten-round bouts at the Coliseum tonight. Transparenti weighed 118½ and Montana, 116.

Results of other bouts:

Lee Murray, 196, Los Angeles, defeated Curtis Sheppard, 182, Pittsburgh, technical knockout, in the sixth round.

Bill Poland, 197, New York, scored a knockout over Georgie Hughes, 192, Pittsburgh, in the fifth.

Wilson Beats St. John Five Again, 27-22

A St. John's High cage team that was smashed by Woodrow Wilson earlier in the season came back to lose its second engagement with the Tigers by a mere 27-22 count yesterday at the latter's gym.

It was the third time this year the Johnnies have lost by that identical score, and their twelfth setback in 16 games. Wilson was credited with its fifth triumph in 11 games.

Though able to hold its foe to a lead of 5 points or less until midway of the last period, St. John's then saw Freddy Vinson and Don Hillock ram through a quick succession of goals that put Wilson out front, 27-16. The Johnnies tallied the last 6 points of the game, but they weren't enough.

Play became so fast and fierce in the final period that players almost came to blows twice, but each time hostilities were cut short by coaches and officials.

After an up and down first quarter the Cadets boasted a 9-7 lead, but it was their last. At the half it was Wilson, 15-10, and going into the final stanza the winners led, 19-15.

Hillock did most of the shooting for Wilson and consequently took scoring honors with 13 points. Vinson came next with 8. George Hughes topped the Cadets with three field goals and two charity tosses.

Kayak II Injured, Not To Run in Big Race

Charles S. Howard's Argentine Horse Bows Tendon; Owner Withdraws Charge From $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap

By the United Press

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 30.—Another star performer was stricken from the field of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap today when Charles S. Howard disclosed that Kayak II had bowed a tendon and could not be made ready for the seventh running of the world's richest horse race on March 1.

Winner of the Golden Gallop in 1939 and second to Seabiscuit in the same event a year ago, the coal-black Argentine colt apparently suffered the injury during a comparatively easy workout. Trainer Tom Smith found the bow—in the right foreleg—as Kayak cooled out this morning.

"The trouble is not overly serious now," Howard explained, "but I am afraid that if we were to keep him training it might become so. Veterinarians tell me if we went on with the work schedule we would run the risk of ruining a great horse. Obviously we don't want to do that, so we are withdrawing him. Training will be resumed in two or three months."

Opened as Second Choice

Kayak II, probably the best horse ever imported into the United States from South America, opened as second choice behind Challedon in the future book at a price of 4½ to 1. His stablemate, Mioland, recently was installed as favorite at 3 to 1 when it became known that Howard had shied away from the rangy Argentine in his bets.

The declaration leaves Howard with Mioland as the principal contender for the race in which he twice has finished first and three times has finished second. The San Franciscoan has two other eligibles, Yankee Dandy and Porter's Cap, of which Porter's Cap—winner of the $40,000 Washington Park Futurity—is the most likely starter. A decision on the latter, a 3-year-old, will not be made until after the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby on February 12.

Others Drop Out

Withdrawal of the Howard star closely followed the declarations of such other prominent contenders as Gallahadion, Whichcee, Specify, Big Flash and Heelfly. Additionally, Challedon is said to be several weeks retarded in training and is being considered a doubtful starter.

The best of the thoroughbreds still in sound shape are Mioland, Sweepida, Impound, St. Andrews, Viscounty, Fairy Chant and Aethelwold. However, if the injury list continues to mount and better horses continue to drop out, many of the horses not previously looked upon as starters probably will be sent along to shoot for third or fourth money.

Monteagudo Sold by Nats To Jersey City

The Nat's pitching staff shrunk to five 1940 holdovers and a lone southpaw yesterday as Edward Eynon, jr., secretary of the club, announced the outright release of Rene Monteagudo to the Jersey City Giants.

Although Eynon had nothing to say concerning a deal for another left-hander and Owner Clark Griffith is in Florida, it is evident the club is contemplating a deal as Ken Chase is now the only experienced portsider on the squad.

Monteagudo won two and lost six last year, mostly in relief roles. He was shipped to Jersey City, where he came through with several impressive performances and was brought back.

The 23-year-old Cuban, who was brought up in 1938 from Springfield, is apparently gone from the Nats for good, as yesterday's transaction was an outright sale with no strings attached.

With Joe Haynes and Joe Krakauskas also departed and Danny MacFayden the only newcomer, the pitching staff is now reduced to alarming proportions.

Bethesda Five Defeats Blair Before 3,000

By Bill Burnett

Their first and biggest step toward the Montgomery County scholastic cage crown and coveted invitations to out-of-town tournaments was taken by Bethesda-Chevy Chase basketers last night when they trampled their prime rival, Montgomery Blair, by a 35-21 score at Ritchie Coliseum.

With an estimated 3,000 rabid fans of both schools looking on, the Barons of Bethesda got off to a slow start, but came along fast in the last three periods to win as they pleased. It was their twelfth triumph in 15 games and Blair's tenth setback in 13.

One of the mildest clashes the clubs have ever staged resulted from their first meeting this year, supporters taking their rivalry out in ear-splitting yells and basketball and in both departments the Barons shone.

For one-quarter Blair—recently nicknamed the "Blazers"—made a game of it and then sagged under Bethesda's onslaught. The volume of its supporters' cheers suffered, as a result, and Bethesda walked off with all honors.

The Barons got the first three points of the game, but Blair came back to grab a 4-3 edge a few moments later. Another exchange gave Blair a 6-5 margin, but when Al Gaist flipped one from far out for the Barons the Silver Spring team's last advantage had disappeared.

At intermission Blair trailed, 17 to 9, and after three periods its deficit was 29 to 11. A slight rally was put on in the last period, the losers outscoring their opponents, 10 to 6, but there was never any doubt of the outcome.

Despite his team's rout, Nick Carter, rangy forward of Blair, came out with 12 points and the high-scoring effort. Only two mates, however, helped out. Bethesda was paced by Gaist, with ten points, and Bob Cremins and Duke Hashagen with seven each.

Precedent with regard to a close game and rough play was kept alive by junior varsity fives of the warring schools. Bethesda earning a 21-to-19 decision in the preliminary. It took two overtimes to do it, however, and credit for the crucial points went to young Al Sherline. Southgate had ten points for the losers.

Baltimorean Conditioned For Contest

Dempsey Protege Ready to Give Champ Real Fight, He Says; Louis 10-1 Favorite

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 30.—The most determined of all efforts to wrest the world heavyweight championship from Joe Louis will be made tomorrow night when Red Burman, Jack Dempsey's diciple, squares off against the Detroit Negro at Madison Square Garden.

This red-haired Baltimore Irishman is the most carefully conditioned challenger ever to face Bomber Joe. Moreover, he represents a faction of the fight game that is bitterly opposed to the joint regime of Louis and Promoter Mike Jacobs.

Burman and his gang are out to cop the crown tomorrow night. Regardless of the challenger's apparent chances, this certainly is no mere fight-a-month performance for Louis, attempting his thirteenth title defense.

Three months' Training

Burman, 25 years old and the best body puncher in the heavyweight division, has been grooming for nearly three months. Right at the peak of prowess and in perfect condition, Red's sharpness is matched by his courage. Here is one challenger who will enter the ring without fear, ready to shoot the works in a desperate attempt to win the biggest gamble of his career.

Betting men have made Louis the 10-1 favorite to retain his crown, and most experts expect Burman to get knocked out within four rounds because he is a slo starter. But the smart-money boys of Broadway and the experts are wrong almost as often as they are right.

Louis naturally is favored because of his amazing record and because of his apparently physical assets—harder punch, 11-pound weight advantage, longer reach and greater height.

Burman's lone advantage seems to be his style. He is a natural croucher, thoroughly schooled in the Dempsey bob and weave. Crouchers always have given shufflin' Joe plenty of trouble. Tommy Farr and Arturo Godoy came close to winning the title, and fat Tony Galento almost knocked out the champion. Burman is more of an artist with the bob and weave than any of that trio. Although not a great puncher, he hits harder than Farr or Godoy.

Only on Knockout

Like Louis there is but one kayo charged against his record. He was stopped in 1936 by John Henry Lewis, then light heavyweight champion, in the second round, after being floored nine times. Like Louis, too, Red has been on the

Alice Marble, Mary Hardwick Meet for 14th Time Tonight

Budge, Tilden Also on Card At Maryland

Marble and Tilden To Pair in Mixed Doubles; 4,000 Fans Expected for Matches

Alice Marble, who has lost but one tennis match in 239 since June of 1936, and Mary Hardwick, former Wightman Cup star from England, will command the attention of something like 4,000 persons tonight at Ritchie Coliseum of the University of Maryland.

In the fourteenth match of their coast-to-coast professional tour the American queen, champion of the world of tennis, and her British companion, will match strokes, starting at 8:15.

Don Budge, erstwhile world champion, now lord of the professional players, will take off against Big Bill Tilden, the one time titleholder, in the second match.

Both the Marble-Hardwick and Budge-Tilden matches will be two out of three sets. In the final match of the program Miss Marble and Tilden will face Budge and Miss Hardwick.

The advance sale yesterday indicated nothing short of a capacity crowd. Eddie Bean, local promoter for the Coliseum matches, announced that there had been a terrific demand for reservations and that they must be picked up at 5 p. m.

Have Tea at Embassy

The Coliseum doors will open at 7 o'clock. Tickets may be procured at the Hecht Co. Sport Shop, Seventh and F Streets Northwest; the Sport Center, Eighth and D Streets Northwest; American Automobile Association, Seventeenth and Pennsylvania Avenue; Lowe & Campbell, Vermont Avenue and K Street Northwest, and University of Maryland.

Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick arrived early in the afternoon and took up quarters at the Ambassador. They had tea at the British Embassy at 5:15 with Lady Halifax, wife of the new British Ambassador, and spent some 40 minutes chatting with her ladyship.

Lady Halifax said both she and Lord Halifax were tennis fans, had seen the American and British girls play at Wimbledon, had followed their tennis fortunes with great interest. Lord and Lady Halifax were given invitations to be their guests at tonight's matches. It was the first tea Lady Halifax had given since her arrival in this country.

Both stars were interviewed by Arch McDonald over Station WJSV on his sports program dedicated to the tennis match, and it was over the radio that they confessed that they were getting a great kick out of the professional tour.

Bill Tilden Arrives

Bill Tilden, looking in great condition despite his 27 years of professional campaigning, was the first of the stars to arrive. His opponent, Budge, twice his junior, reaches town this morning. Fans have seen both players in action. Budge when he beat both Ellie Vines and Fred Perry, but this will be their first square at Budge and Tilden in a match. Thus far Budge holds the upper hand, as Tilden has been able to win only one match. Tilden's leg was injured in an auto accident, is O. K., and Big Bill believes he'll blister the red-haired "too death," as he puts it with his cannonball services tonight.

The only mark on Miss Marble's escutcheon since 1936 was a defeat last week in Boston at the hands of the English girl, who reached her greatest heights since her victory over Helen Wills Moody some years back. The charming British girl frankly thinks she'll win a lot of matches before the tour ends in May.

Today between 12 and 2 p. m. Eleanor Tennant, Miss Marble's discover-teacher, and Tilden will lecture at the Hecht Co. Sports Store. At 4 p. m. Miss Tennant and Miss Marble will hold a clinic, free to the public, at Tech High gym.

floor in others of his 53 professional bouts, but he always got up. He rose from the floor in his last fight on October 21 to beat hard-punching Tony Musto. The game Maryland mauler has been beaten but once in the last two years. He lost a close return bout with Farr in London in April, 1939, after beating Farr at New York in January of that year.

Louis, busiest champion in heavyweight history will be risking his title for the second time within seven weeks. He stoped Al McCoy at Boston on December 16 in the sixth round. But he made such a sorry showing before McCoy quit, that many experts declared the champion, at 26½ years, was definitely on the toboggan. However, Louis appeared in excellent condition while training for Burman.

The champion will motor in from his Greenwood Lake, N. Y., camp tomorrow for the noon weigh-in where he expects to scale 203 pounds, the heaviest he ever registered for a title defense. Burman, who drove into New York today from Summit, N. J., expects to weigh about 192.

Promoter Jacobs expects a near-capacity crowd and a gate of more than $70,000. More than 3,000 fans are expected to come in from Baltimore on special trains and buses.

The main bout is scheduled for 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) It will be broadcast over the N. B. C. blue network.

Catcher Ray Mueller Optioned by Pirates

Pittsburgh, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates disclosed tonight they have optioned Catcher Ray Mueller to Rochester of the International League without the right of recall during the season.

Mueller, who will be 29 next March, was obtained from the Boston Bees in 1938 but failed to gain a regular job because of his light batting. He hit .240 for Rochester last season and was recalled for a brief retrial by the Bucs.

Hockey Eagles Host To Orioles Tonight

Capacity Crowd Expected to Be On Hand For Battle at Riverside Stadium; Norman Burns Returns to D. C. Club

A capacity crowd, the largest of the season, is anticipated at Riverside Stadium tonight when the Eastern League leading hockey Eagles go after their twelfth consecutive victory against the defending champion Baltimore Orioles at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles will enter tonight's game with a five point margin of league leadership and trailing by but three points in the Atlantic City Boardwalk Cup Series despite the fact that they have played three fewer games than the Orioles. In six previous meetings they have won three matches, lost two and tied one and have outscored the Orioles by a margin of 29 points to 21.

Two of the six games have lapsed into overtime. In the last game a new attendance record of more than 4,600 paid was set as the locals romped home after a furiously fought game, 6 to 2.

The league leaders will be strengthened tonight by the return of Norm Burns, leading Eastern League scorer, who was inactive against Atlantic City last Tuesday night because of a lacerated cheek and badly blackened right eye. Burns yesterday was pronounced fit for action after skating through a brisk workout at Riverside that found him little the worse for his injuries.

Heads League Scorers

Burns, despite last Tuesday night's lay-off, remains the Eastern League's individual scoring leader with 60 points as against 53 each for Atlantic City's Sammy Dasano and Heck Pozzo, who are tied for second place. He is crowding the Eastern League record of 53 goals set by Baltimore's Norm Calladine last season and also is hot after the 101 point scoring total set by New York's Ab Collings last season.

Baltimore's bully boys, who invariably play their most aggressive hockey against the Eagles, will be back in full stride tonight. Numbered among these are three defensemen averaging well over 200 pounds, namely: Bob Dill, Jack Dyte and Guy Roach.

Ned Vitarelli, 146-pound thunderbolt of the Orioles, and Ken Partis, smooth skating center who has been going great guns since shifting from Washington last season, also will bear watching.

Another spectacular duel of goalies will find Washington's courageous Gordon Hemming, boasting four victories and a tie in five consecutive starts in the nets, opposed to Baltimore's brilliant freshman net tender, Frank Ceryance. Both Ceryance and Hemming have been credited with amazing saves while opposed previously and may be expected to continue their fine work tonight.

Washington's wrecking crew of John McTeer, Gordon Pranschke, Ross Knipfel, Frank Mailley and Paul Courteau tonight will await any challenge the Orioles hurl their way.

Tickets for tonight's match are on sale at Riverside and reservations may be made through Republic 2950.

Canada Calls Mailley, Eagle Star, to Colors

Frank Mailley, aggressive and popular wingman of the Washington Eagles, was called to the Canadian colors yesterday in an official notification from the Canadian Military Board.

Mailley was ordered to report within three days for his physical examination and other routine formalities.

The popular Washington winger, who was twice rejected after a physical examination upon volunteering for service within the past several months, said he would immediately make written application for the right to delay reporting until after the hockey season.

"They turned me away after two examinations previously due to an operation I had undergone for a rupture received in hockey last season," Mailley explained, "and I believe they will excuse me until after the close of the Eastern League season.

Mailley plans entering the aviation service if his plea is rejected and he passes the physical test.

"I'm willing to go in there and do my bit, and the fact that I have volunteered twice proves it," he declared yesterday, "but I would like to play the season out. However, if they still insist I report, I will do so.

"I have found Washington a wonderful town and the Eagles a great team. Inasmuch as we appear to be headed for a pennant and I feel I can do my bit I'm anxious to play out the string here. After that I'll be ready for the call."

Toronto Wins Over Detroit Hockeyists, 2-1

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Jan. 30.—Sweeney Schriner's seventeenth goal of the season, scored within the last three minutes of the third period, brought the first-place Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings tonight and ran their National Hockey League lead to six points over the idle Boston Bruins.

The Leafs had to come from behind to ring up their fifth game without a loss.

Amerks Win First 1941 Hockey Contest

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The rebuilt New York Americans tonight finally won their first 1941 National Hockey League game tonight, outlasting the Chicago Blackhawks for a 5-4 victory that was in doubt until the last exciting minute of a fast game.

Manager Red Dutton introduced three new players. While the two forwards, Pete Kelly and Chuck Corrigan, did not figure in the scoring and the new goalie, Chuck Rayner, let in four goals, the fresh blood nonetheless seemed to give added impetus to a club that had lost six games and drawn two since its victory New Year's Eve over Montreal.

Wilson Cagers Meet Gallaudet Five Tonight

Wilson Teachers College will stake its reputation as the District's best small-college basketball team tonight when it meets Gallaudet at 8:30 p. m. on the Eastern High School floor.

The Owls defeated the Blues, 57-50, in their first meetnig on the Gallaudet court but in the last four games Gallaudet has shown a tremendous improvement and boasts two victories over Towson, and one over Shepherd State.

Tomorrow night Wilson meets Blue Ridge on the Maryland school's court.

The University of Maryland has two Southern Conference engagements over the week-end, meeting Richmond tonight in the Virginia capital and Duke tomorrow night in Durham. The Terps have lost to both teams in earlier games.

D. C. Legion Pin League Engages Richmond Here

The Washington American Legion Bowling League will undertake the second edition of its annual rivalry with Richmond Legionnaires tomorrow night at Lucky Strike Alleys, it was announced last night. Firing will begin at 7:30.

Winners of the first meeting last month by a scanty 1687-1685 margin, District of Columbia pinmen are anticipating a desperate effort from a Richmond team which has failed to emerge victorious in six years of rolling.

Immediately following the match Jack Mulvey and Ernie Campbell, league officers, will play hosts to members and friends of both teams at a dance to be given by Fort Stevens Post at Indian Spring Country Club.

Billy Southworth In Cheerful Mood

St. Louis, Jan. 30 (AP).—Billy Southworth, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, came to St. Louis in a happy mood today.

He was optimistic over the club's chances in the National League pennant race and he was to see his son, Billy, who is in training at Parks Air College in East St. Louis.

"There aren't any trades on the fire," said Southworth after talking with President Sam Breadon. "Everything that could be done along that line has been done, but we are very optimistic about the prospects of our team."

Southworth will return to his Columbus, Ohio, home this week-end and depart for the St. Petersburg, Fla., training camp about February 10.

Hungarians on Table Tennis Card Here

Tibor and Magda Gal Hazi, who own or share three of the four championships which will go on the block in the Eastern Table Tennis tournament at Heurich gym tomorrow and Sunday, last night were revealed as the sole purpose of a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, on Wednesday.

National as well as Eastern mixed doubles champions, it appears that the Hazis are in danger of being deported to their native Hungary inasmuch as the Hungarian quota is full and their visa is close to expiration.

Eager to becomes United States citizens as well as remain in this country, the Hazis were becoming frantic until table tennis friends here in Washington prevailed upon Senator Davis to aid them. The result was Senate Bill No. 639, entitled: "A bill for the relief of Tibor Hoffman and Magda Gal Hoffman," which has been referred to the Senate Committee on Immigration.

The bill would not make citizens of the Hungarians, but would make it legal for them to stay in America indefinitely. The substance of it is contained in these words: "Be it enacted . . . That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, Tibor Hoffman and his wife, Magda Hoffman, shall be held and considered to have been legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence on the date of their entry into the United States."

Adopted Name

The Hoffmans referred to are the Hazis who were forced to adopt the latter, a Hungarian sports name, by their native land's government. Under an old law, any Hungarian representing his country in international competition must have a Hungarian name. But the male Hazi's real surname is Hoffman.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazi first came to the United States in the spring of 1939 on the invitation of the U. S. Table Tennis Association, then headed by Morris Bassford, of Washington, to participate in the national championships. A sensation, the male Hazi was runner-up to Jimmy McClure for the men's singles title and won the doubles crown with Laszlo Bellak. Mrs. Hazi was eliminated only by Sally Green, current women's champion.

In their playing careers, the Hazis have won more than 1,000 championships in ten years of international play. Both were members of their country's Corbillon and Swaythling Cup teams (the Wightman and Davis Cups of table tennis) and, indeed, met and developed their romance at table tennis tournaments. They were married four years ago.

Their official entry into the Eastern last night gave the officials a perfect record for rounding up defending champions of all four classes which start play tomorrow afternoon. Lou Pagliaro, the national singles champ, will be defending the Eastern crown; Mrs. Hazi, the women's title; she and her husband, the mixed doubles title and Mr. Hazi and Hamilton Canning, of Philadelphia, the men's doubles title.

Tournament officials were to make the draw early today and first-round patrings will be announced in tomorrow morning's newspapers.

Meanwhile, ticket agencies at Spalding's, the American Automobile Association, Chevy Chase Ice Palace and Columbia Table Center announced a growing demand for seats. With the exception of the finals on Sunday, however, none will be reserved, general admission for the first three sessions being 55 cents and 75 cents for the final. Reserved chairs will sell for $1.10.

School Spotlight And Mt. Rainier On Hyattsville

With public school basketball hostilities at a standstill for exam week, and the Washington-Lee vs. G. W. High rivalry in Ballston set back a day, scholastic interest in this vicinity today will be centered on Hyattsville where the home club comes to grips with Mount Rainier in one of the battles that annually highlights the season of both. Game time will be 7:30, with a preliminary involving girls' teams of the schools.

In something of an upset, Mount Rainier won an earlier meeting by a 26-25 count, he records, however, a 26-25 count. The records, however, similar. The Mounts own six victories in ten games and Hyattsville has won seven in ten.

Other games today bring together Landon and Calvin Coolidge on the floor of the Lelanders at 3:30, and Rockville and Fairfax at Fairfax gym the same time.

Petworth Wins

Petworth A. C. defeated Maritime Commission, 32-22, last night at Tech High, with Joe Walters high scorer.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I hope you enjoyed reading about my little side trip to Key West. Well, it sort of awakened the wanderlust in me. The fact that I haven't heard from you seems to indicate your hearty approval, so I'm planning another little jaunt — just a hop, skip and a jump, so to speak. I believe I'll go to Nassau, Havana, Panama Canal Zone, Trinidad and I might even take a little dip down Argentine way. I figured it out with the man in the tourist office and the cost is just a drop in the bucket. I explained that I was a light eater and he gave me a special rate of $897. Of course, I could have sneaked a small item like that on my expense account as "600 tickets to the President's Birthday Ball." But I figure if I gave up my $25-a-day room here and don't put in for my $20 a day losing money at the race track, it will more than make up the difference.

I took a ride up to Palm Beach this morning to see how the S. S. Manhattan was doing on that sand bar where she stuck two weeks ago. The Miami Herald sent one of their crack writers up, a fellow named Steve Trumbull. He got a few more angles than I did so I've got his yarn here in front of me. I thought for a while that I had hit the jackpot and was going to be on the scene when the liner was pulled out to sea. A pair of hefty tugs puffed up beside the Manhattan and 12-inch hawsers were attached. The tugs began the pull and with the ropes at fiddlestring tautness the bow of the luxury draft turned slightly toward the open sea. I couldn't restrain myself and I gave a whoop. Just then a man tapped me on the back and growled, "Shut up you fool. We don't want no rooting." But the Manhattan did not get off the bar today. The tugs huffed and they puffed but the stern held fast. I had a rather sad feeling about it. I turned and looked for the man who had reprimanded me. He was down at the water's edge waving his hat and yelling for all he was worth. I didn't understand until later when I saw him, smiling like a Cheshire cat, beside his ice cream wagon. Then I realized that the day had been saved for the small army of opportunists who have been commercializing on the plight of the liner. In fact a native told me that these fellows seem to lay in wait for chances like this one.

Last year, 'twas big business when a German freighter was chased into Port Everglades by a British cruiser. But the Manhattan's hold tight act is proving the biggest beach boom since a 32,000-pound whale shark was landed in Biscayne Bay in 1912. In fact the territory along the shore where the big boat lies is now called "Manhattanville" and there're more rackets around there than could be found at Wimbledon. When the liner gets away, if it ever does, what is now a thriving center will revert back to a wilderness. Although the estimated peak of 20,000 visitors a day that marked the first week of the "show" has simmered down, there's still need for special traffic police and cars are parked for a mile either way. There's a sign on the side of the road with an arrow pointing—"Manhattan." Peanut vendors, sandwich wagons, ice cream carts of every description are doing a land office business. There has been quite a battle on about the picture and post card rights. One enterprising woman has brought out a fine photo of the grounded ship and it has been selling like hotcakes. She and her agents are said to have gotten rid of 20,000 of them.

The first photographers and reporters to reach the scene had to almost fight their way through underbrush and tropical tangle to reach the beach. Now there's a well-tramped, 6-foot path to the point, lined with all sorts of souvenirs and gadgets. For no other reason than the fact there's a crowd, a man is doing pretty well selling mechanical dogs. I'm told that three days ago, a group of boys put up a sign half way along the path which read "Admission Ten Cents." They explained that the money was used to "keep the route in shape." When the police arrived in the afternoon the youngsters escaped but left $5 in change, a small part of their revenue, in a cigar box. Captains of boats usually used for fishing have forsaken Isaac Walton to get into the quick money. One boat makes regular trips around the Manhattan at 10 a. m. and at 1 and 3 p. m., charging 50 cents a passenger. Last Sunday, I'm told, the boats were taking reservations in advance, and the price was upped to a buck. Some of the conversations along the beach are honeys. Almost everybody has some theory for getting the liner afloat or for why it got there. Trumbull says one old fellow, speaking in a serious tone, wanted an inch-by-inch search made of the heavy underbrush. He is convinced that Hitler's agents have secreted some sort of a superpowered, long-range magnet in those bushes and that the gadget pulled the Manhattan ashore. After the tugs had given up attempts to float the ship today, there was a distinct feeling of relief about the place. The smiles grew even broader when it was announced that the next major effort will be made on February 7, the next full tide. The Manhattanville Chamber of Commerce now being organized is opposed to even trying to move the liner.

Always your ace,
MIAMI HAIGHT.

Chicago Sending Three 'Fat' Men To Hot Springs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 30.—It's going to cost the Chicago White Sox $1,200 to get the "fat man's" brigade in shape for spring training at Pasadena, Calif., next month.

Three hefties, who love their double steaks, stuffed turkey and pastry, departed tonight for Hot Springs, Ark., to melt off 60 pounds before reporting for training February 24.

They are Lefty Edgar Smith, who won 14 and lost 9 last season; Outfielder Taft Wright, who batted .337, and Outfielder Julius Solters, a .308 hitter. Collectively, they scaled 629 pounds, with Solters tipping the beam at 217.

Coach "Mule" Haas is in charge of the party. He will send the trio through a program of muscle-bending, roadwork and sweating, restricting eating to two meals daily.

Badminton Tourney Set Here, Feb. 7

Washington badminton enthusiasts are due for a lot of excitement next week when the Fourth Annual Atlantic Coast Badminton Championships, second in importance to the Nationals, gets under way at the Kensington Armory February 7.

The early round matches are scheduled for the evening of the seventh with the quarter-finals and the semifinals to be played in the afternoon and evening of the eighth. Final matches will start at 2 p. m. Sunday afternoon, February 9.

Champions Abound

Heading the many sectional, State and city champions that entered is Walter Kramer, Detroit, twice national champion and currently ranked No. 2 in the country, who is expected to make a strong bid for the undefended men's singles title. Clinton Stephens last season's title holder, will not be able to protect his crown, being one of the selectees stationed at Camp Dix.

Included in the group of formidable out-of-town contenders are Defending Doubles Champs Paul Vansco and George Harris, Wanda Bergman and Helen Gibson, women's doubles holders; Ken Quigley, of Cleveland, ranked third, and Carl Loveday, of Los Angeles, ranked fourth nationally. Mary Whittemore, last year's women's winner, is not expected to enter due to a sprained ankle. Leading the female contenders are Patsy Donovan, of Cleveland, and Mary Hagan, of New York.

Tickets for the tournament may be purchased at the badminton clubs or at the Tennis Shop.

Devitt Prep Beats Briarley M. A., 27 to 15

By the simple process of taking a quick lead and holding it throughout, Devitt Prep won its seventh basketball game of the year yesterday, beating Briarley Military Academy five, 27-15, at the Laurel Armory.

The winners, abetted by the Cadets' inability to find the goal, managed for a half-time advantage of 12-7 and increased it steadily. Two full teams were used by Prep.

Pacing the scoring was Jack McCaffrey, forward, who contributed eight points to the winning margin. Phil Delisi had six. Five counters by Reed topped individual point making of the losers.

Little Defends Grid Rule Changes

Columbia Coach Asks Other Mentors To Calm Themselves

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—Coach Lou Little, of Columbia University, feels that many of his fellow football mentors have become unduly alarmed about the "radical" changes made in the rules last month, and in a special pronunciamento issued today he asks that the boys calm themselves.

"Why all the excitement?" he asks. "The changes are not radical, and I believe that practical trial will prove them to be of definite benefit. They will not throw the game out of balance in the slightest."

Little feels a personal responsibility in the matter, because he was a member of the football coaches committee that sat in with the rule committee and sponsored the changes. He has received a lot of letters from puzzled coaches and has heard of some strange reactions.

"I saw a story the other day where one coach was worried about the new rule permitting the ball to be handed forward behind the line of scrimmage," he said. "This coach had the idea that the ball could be handed forward to a lineman on the line of scrimmage, and feared that the result would be a helter-skelter attack.

"Actually, the rule provides that the ball may not be handed forward to any offensive man who is on the line of scrimmage, or to any player who comes from the line, unless he has faced his own goal and is at least a yard back when he receives the ball."

Little also cautions his compatriots against worrying about the new unlimited substitution rule.

"Don't worry about that. There will be no wholesale substituting. Anyway, I never saw an inferior team master-minded into beating a better team, and I don't think anyone ever will."

C. U. Ringmen Meet Coast Guard; Columbus Opens Season

Gerry Strang Leads Cards Tomorrow

Louis O'Neill Foe Of C. U. Captain; Leo Houck, Jr., Will Meet Rugged Fighter

Capt. Gerry Strang, Catholic University's veteran 135-pounder, will make his first start of the season tomorrow night when the undefeated and untied Cardinal ring team meets the invading squad of the United States Coast Guard Academy in the Catholic University gymnasium.

Gerry's opponent for his first bit of ring action will be Louis O'Neill, four-year veteran with a record of five victories against four losses and one draw. Three of the five were scored by knockouts which is another way of exploiting the invading boxer's punching ability.

The battle will mark the fourteenth for Strang under the Catholic University colors, including three fights in the national intercollegiates held last year on the West Coast. In college competition the Canadian born middleweight has scored eight victories, six by knockouts, against two defeats and one draw. As a 165-pounder he is undefeated, both his setbacks suffered when fighting in the 155 and 175-pound classes. On the West Coast last year he battled his way to the finals only to lose by a disputed decision.

Coach's Son Fights

Leo Houck, jr., son of Penn State's famous boxing coach, who made a very successful debut last week scoring a knockout, will have his hands full tomorrow night in meeting rugged Jim McLaughlin, the Coast Guards' 175-pound entry. The latter fought in the disputed "no bout" contest against Maryland two weeks ago.

Leo Gaffney, dandy little 135-pounder, who made an impressive start last week, will meet stiff competition in Johnny Natwig, one of two Coast Guard battlers boasting a clean record. In four starts the invader is undefeated, scoring over Pat Quinn, Maryland University's lightweight, two weeks ago at New London, Conn.

Other bouts are as follows: Ted Mandris (C. U.) vs. Bob Cunningham, 120 pounds; Lenny Bartone (C. U.) vs. Bob Sutherland (C. G.), 127 pounds; Huck Hughes (C. U.) vs. Stanley Ellis (C. G.), 145 pounds; Leon Wowak (C. U. vs. Mark McGarity (C. G.), 155 pounds; Bernard Cody (C. U.) vs. Fred Goettel (C. G.), heavyweights.

Eight bouts will complete the card, the opening bell scheduled for 8:15.

Clara Munroe Leads League With 325 Set

Clara Munroe, Silver Spring Bakery, was the high scorer in the Silver Spring Ladies' League at Hugh Arbaugh's drives, rolling a 118 top game and 325 high set. It was the Howard Hairdressers, however, who took the team honors, getting 510 and 1,473 to excel. The Hendricks Service girls won all three games from Kay-Rene.

INTERSORORITY

Marie Hagermann, Sigma Phi Gamma No. 1, and Herma Reid, Beta Gamma Phi, were the leaders in the Intersorority play at Brookland Recreation, the former rolling high game of 129 as the latter took the set with 324. Chi Sigma No. 2 was best team for the high game with a 489 count as Chi Sigma No. 1 took the set with 1,384. Alpha Zeta Beta No. 1 still leads the league.

UTILITY

Eileen Robertson, Amperes, was the leader of the Utility Girls League last night at New Recreation, her 142 high game setting a new league record by 15 pins. Lillian Dennis, a teammate, won the high set with a 322 count. Miss Robertson's splendid bowling was the main reason why her Amperes set two new season highs for game and set with 506 and 1,387, respectively.

ICE PALACE

Dorothy Bock, Orioles, and Margaret Gerke, Robins, split the high honors in the Connecticut Avenue Ladies play at the Ice Palace last night, the former getting high game of 125 as the latter rolled the top set of 318. Edith Elliott, Cardinals, tied Catherine Hanlein's high flat game of 94. The Owls took top team game with 471 as the Orioles captured the set with a 1,351 count. The Orioles and Blue Jays top the league.

D. C. GOVERNMENT

The D. C. Government League at Brookland Recreation was paced by Dent, a newcomer, who helped his Division of Material team take all three from Pumping No. 2 with the night's high game of 148. Larry Duvall was the same help to his City Refuse No. 1 mates for the team whitewashed Highway Planning because of his 369 top set. The Repair Shop boys were best for team totals, getting 578 for game and 1,667 for the set. The Sewer Department quintet leads the league.

D. C. TAXI

Johnny Ressa's high set of 378 in the D. C. Taxi play at Brookland Recreation was the main reason why his Premier Cab No. 1 boys won the team highs with 568 pins for the game and 1,664 for top set. George Hurst, Washington Cab, led in the high game with a 154. Bell Cab won the odd game from the leading Redskins with the help of Ed Chopin's 133-336, and now are only three games from a tie with the 'Skins.

LADIES FEDERAL

Eva Grandjian, Interior, was the main spark in the Ladies' Federal play at Arcadia, her 152 game and 386 set taking her team to the high game of 538 and a record set of 1,617, which upped the previous high of RFC No. 1 by five sticks. The Marines are three games ahead of the second place Agriculture girls.

Leo Freisinger To Defend Ice Skating Crown

By the Associated Press

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 30.—A wide open battle for the North American speed skating championship starts tomorrow with Defending Titleholder Leo Freisinger, stocky Chicago Olympic veteran, a slight favorite.

Main threat to Freisinger in the three-day meet that will determine titles in seven other divisions is big Ken Bartholomew, the Minneapolis flier, who last week displaced the Chicagoan as national champion at La Crosse, Wis.

Four others, however, definitely rank as contenders: Vic Ronchetti, Chicago, winner of the 1938 title; Chuck Leighton, Minneapolis, and Del Lamb, Milwaukee, both former Olympians, and young Ted Ellenwood, Amsterdam, N. Y., holder of the Middle Atlantic and Eastern championships.

Race officials described the six-lap oval track "lightning fast." However, in the event of a sudden temperature rise, arrangements have been made to transfer the meet to a hilltop lake near the city.

A two-way fight for honors in the women's division shaped up between National Champion Carmelita Landry, Fitchburg, Mass., and Louise Herou, Minneapolis, runner-up to Miss Landry at Lacrosse.

Tomorrow's opening program features the 220-yard and mile races in the senior men's division, and in the women's group the 220 and three-quarter mile events. Races also will be held in the boys' and girls' intermediate, junior and juvenile groups.

Missouri, Spartans Meet on Grid in 1941

Columbia, Mo., Jan. 30 (AP).—Michigan State College will resume football relations with the University of Missouri in 1944, Don Faurot, Tiger football coach, said tonight.

The first game will be played here November 4. The following year Missouri will play Michigan State at East Lansing.

Miss Hicks, Grace Amory Golf Finalists

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 30.—Short, stocky Elizabeth Hicks of Pasadena, Calif., and tall, slender Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, moved into the finals of the Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament today.

They will meet at 36 holes tomorrow for the trophy won five times in a row by Patty Berg before she turned pro

Miss Hicks, who smashed the course record in winning medal honors, took a comparatively easy 5 and 4 decision today from Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C. A finalist in the national championship last year.

One down at the turn to Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., Miss Amory rallied smartly and hung on to win one up.

Miss Amory, a member of the exclusive Palm Beach social set, who flies down to Miami daily to play her matches, turned in a two-over-women's-par 79—two strokes better than Miss Miley's card.

The turning point in the match came at the 550-yard fifteenth hole, where Miss Miley hit a ball into the green-guarding canal and took a seven to go one-down for the first time.

Three-putting cost the black-haired Kentuckian a chance to draw even on the sixteenth and a great 15-foot downhill putt saved Miss Amory on the seventeenth. Miss Miley made a last effort to save the match by rimming the cup with a 40-footer on the eighteenth.

Miss Cothran managed to win only one hole, dropping a 12-foot putt for an eagle two on the 215-yard twelfth. Miss Hicks closed out the match by sinking a 10-footer for a deuce on the 145-yard fourteenth.

Georgetown's Indoor Track Team Active

Georgetown will go after another crown tomorrow night when its mile relay team competes in the famed Millrose games at Madison Square Garden. The Hoya quartet of Pete McAtee, Ken Lydon, Charley Williams and Mort Alnwick won its initial start in the Prout Memorial Games at Boston last week. Opposed to Georgetown will be N. Y. U., unbeaten in three starts, and Pittsburgh.

Hap Hardell, Hoya track coach, announced yesterday that Hugh Short, freshman from Hillside, N. J., has been invited to participate in the special 300-yard race which will feature Hal Davis, national sprint champion, and Barney Elwell, Negro star.

Monday will mark the 1941 debut of Al Blozis, national shotput champion and world indoor record holder, in the Seton Hall Invitation Meet. The giant Blozis will be out to better his own world record of 55 feet, 8¾ inches. The Millrose games have no shotput event. Also in the Seton Hall meet will be Jack Doolan, sensational Georgetown halfback and former national interscholastic sprint champion, who will be making his first varsity start.

Hardell will enter his varsity mile relay quartet in the two-mile event.

6-Day Bike Racer Gets 3-Month Draft Deferment

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—Charles Yaccino, 31, who earns his living by pedaling a bicycle in six-day races, was granted a 90-day deferment by a draft appeal board today because of his occupation.

The board office explained Yaccino was considered necesary to his business enterprise since his being drafted would prevent his racing partner from engaging in contests already planned.

Explorers To Engage The Citadel

Inaugural Fights Scheduled for Turner's Arena Tomorrow Night

Three men provide the backbone of Columbus University's boxing team, which makes its seasonal debut tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, against the Citadel's veteran aggregation.

Two of the men—Charlie Cox and Lou Taub—are veterans. As a matter of fact, they're the only experienced men on the squad. The other is a newcomer, Light Heavyweight Red Doherty. The remainder of the team, which Coach Jim McNamara selected today, is rugged and that's about all.

Taub, a featherweight, is due to shine this year. He fought two matches last winter with a broken jaw, which speaks rather highly of his courage. Cox is a seasoned middleweight who is being pushed up a notch to look after the 165-pound slot, but it's the gangling Doherty who's supposed to be the surprise package.

Match for Leo Houck

Doherty comes from New England and has had a lot of boys' club boxing experience. He hits hard with both hands, and Coach McNamara is picking him to lick Catholic University's Leo Houck when the two teams clash February 22.

Cox, who has been down with the flu, is a doubtful starter when Columbus fights the Bulldogs tomorrow night, but Coach McNamara is hoping he'll have recovered enough strength to go the necessary three rounds. Charlie is still weak, however, and only boxed a couple of practice rounds yesterday.

In case the veteran isn't up to scratch, the Explorers will depend on Howard Graham, a rugged, though green rookie.

The complete starting line-up is as follows:

115 pounds—Charles Rohmer, a youngster who has never boxed before.

125 pounds—Louie Taub, a veteran.

145 pounds—Elmer Jacobson, another FBI worker, narrowly noses out Buddy Leone who has been handicapped with a cold.

155 pounds—Frank Cuddy, another newcomer.

165 pounds—Charlie Cox, if he recovers. If not, Howard Graham, a rookie.

Maryland Ring Team Engages U. of Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Jan. 30.—It will be a case of renewing old ties when the boxing teams of the Universities of Virginia and Maryland meet for the seventh time here Saturday night.

The Cavaliers and Old Liners started their fistic relationship in 1935 with a 4-to-4 tie, battled to another draw in 1939, and parted last year after still another equal division of points.

During the intervening years ties were barely averted by Virginia's two slender victories and Maryland's one close triumph in the series. The Cavaliers gained a 4½ to 3½ advantage in 1936 and won by a 5 to 3 count in 1938, while Maryland injected a 5 to 3 win in 1937.

Fresh from a week's layoff after conquests over South Carolina and the Coast Guard Academy in their two meets to date this season, the Old Liners are figured to apply most of the pressure when they return to competition Saturday. With a lineup of established veterans and impressive sophomores, Maryland trounced South Carolina, 6 to 2, and defeated the Coast Guardsmen, 4½ to 3½.

Virginia, crowding its first two meets into a four-day period last week, won from Virginia Tech, 5 to 3, and lost to North Carolina by the same score.

Although the Cavalier lineup of three veterans from last year and five newly installed regulars is subject to further revision, not more than one change is expected for the Maryland meet. Glenn Connelly, intramural champion of last year, is slated to replace Clarence Callahan in the 127-pound class.

The job of keeping up with the Old Liners will fall heavily on the experienced trio of Joe Block, 120-pounder, and Kenneth Rathbun, light heavyweight, who kept their undefeated dual meet records of last year intact against Tech and North Carolina foes, and Capt. Fenton Somerville, winner of one of his two bouts last week.

N. C. State Upsets Duke Five, 39-38

Durham, N. C., Jan. 30 (AP).—Sparked by Jim Mills and Roy Cromartie, who turned in 13 points apiece, a scrappy N. C. State College quintet tonight nosed out Duke University's Blue Devils 39 to 38.

The game, a rough and tumble affair in which 30 fouls were called, was practically deadlocked throughout. Each team led seven times while on six occasions the score was tied.

Loyola Cagers Beat University of Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—Led by their sharpshooting captain, George Wenskus, Loyola erased an early University of Chicago basketball lead tonight and went on to win, 47 to 27.

Chicago went out in front on long shots by Nelson and McMahon, but the Loyola defensive tightened as Wenskus went into action and Loyola never again was threatened.

Case Postponed of Dodger Fan Who Attacked Umpire

George Magerkurth Absent From Court, Hearing Is Postponed Until April 17

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Jan. 30.—A hearing in the case of Frank Gernano, 21-year-old over-enthusiastic Brooklyn Dodger fan, who is charged with assault because of the attack he allegedly made on George Magerkurth, National League umpire, on September 16, was postponed today in Flatbush Court until April 17, about the time the baseball season will open.

Today's postponement, granted because of Mr. Magerkurth's absence from court, followed one granted by Magistrate George H. Folwell, when Gernano appeared before him for arraignment on September 17. The first postponement was granted when a parole officer appeared with a warrant from New York State Vocational Institution, charging that Gernano's action constituted a parole violation.

Gernano was sent to the institution on a petty larceny charge and was later paroled until January 12, 1941. The action in Flatbush court was indefinitely postponed, and Gernano was sent back to the institute, whence he returned to Brooklyn on January 6 after serving four months. Gernano vented his wrath of Mr. Magerkurth last September when the Dodgers lost to the Reds after Mr. Magerkurth had reversed a decision made by Bill Stewart, another umpire, which favored the Brooklyn team.

Green Hornet Outrassles Lou Plummer

The Green Hornet, latest masked marvel of the mat, managed to maul Lou Plummer to the floor in 17 minutes of their feature wrestling match last night at Turner's Arena before 1,300 fans.

The Hornet gave his victim an uppercut with his right knee that floored him and then applied a body press that earned the referee's nod. It was a rough match all the way with Plummer trying to unmask the Hornet and the boys carried their differences out of the ring on one occasion.

Paul Boesch and Ivan Managoff battled to a draw in the semiwindup while Warren Bockwinkle used a leg lock for a decision over Chris Zaharias.

Fred Grobmier required only eight minutes to apply a winning No. 4 scissors on Ed Newman while the second draw of the evening was the first match between Dick Stahl and Joe DeVolteau.

Navy Boxers Open Season With Tarheels

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 30.—Navy boxers will open their season here Saturday, entertaining the strong University of North Carolina squad, winner a week ago over University of Virginia's ringmen, 5 to 3.

This is the midshipmen's twenty-second season in the ring sport, with the veteran Coach Spike Webb in charge during all that period, and Navy has dropped only 13 meets in that time.

Navy boxers ran up one record of 12 straight years without defeat in dual boxing meets, winning over the best college teams from all parts of the Nation and Canada.

Webb's teams have taken part in more than 100 meets in 22 years.

February 8, University of Virginia, here.

February 15, University of Syracuse, here.

February 22, Cornell University, at Ithaca, N. Y.

Maeda Captures Ft. Lauderdale Purse at Hialeah Course

Meade Rides Winner in Good Style

Haltal Is Second, Topee Third in 1⅛-Mile Race; 9,598 Fans Present

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 30.—Maeda, from the Maemere Farm of Mrs. DeWitt Page, led five rivals for the entire mile and a furlong of the featured Fort Lauderdale Purse here this afternoon. Paying 3 to 1, the 5-year-old son of Pennant received one of Don Meade's best rides and completed the journey a length and a half in the clear. He was clocked in 1:49 4-5.

Haltal, with two victories in easier company behind him, was a tired second, a half length better than Tallyho Stable's Topee. Plowshare, Burning Stick and Mythical King brought up the rear. The event was witnessed by a crowd of 9,598.

Of the six starters, two were named for the rich Widener Cup—Haltal and Burning Stick. Maemere Farm has no candidate for the winter classic.

Maeda, whom some consider a better horse on a muddy track, outran his opposition in decisive fashion. Meade sent the bearer of the black and white silks into a daylight advantage and nursed his mount along all the way. Topee sampled the early pace, then allowed Haltal, which was favorite, to become the runner-up. Haltal simply was not good enough for the winner.

HIS SHADOW, going in close pursuit of the leader from the start, drew away gamely in the final furlong. METHODICAL, a trifle slow to settle into his stride, finished with good courage and disposed of FATE. The latter, quickest to begin, bore out after the start, yet displayed the most speed. GUMMED UP was bothered by DARBY DAGUE in the first quarter mile and closed stoutly when clear.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:34½. Winner, M. Wexler's br. g. BOREDOM began fast, opened up a commanding lead rounding the turn and was never menaced. BROOKLANDVILLE gradually bettered his position while saving much ground and outlasted the others. WISE HOBBY responded gamely to punishment to close stoutly. BATTLE STAR raced evenly the entire trip.

Daily Double, HIS SHADOW and BOREDOM, Paid $44.80

THE RHYMER broke alertly, set a swift pace while being rated in front and won with something to spare. FETTACAIRN, a keen factor all the way, continued with good courage in the final drive, but was no match for the winner. COFFEEMAN, vigorously ridden throughout, disposed of BAD COLD through the stretch. The latter displayed good speed and the race should benefit him.

FOURTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:33. Off 3:34. WHITE HOT, reserved off the pace to the stretch turn, where he slipped through on the inside and took command to win mildly urged. FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf). Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 3-year-olds. The Granada. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:03. Off 4:03½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLIVAR, $6.10, $3.30, $3.00; CAVALIER, $3.60, $3.00; MILL TOWER, $10.30.

BOLIVAR, saving ground around the first turn, assumed command when ready going down the backstretch to win in hand. CAVALIER made a bold bid when straightened into the stretch, but faltered and just lasted long enough to stave off MILL TOWER'S bid. The latter was going strong at the finish. BLUE CASTLE suffered from early interference.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Fort Lauderdale. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off at once. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEDA, $12.10, $4.60, $3.30; HALTAL, $3.70, $2.70; TOPEE, $2.90.

MAEDA, running in his best form, held the field safe for speed and rated in front, continued courageously when it came to a drive to maintain his lead to the end. HALTAL, pocketed early, attempted to come to the outside entering the stretch, but then was taken to the rail, where he responded gamely when clear to outlast TOPEE. The latter, going forwardly on the outside, hung slightly when the real test came. BURNING STICK finished with a belated rush.

SEVENTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:03. Off 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY FRANC, $22.30, $11.00, $7.80; STAR CHANCE, $6.30, $4.90; FAIRPLAX, $7.80.

LIBERTY FRANC, displaying high speed, opened up a good lead while saving ground in the early running, but was ridden out in the last furlong to maintain his lead. STAR CHANCE gained steadily and squeezing through between the field through the stretch disposed of FAIRPLAX. The latter, showing marked improvement, made a game bid entering the stretch, but hung in the final drive. DRUDGERY weakened in the final eighth.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:34. Off 5:35. Winner, F. C. Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

If they would let the outrider and his pony get in one of these 2-year-old races here I'd be forced to buy a $2 ticket on the pair. Yesterday a juvenile named Chop Sticks unseated his rider and began streaking down the stretch. The outrider started after the runaway colt and what's more he caught and captured him after an eighth of a mile. The colt was running hard at the time. John C. Clark, president of the track, entertained the scribes and their wives at lunch today. The majority of the fellows were having breakfast, using cocktails for orange juice and shrimp salad for boiled eggs. Several probable Bahamas starters for Saturday's $5,000 added Bahamas Handicap were on the track at Hialeah yesterday. F. J. Buchanan's Zacatine, winner of the $5,000 added Hialeah Stakes, January 11, worked the Bahamas distance, 7 furlongs, in 1:28 2-5. Circle M Ranch's Battle Colors and Blue Twink became almost certain starters in the Bahamas as they breezed a very fast half mile in :46 2-5. Mrs. Ella K. Bryson's two nominees, Magic Stream and Cis Marion, traveled together a slow half mile in :50 2-5. Shady Brook Farm's Agricole worked 5 furlongs in 1:00 1-5 and Cadmium, also a Bahamas candidate from the same stable, went a half in :49. Winston Guest's Yankee Party became a possible starter with a useful 6-furlong move in 1:13 4-5. Wheatley Stable's Irish Day was sent an easy 7 furlongs in the following fractions, :50 2-5, 1:17 1-5 and 1:31. Coldstream Stable's Curious Coin, which scored an easy four-length victory here on Monday in the Bay Breeze Purse, was sent a slow mile. John Greener's Clarksville prepped for the Bahamas with a half-mile move in :48 2-5 on Wednesday. Joseph Farrell, genial Mr. Big, of the Bowie track, arrived for a visit and he says plans are moving right ahead for the April meeting at the Prince Georges track. Lest we forget, only eight weeks now until Bowie opens. Then I will see you on the rail. BILL.

First race—STARWEISTA won two races over this course and had trouble in the last. Appears capable of carrying top weight of 118 pounds to victory in this company. ALL HEELS raced kindly last out and is dangerous. WARLEE for the show end.

Second race—KLEIG LIGHT turned in a good race last out and is deserving of the top ranking in this field. Eddie Arcaro will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. OPEN DOOR carries a load of 122 pounds but has class enough to be dangerous. ROCK MAKER for the show end.

Third race—SAY JUDGE could be the right one in this rather open affair. Has turned in good trials and is fit. YANTIS must carry 120 pounds but is likely to be a threat. GOURMET'S most recent race was a good one.

Fourth race—LLANERO, looms as a strong factor in this field. Races have been good and this route seems to suit his purposes. GENERAL PLANET showed speed last out and probably needed that effort. PAJAS is a possibility due to the feather assignment.

Fifth race—CLARKSVILLE should win a race of this kind. When he won he had blinkers on but he lost when they were taken off for his next start. Probably needs the blinkers. CAPE COD won here and is a threat. UNQUOTE should take part of the pay.

Sixth race—SAILOR KING gets my call in this distance event. Appears well placed and the top weight assignment should not hinder his chances. MOJA is tossed in with 100 pounds and is dangerous. ROYAL ROBES for the show end.

Seventh race—STAIRS has had plenty of trouble of late. With good racing luck, this one may take it all. WAYRIEL is honest as they come and will be in the thick of contention. STABLE for the minor money.

Eighth race—QUAROMA could be the right one in this affair. Was given a fair backing last out and probably is better than generally rated. HISTRIONIC won his last but carries a burden. MIGHTILY for the show award.

Best bet—Sailor King.

New York, Jan. 30.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation largest producer of ships under the national defense program and the country's second largest maker of steel reported today new records in nearly all divisions of its business as a result of the country's arms drive.

Some of the new marks set included:

1. Orders on hand at the end of 1940 were $1,204,100,000, compared with $287,002,024 a year earlier. Of the latest total $1,036,100,000 was for ship construction and repair, leaving $168,000,000 for all other orders—defense, civilian and export.

Nets $14.04 a Share

2. Profits for 1940 were $48,677,324, or $14.04 a common share, compared with $24,638,384, equal to $5.75 a share in 1939; for the fourth quarter they were $14,516,779, equal to $4.32 a share, compared with $13,028,928, or $3.74 a share in the final quarter of 1939. Both these were the highest totals for the comparable periods in the history of the company.

3. Employment in 1940 averaged 118,439 persons and reached a high of 131,785 men at the end of December, both new top in the history of the company.

4. Payrolls last year were $212,283,000, compared with $158,480,000 in 1939.

5. Average earnings per hour were 98.6 cents, which exceeded the previous top made in the third quarter of last year of 93.2 cents.

Ample Steel Facilities

Eugene G. Grace, president, expressed confidence that the steel capacity of the country at present was three to four times greater than likely needs for national defense and exports to England. He refused direct comment to a recent statement of Philip Murray, president of the S. W. O. C. (C. I. O.), that Bethlehem as a corporation was "a bottleneck in itself."

However, he analyzed Bethlehem's unfilled orders saying that the 1,229,000 tons of steel on the books compared with 1,670,000 tons a year ago and that the corporation was operating at 100 per cent of capacity whereas a year ago operations were at 70 per cent.

Grace said the "entire order book (except shipbuilding business) could be cleaned up in three months time. The neck of the bottle is a good deal bigger than the bottle."

$1.50 Dividend Voted

Of the general ability of the steel industry to meet defense needs Grace said the largest figure he had seen mentioned for the arms programs of this country and Britain was 20,000,000 tons annually whereas the productive capacity of the country was about 84,000,000 annually and still growing. He said "the steel industry has always kept ahead of demands in capacity. Capacity has increased 20 per cent in the last 10 years. This year it will increase further. If our regular customers' needs increase coincident with an increase in national prosperity our capacity will be boosted accordingly."

Directors declared a dividend on the common of $1.50 a share, payable March 4 to stock of record Feb. 11. A similar amount was paid in December prior to which payments of $1.25 each were made in June and September and $1 last March.

Multiple Trade Hearing Ends; Briefs Waited

By the Associated Press

Testimony was completed yesterday before a trial examiner on the Securities and Exchange Commission's request that the New York Stock Exchange reverse its rule prohibiting members from acting as odd-lot dealers or specialists upon any exchange outside New York City when the securities involved are listed on the New York Exchange.

The trial examiner, Henry Fitts, took the case under advisement after hearing final testimony from three Boston brokers—Walter T. Brown, Malcolm Amsden and Ray E. Southgate, all dealers in odd lots. They told the examiner that they had insufficient capital to continue business without the financing provided through their arrangement with New York Stock Exchange members. Brown and Amsden have such arrangements with E. H. Bright & Co., of New York, while Southgate has a joint trading account for odd lots with H. C. Wainwright & Co., of New York, it was testified.

After the trial examiner files his report, briefs will be received by the SEC and the New York Stock Exchange, and later arguments will be heard by the full commission. A final decision may be reached in a few weeks.

The commission last month formally requested the exchange to alter its rules. Shortly thereafter the exchange advised the commission that the request would not be complied with.

The stock exchange rule contains a provision empowering the board of governors to suspend or expel any member or allied member of the exchange "who is connected, either through a partner or otherwise, with another exchange or similar organization in the City of New York which permits dealings in any securities dealt in on the exchange, or deals directly or indirectly upon such other exchange or organization, or deals publicly outside the exchange in securities dealt in on the exchange."

Cities Service Files With SEC As Holding Firm

By The Associated Press

The $400,000,000 Cities Service Co. system registered with the Securities Commission yesterday under the Public Utility Holding Company Act—the last giant system to comply.

The SEC denied December 23 the company's application for exemption from the act because of its tremendous interest in the petroleum industry. Since that time the commission has adopted a special rule exempting in part Cities Service Co.'s petroleum, natural gas and real estate subsidiaries but retaining some jurisdiction.

The company has been given notice by the SEC, however, that eventually it must divide into two independent groups, one comprising utility properties and the other nonutility properties.

At the same time two subsidiaries, Dominion Natural Gas Co., Ltd., and Consolidated Cities Light, Power & Traction Co., filed applications for exemption as foreign subsidiaries.

Industrial Stocks Lead Downward Slide; Hitler Speech Counteracts Business News

New York, Jan. 30.—The decline broadened in the stock market today after a feeble early attempt at a rally failed of support.

Steels, rails, motors and a wide assortment of specialties, up fractionally for a brief interval, started to slide around midday and, at the close, losses ran to well over a point for leading industrials.

Whether the principal blame for the further relapse in prices could be laid on the Hitler speech or on apprehension over mounting taxes and fears the United States was approaching active participation in the European war was a matter of argument in boardrooms.

At any rate, the trend turned definitely downward when the Fuehrer got into his stride in again predicting German victory and the downfall of Britain and the democracies. Good business news and other optimistic indicators seemingly were ignored.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .8 of a point at 42, duplicating its fall of yesterday. At the latest figure it was at a new low mark since August 20, last. Since January 20 the composite has shown gains in only two sessions and these were negligible. Some of the forenoon bidding was attributed to the belief the lengthy set-back had put the list in a much healthier technical condition.

Transfers of 775,770 shares were the largest since January 9. Yesterday's volume was 599,690.

Among the day's constructive items was the freight loadings report for last week disclosing a contra-seasonal increase to the best total for any like week since 1931.

Steels weakened although Bethlehem, after the close, announced 1940 earnings of $14.04 a common share, biggest in the company's history, against $5.75 in 1939. In the fourth quarter $4.32 was earned versus $3.74 in the 1939 period. Directors voted a dividend of $1.50 a share, same as paid in December. The stock finished off 1 point and U. S. Steel was down 1⅞.

Other losers included Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, United Aircraft, American Can, duPont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Standard Oil of N. J., U. S. Gypsum, Anaconda, Kennecott, N. Y. Central, American Telephone and Western Union. Most rails and utilities held declines to fractions.

Aluminum of America tumbled 5 points in the Curb. This corporation with others was indicted today by a Federal grand jury for allegedly violating antitrust laws. Lesser casualties were American Gas, Bell Aircraft, Creole Petroleum, Jones & Laughlin, Master Electric and Scullin Steel. Todd Shipyards was down 6 points on a small turnover. Dealings in the junior market were around 163,000 shares, compared with 127,000 Wednesday.

Rail loans gave up more of their large January gains in a bond market selling movement. The Associated Press carrier average declined .8 of a point, duplicating the previous day's losses. Until yesterday the rails had encountered little resistance in a notable climb.

Losses running to a point or more at the close affected Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 51⅝, Illinois Central 4¾s at 41, International Telephone 4½s at 36, Southern Railway 4s at 61¼, Southern Pacific 4½s of '68 at 45⅞, New York Central 5s at 66 and Nickel Plate 4½s at 59.

Some U. S. Governments were soft but turnover was small. A few treasuries closed down 8/32ds to 15/32ds of a point.

Virginia Halts D. C. Group From Stock Selling

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—The State corporation commission has entered an order restraining Fuse Indictator Corporation, a Delaware-chartered concern; William C. Linton, of Washington, listed as president of the corporation, and a group of five other individuals from selling securities of the corporation in Virginia.

Those named in the order besides the corporation and Linton were Grover C. Long, J. J. Ford, Alice M. Yarbrough, Edward C. Wootton and R. M. Cannon. Corporation commission officials said all were residents of Washington or vicinity.

An order of January 15, instituting the proceeding, charged that the respondents acted in violation of the Virginia securities law in that they offered stock of the corporation for sale to a Richmond stenographer without obtaining authorization from the corporation commission, and in that a material portion of the assets of the corporation were in the nature of patents or trade marks.

Gross Increasing, New Haven R. R. Plans Expansion

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 30 (AP).—New Haven Railroad trustees, anticipating a gross income of $90,000,000 in 1941 because of the national defense program, disclosed today plans for expansion and improvements. They include the purchase of five new electric locomotives and ten additional Diesel switching locomotives.

Consideration was also being given toward buying 1,000 box cars, 25 cabooses and 5 grill cars, reported Trustees Howard S. Palmer, James L. Loomis and Henry B. Sawyer.

Other improvements planned, they said in their estimation of income, expenses and capital expenditures for the current year, include installation of 23,400 tons of rail, rebuilding a number of bridges and new freight facilities at Boston.

"Increased industrial activity because of the national defense program," is cited by the trustees as the principal reason for the anticipated $90,000,000 gross income, which would be an increase of 5.1 per cent over 1940's $85,604,109.

Late Selling Drops Wheat For 7th Day

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 30.—A late splurge of selling today influenced by heaviness in New York securities, pulled wheat prices down for the seventh consecutive trading session.

The decline set in after a transient rally had encouraged belief the setbacks were ended for a time. Initial dealings were weaker, but purchases by millers and some covering by short sellers soon stemmed the losses. The rally, however, only brought prices to slightly above Wednesday's final quotations and the market hung there. The pits were inactive for long periods.

Wheat closed fractionally above the day's low levels, but ¼ to ⅞ below yesterday's finish; May, 82⅜-82½; July, 73⅜-76½. Corn, ¼ to ¾ down; May, 61⅜-61½; July, 61¾-62⅛. Oats, unchanged to ¼ off.

Hitler's speech had no apparent market effect, adding only to the uncertainties of the prevailing international situation.

Seasonal temperatures prevailed over domestic winter wheat territory and the Southwestern portion received moderate precipitation overnight. A Kansas report said snow covered the crop in most parts of the State. Warm, dry, sunny weather was said needed for early spring crops since not much fall plowing was done last year, leaving a considerable acreage to be worked this spring.

Pipe Line Issue Put on Market

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—A public offering of $12,000,000 Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co., first mortgage 3 per cent bonds, due 1960, was made today by a syndicate headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at a price of 102.

Proceeds, together with funds derived from the private sale of $6,250,000 series "A" bonds and $5,000,000 of serial notes, were to be applied to the redemption of the outstanding $22,500,000 first mortgage and first lien 4 per cent bonds.

N. Y. Central to Offer $10,900,000 Issue

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The first large offering of the year of equipment trust certificates will take place next Tuesday when the New York Central Railroad is expected to award an issue of $10,900,000 maturing serially in ten months.

Proceeds will be used to pay for a variety of rolling stock recently ordered.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Fair business was transacted in print cloths and related items, and especially in broadcloths. Purchases were attributed for the purpose of replenishing stocks depleted through Government commitments.

Most woolen piece goods mills were reported well sold up to March and April deliveries, with buyers acquiring some of their needs from jobbers.

Rayon plain loom print fabrics were quiet, while sheers sold in good volume. Silk piece goods were neglected.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—Stock market trading was listless throughout and dullness characterized most groups at the close. The gilt-edged list remained steady, but leading industrials generally were a few pence lower.

Home rails declined fractions on provincial offerings. Oil shares lacked support. Mining markets were without feature.

Persistent invasion talk, coupled with news of the death of Premier Metaxas of Greece, had a depressing influence.

Among foreign bonds the only alteration was a downtrend in Japanese issues.

Your Federal Income Tax

(Prepared by Bureau of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department.)

When to report income from salaries, wages, and other sources.

Salaried persons and wage earners whose income is derived from personal services form the largest number of Federal income taxpayers. This year this army of taxpayers will be greatly increased. Those who paid an income tax for 1939 have gotten the forms for the 1940 income tax return through the mails. In order that none may escape filing the return, employers are required to report on Form 1099, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096, the names of all their employees to whom, if single, they made payments of $800 or more in 1940; and if married, $2,000 or more. If the marital status of the employe is unknown, he must be reported as single.

These returns should be filed on or before February 15, 1941, with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Returns Distribution Section, Washington, D. C.

The law contemplates that every individual, if single, or if married but not living with spouse, whose gross income for 1940 was $800 or more, must file an income tax return. Excuses for not doing so do not relieve the delinquent from responsibility for the delinquency.

Neither the President of the United States, nor the Vice President, nor Federal Judges, nor members of Congress, are exempt from filing returns.

All types of compensation, unless specifically excluded by statute, should be incorporated in the gross income return of the taxpayer. A minister of the Gospel, for instance, must report all fees he receives—for funerals, for masses, for baptisms, for marriages, and for other like services. In addition to salaries, wages, fees, and commissions, all bonuses, tips, prize, awards, retiring allowances for past services, honorariums, and other forms of compensation are rated as part of one's income. If a person is paid in whole or in part for his services by anything other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken must be reported as income.

Compensation credited to the account of or set apart for a taxpayer, without any substantial limitation or restriction, and which may be drawn upon by him at any time, is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. If the services were rendered during the year 1939, or even prior thereto, but the compensation was not received, or made unqualifiedly subject to demand by the taxpayer until 1940, the entire amount is taxable in 1940, when the taxpayer is reporting on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, which is the basis used by most individuals in reporting net income.

Banks' Excess Reserves Drop $60,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks declined $60,000,000 to $6,800,000,000 in the week ended January 29.

The decrease was attributed to several technical factors, including a $7,000,000 increase in money in circulation.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended January 29 member bank reserve balances decreased $63,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $7,000,000 in money in circulation, $4,000,000 in Treasury cash, and $49,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $28,000,000 in Reserve bank credit, offset in part by increases of $21,000,000 in gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, and a decrease of $3,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Excess reserves of member banks on January 29 were estimated to be approximately $6,500,000,000, a decrease of $60,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended January 29, 1941, were reported as follows:

Big Board Head Expected to Get Army Call Soon

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—William McChesney Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, may soon have to give up his $48,000-a-year job for a one-year hitch in the Army.

The 34-year-old unmarried Wall Streeter holds order No. 641 in his local draft board. Questionnaires preliminary to Army call have been sent to the first 600 men on the list, and Martin will get one when the next batch goes out within the next week or two.

Some time after that he'll be summoned for a medical examination and then, if he passes, induction.

Boston Wool

Boston, Jan. 30 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—The contracting for wool in several of the Western States was receiving a great deal of attention in the Boston wool market today. Prices reported to have been paid by growers have ranged as high as 35@36 cents in Montana, 35 cents in Texas and 31@33 cents in some of the other States. These prices were higher than those reported on early contracts two to three weeks ago. It has been reported in the trade that only a few of the early contracts were turned

Capitol Sees Work of Indian Cooperative

The zeal of Sister Providencia of the Sacred Heart Mission in Desmet, Idaho, to help Indian craftsmen to gain attention for their work, may introduce the Indian influence somewhat into Eashions.

Sister Providencia, who is the daughter of Representative J. H. Tolan (Democrat), of California, and who has worked four years among the tribes, exhibited samples of the handicrafts yesterday at the Capitol and possibly 1,000 persons attended.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, purchasing a buckskin handbag.

Essentially, the Indians of Idaho, Washington, Wyoming and Oregon, under Sister Providencia's guidance, maintain a cooperative enterprise, in which the Indians receive 80 per cent of the proceeds while 20 per cent goes for general expenses. It is not a Government school or private project and the Indians, Sister Providencia said, are enthusiastic. The cooperating tribes are the Coeur d'Aline, Kootenai, Yakima, Spokane, Kalispel, Nez Perce, Colville, Flathead and Arapahoe.

Friends of Sister Providencia expressed belief that her activities will bring to the Northwestern Indians some of the wide attention given those now in the Southwestern United States.

Vichy Cooperation With Berlin Near Complete Collapse

Vichy, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Franco-German collaboration appeared near complete collapse tonight after the Paris press launched a violent attack upon the Vichy regime and asserted that, without the return of former Vice Premier Pierre Laval to the government, Germany and France no longer can work together.

Paris newspapers almost unanimously demanded retirement of Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin, as well as most of the other members of the Vichy cabinet, except for the heads of the French armed forces.

At the same time it appeared that Fernand de Brinon, French delegate at Paris, is not coming to Vichy now or in the immediate future and that there is no immediate hope of a break in the Franco-German impasse which has existed since Laval was ousted from the government by Marshal Henri Philippe Petain.

Richards Rites Set for Today

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. for William Henry Richards, 85, former member of Howard University faculty, at the McGuire Funeral Home. Mr. Richards died Monday in Freedmen's Hospital.

A graduate of Howard University law school, he was a Government employe for several years and subsequently a public school teacher before joining the university faculty.

D. C. Suffrage, Reorganization Bill Offered

A combination suffrage-reorganization bill to scrap the present commission form of government was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, a member of the House District Committee.

The measure provides for the creation of an elective assembly, which would in turn elect a city manager. The assembly would have municipal powers "concurrent with the Congress," and would operate under a charter granted to the District.

D'Alesandro, in a statement, said his bill was modeled "somewhat along the lines of similar legislation introduced last year" by former Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland.

He said that his bill provides "for what might be called a Federal vote, in the sense that everyone who has lived in the District for one year or more is entitled to participate in those purely municipal elections.

"My bill permits Federal employes to participate fully in the municipal political life of the District. It would be tragic to exclude one of the best collections of 120,000 people."

Members of the municipal assembly would be chosen on the basis of proportional representation.

"This bill is merely my suggestion. I am not wedded to any of its individual propositions, though I am devoted to the idea as a whole.

"I am introducing this measure at this time with the full and sincere belief that the District of Columbia should have suffrage now. I shall endeavor to the best of my ability to secure cooperation of House members so as to get action as soon as possible."

Woman Discovers Dark Continent Isn't So Dark

The dark continent of Africa, whose terrors glorified the explorations of Stanley and other daring travelers, has been conquered and its awful reputation ruined, for a woman has crossed the length and breadth of the continent, alone.

Three years ago Mrs. A. Hamilton Singer left Capetown at the southern end of the continent intent upon seeing Africa. Alone, she cut new roads for herself in desert and jungle and finally emerged last year in Morocco driving her third automobile.

Mrs. Singer took color motion pictures on this solo flight—and she was often in actual flight—which will be shown to members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall, tonight (Friday, January 31), including sequences of big game of Kenya and Tanganyika, Ituri pygmies, big-lipped Ubangi women and Mount Nyamlagira in eruption.

COCKTAIL PARTY GIVEN BY THE WINKLES TO PROMOTE THE NEW NAME OF "WINNIE AND WILL WINKLE" IN HOLLYWOOD IS NOW IN FULL SWING!
I HEAR THEY STARTED SHOOTING A NEW PICTURE OUT AT PARAMOUNT!
YES, THEY OUGHT TO SHOOT SOME OF THE ACTORS INSTEAD OF THE PICTURE, IF YOU ASK ME!

YES, THE MOVIES ARE PROGRESSING! FIRST, THEY HAD THE SILENTS! THEN, THE TALKIES! NOW, AFTER LAST NIGHT'S PICTURE, YOU CAN SMELL 'EM!
THAT PICTURE YOU PLAYED A BIT IN - DOES IT HAVE AN UNHAPPY ENDING?
IT MAY HAVE AFTER IT OPENS!
SAY, YOU SAW THE NEW PICTURE - "THE SNAKE" HOW DID YOU LIKE IT?

"Dear Mom"—that's the beginning—and "respectfully, your loving son, Homer"—that's the ending of each episode of the humorous new dramatic series to be based on life at an Army camp which begins over WJSV and the Columbia Broadcasting System this Sunday. It will be heard from 6:55 to 7:15 p. m. every week.

The dramatizations concern the adventures at the fictitious "Camp Nash" of two worthy draftees, "Homer Stubbs" and "Red," and appropriately the series is to be titled "Dear Mom."

"Dear Mom" will originate in the studios of WBBM, C. B. S.'s station in Chicago. "Homer Stubbs" is to be played by John Walsh, a well-known Chicago radio actor; "Red" is to be enacted by Dolph Nelson, and Marvin Mueller is to do the role of a hard-boiled sergeant, sergeants always having to be hard-boiled, it seems.

The first episode is to deal with Homer's train journey to camp, during which he picks out Red as his particular pal and confidante. The succeeding installments, based on their experiences at camp, will be dramatized from Homer's letters home to "Dear Mom."

The reason that the series starts at the odd time of 6:55 can be explained by the fact that it's sponsored by the same company which brings you the preceding program, "Gene Autry and His Melody Ranch," which you've been hearing from 6:30 to 7 up to now.

Contract Bridge

The most famous of all distributional freaks in the oft-discussed Duke of Cumberland's hand.

It was played at whist, and the duke was reputed to have lost £120,000 on a wager that he could not win a single trick with clubs as trumps and this holding:

♠ A K Q
♡ A K Q J
♣ K J 9

The player to his left, held:

♠ None
♡ None
◇ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2
♣ A Q 10 8

The opponent on the right held no diamonds and the remaining clubs. With a diamond opening it is easy to see what happens to South, and if you translate the hand into contract bridge and make West, the left-hand player, the declarer at a contract of seven clubs, it is not hard to understand how chagrined South would be at his failure to win a single trick.

Defense Efforts All Out—Out in Street—Moving

$1-a-Year Bigwigs Used to the Plush Lucky to Find a Chair

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

The Nation's defense efforts were "all out" yesterday—all out in the street, that is.

Government bigwigs and $1-a-year chieftains of industry, defenseless against a blitzkrieg of moving vans and telephone men, struggled with a personal harvest of bottlenecks, capacity shortages, choke points and labor troubles compared to which the country's economic problems were simplicity itself.

The critical personnel dislocation—a new chapter in the history of migratory labor problems—arose when a large part of the Office of Production Management shifted from quarters in half a dozen Federal buildings to an unfinished structure at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, on which the Social Security Board, in misguided optimism, once had designs.

According to construction men on the job, the building was 98 per cent complete—just about as serviceable as an airplane or an adding machine 98 per cent complete.

Serious Bottlenecks

Aside from general confusion and chaos, the worst problem was what the industry boys call "assembly plant malintegration," which means that there were more offices in some places than desks, and more desks in other places than offices.

Serious bottlenecks were in the transportation system. The escalators weren't running and although there was almost a plethora of elevators, the vocational training branch appeared to have made a serious slip in failing to supply pilots.

The drinking fountain production was literally only a trickle. The shortage of parts reached its lowest and most threatening ebb in the field of radiator handles. All radiators were on and there appeared to be no successful method for shutting them off. After a meeting of liaison officers of the Bomb Fuse Committee, the Division of State and Local Cooperation and two brass polishers mistaken for the Machine Tool Division, it was recommended that the problem be met by using the Ersatz method of opening the windows.

Failure of certain lights to operate was an unsolved problem as the day ended, owing to a jurisdictional dispute. Contractor's electricians had neglected to connect the wires, but Government electricians declined to do anything about it because the building had not yet legally been placed in possession of the Federal Government.

A shortage in key "articles" such as secretaries, rugs and desk nameplates necessitated speedy imposition of priorities and a rigid export control license.

Worst sufferers were the chairmen of the boards of several of the country's greatest industrial enterprises. One found himself in an office of which the only article of furniture was a chair. Another, used to a barricade of three reception offices in tandem, found himself exposed to rude public gaze in an outer office. The crowning insult was that no door had been hung to the corridor entrance.

Reports from informed sources in Berne, Switzerland, reported that there was rejoicing in Berlin.

Purchasing Power Hits All-Time High

By the Associated Press

Reporting that income payments to individuals totaled $74,000,000,000 last year, Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones said yesterday that Americans had more purchasing power in 1940 than ever before.

He said that while the estimated cash income of Americans was 10 per cent below 1929, prices also were lower, so that the 1940 income could buy as much as or more than the 1929 income.

On a dollar basis, the income of Americans last year was higher than any year other than 1929.

Jones noted, moreover, that due to the defense program, income payments were rising rapidly at the end of 1940. As the Nation went into 1941, he said, wages and other income were being paid out at a rate equivalent to $78,000,000,000 per year.

"As a result," he added, "labor's share in aggregate consumer income during the closing months of 1940 was the highest for many years."

Wages and salaries accounted for $47,000,000,000 of the 1940 total, compared with $44,400,000,000 in 1939. This gain was more than the average 6 per cent of 1940 over 1939.

Income payment to individuals differs slightly from national income. It includes some items, such as relief payments, which are not counted in national income. On the other hand, national income includes additions to business surpluses which are not included in income payments to individual.

Produce Dealer Robbed of $500

Police last night sought two young men in connection with the $500 armed holdup yesterday morning of James Callas, 45, of 413 Third Street Northwest, a commission merchant.

Callas reported he was approached by the two men as he left his home for the Northeast Market. He said he turned over the money, $300 in bills and the rest in checks, when one asked, "Remember what happened to your brother?"

The victim told police that eight years ago his brother, Thomas Callas, resisted a holdup attempt by two men who fired a bullet through his hat.

In his annual report to the board, Aspinwall pointed out that the institution incurred a $37,953 deficit last year, which he attributed largely to expansion and improvement of nursing care. There was no decline in the number of private room, pay patients.

Ex-Missionary Gets Md. Pardon

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 30 (AP).—An ex-missionary, sentenced in 1925 to serve a year and a half in prison for receiving stolen goods in Montgomery County, was pardoned today by Gov. O'Conor to take up his missionary work again.

He was Wilford Tarr, born in South Africa and a former student at Washington Missionary College. Tarr was paroled by former Gov. Ritchie in December, 1925, and went to Berrien Springs, Mich., under supervision of a missionary college professor.

Dr. Stone Dies; Lincoln Road Church Pastor

Dr. Richard H. Stone, 57, pastor of Lincoln Road Methodist Church, Lincoln Road and U Street Northeast, died Wednesday at Sibley Hospital after a long illness.

Dr. Stone came to the Lincoln Road church in 1936 after 13 years' service in a Baltimore pulpit of the Baltimore Conference. He served from 1909 to 1922 as a member of the North Montana Conference of the Methodist Church.
